Violence Averted By Agreement In Oil Controversy

Many Workers Refuse To Adjourn After Compromise Is Reached

WARM SPEECHES MADE

State Agrees To Rebate Tax On All Louisiana Product Refined

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Violence threatened by workers of the Standard Oil company of Louisiana was averted tonight by a compromise, which Senator Huey P. Long said had been reached between the oil officials and the administration over the proposed five cents per barrel tax on oil refined in Louisiana.

A mass meeting of workers assembled from all parts of the state in Baton Rouge was held at bay for an hour and a half by the announcement that a satisfactory compromise had been reached and only needed approval from the general offices of the oil company in New York.

The committee of workers who called the meeting sought to adjourn it after Senator Long had announced that the New York office had accepted the terms, but many of the workers refused to adjourn.

Under the chairmanship of Ernest Bourgeois, an oil worker, the "Square Deal association" was formed and another meeting set for 7:30 tomorrow night at Baton Rouge.

The dissenting members of the mass meeting, numbering about one-half of the original assemblage, expressed dissatisfaction at acceptance of Senator Long's word of the compromise and declared they wished official confirmation before withdrawing from the fight.

However, no official of the Standard Oil company either in New York or Louisiana would issue any statement on the subject tonight.

Under the compromise terms, Senator Long said, the state administration agreed to rebate the tax on all Louisiana oil refined and that the oil company agreed to use 80 per cent of Louisiana oil at the refinery and only 20 per cent of foreign oil.

Senator Long expressed great satisfaction over the agreement and said he had taken J. C. Hilton, president of the Standard Oil company of Louisiana, to dinner to celebrate the settlement. He said the 1,000 employes who had been discharged by the Standard Oil company in their proposed retrenchment program would be reinstated and that "everybody was happy."

The compromise, Senator Long said, was first reached between Mr. Hilton and himself in New Orleans and late tonight had been ratified by the general headquarters of the oil company in New York.

A few of the oil workers shouted for violence in Baton Rouge, one worker calling for volunteers to follow him to the statehouse to demand a special session to revoke the tax. But the cooler heads quickly squelched them and the meeting adjourned without disorder.

As the meeting was adjourning, Senator Long boarded a train for Washington where he plans to take the floor of the senate early next week and explain his Louisiana activities and as he said "answer certain questions regarding the administration."

NEW GROUP TAKES OVER MEETING

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 5.—(AP)—A new group of oil workers, dissatisfied with Senator Huey P. Long's announcement of an oil tax "compromise" tonight took a protest meeting away from the committee that originally called it, and demanded "action" after the first committee declared the meeting "adjourned."

"Are we going to get sa[illegible]tion or are we going to let things go?" demanded Ernest Bourgeois, Baton Rouge Standard Oil refinery worker, leaping on the meeting rostrum after angry speeches had followed a quick "adjournment" announcement by the employes committee that indicated

MUSSOLINI, LAVAL PLEDGE FRIENDSHIP

ROME, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Benito Mussolini and Pierre Laval, representatives of two of Europe's most powerful nations, tonight publicly pledged them to friendship and active collaboration in the cause of peace.

"The peace of Europe remains precarious," France's foreign minister said at the brilliant banquet Il Duce gave for him in the Venezia palace, "and requires the attentive care of statesmen."

The continent's peoples, Laval said, "are not willing to wait any longer" for peace.

In stirring speeches, Mussolini and his French guest foreshadowed the signing of Italo-French accords designed to guarantee Austria's independence, fortify the structure of peace and wipe out long standing differences between the two nations.

"We have given rise to great hopes," Laval said. "We will not deceive them. Peace must be maintained and consolidated."

The President Tells You If Over-Privileged, Worry No More Charity Lindbergh Knows Voice

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1934, by King Features Syndicate Inc., International Copyright and all other rights reserved.)

TODAY'S NEWS is the president's message, delivered, in person, to members of the senate and house of representatives.

That is ONE message that will be read with close attention by every intelligent American.

If you happen to be "privileged," to use the president's expression, the message may worry you; for in it the president complains of "old inequalities," regrets that "We have not weeded out the over-privileged, and have not effectively lifted up the under-privileged."

LOOK OUT if you are "over-privileged."

But, if you are merely a man that has worked, made some money and still have it, which sounds improbable, there is no worry, for the pres-

PRISONER ADMITS TWO BURGLARIES IN WEST MONROE

Bernard Haywood Is Returned Here After Being Shot In Arkansas

Arrested at Marion, Ark., last Sunday, after being shot in the hip by the arresting officer, a man who first gave his name as Jack Wolf, and who was returned here for an investigation of a series of burglaries in West Monroe on the night of Friday, December 28, has made a full confession of having perpetrated two of the robberies, Sheriff Milton Coverdale said yesterday afternoon.

The confessed burglar, who left here for Arkansas in a stolen car, owned by Willis Montgomery, of Monroe, gave his real name as Bernard Haywood, 24 years of age.

Sheriff Coverdale said Haywood's story of having committed only two of the burglaries in West Monroe was apparently authentic. This was borne out, principally, by the fact that Haywood evidently did not commit the robbery of the T. John Department store, as the burglar in this instance was badly cut by the glass of a show window he broke to gain entrance. Haywood was not injured.

The prisoner said he conducted his operations alone here, and denied another burglar or burglars worked with him.

In confessing his criminal career to the sheriff, Haywood was said to have related that in 1932, at the age of 22 years, he was committed to a reformatory at St. Cloud, Minn., for burglaries of filling stations. He did not remain long at the reformatory, it was stated.

Early in October of last year, Haywood committed a series of robberies at Marion, Kan. When the night marshall attempted to take him in custody, he was said to have attacked the marshal and to have taken possession of his pistol.

A short time later, Haywood was arrested at Westfield, N. Y., and the marshal's pistol he had in his possession was identified. He was returned to Marion. Christmas night he broke jail there, and made his way

PARAGUAYANS TAKE MAJOR STRONGHOLD

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 5.—(AP)—A smashing Paraguayan offensive today brought the fall of Fort Capirenda, one of Bolivia's two major strongholds, dispatches from Asuncion tonight said.

Fort Villa Montes, principal Bolivian army base and Paraguay's chief objective in her latest drive, was placed in serious danger, together with the oil fields lying behind it, by the fall of Capirenda, the advices said.

The captured fort, situated between Villa Montes and Carandayty, was an important communication link between those two centers.

With Capirenda in their possession, the Paraguayans were expected to redouble their drive at Villa Montes, fall of which would leave the way open to invasion of one of Bolivia's richest areas.

Villa Montes, however, was defended by heavily fortified hillside positions, and La Paz reported successive Paraguayan attacks had been beaten back, the Paraguayans suffering heavy losses.

CONGRESS READY TO ACT ON TWO HUGE AID PLANS

IDEA GIVEN APPROVAL

President Expected To Give Message Asking For $4,000,000,000

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—With majority leaders already having pledged approval by their followers, congress will tackle immediately next week an $880,000,000 appropriation to taper off the dole and then turn at once to a work relief program embracing more than four times that amount.

Conferees of President Roosevelt disclosed this line-up today as the lead off for a 20-point program to be submitted piece-meal from the White House. Work will be started immediately after receipt on Monday of what they described as an $8,000,000,000 budget message.

These same leaders predicted that congress would approve the relief measures without undue delay and with probably only slight change.

Probably on Monday Mr. Roosevelt is to send his request for the $880,000,000 emergency relief appropriation designed to taper off direct handouts by next November. Later in the week he is scheduled to transmit a special message calling for the creation of a new set-up to handle some $4,000,000,000 in carrying out his work-relief program until private industry absorbs some 3,500,000 employables and for the return of around 1,500,000 unemployables to local relief.

Some house members who have followed the tax situation closely, although declining to be quoted, today discussed where the money for this huge program was coming from. Some even went so far as to say it might be necessary to enact new taxes.

At any rate, they were preparing to re-enact $416,000,000 in "nuisance" taxes which expire at the end of the present fiscal year, as the president requested at a meeting with leaders last night.

In short, after the relief moves, the president's plan for a broad social security program combining unemployment insurance, old age pensions and other welfare propositions will be given congress.

While some members today took the attitude that these subjects should be handled separately for legislative purposes, it was agreed by leaders

SALE OF CARBON PLANTS RECORDED

Transfer Of Properties Is Said To Be Million Dollar Deal

Sale of carbon plant properties, for the consideration of one million dollars, according to a statement from an unimpeachable source, was recorded yesterday at the office of the clerk of parish court. The Century Carbon company was the seller and the United Carbon company was the buyer.

The properties involved are located in Ouachita and Richland parishes, principally near Swartz and Archibald. They include carbon plants, gas wells, leases, mineral rights, pipe lines and one gasoline plant. Involved in the sale were the former International Gas Products plant, the former Union Gas Products plant, and the former North American Carbon plant.

The purchase price, as stated in the papers recording the sale, was $150,000 and other valuable considerations. It was learned, however, that the consideration was approximately one million dollars.

Another purchase made by the United Carbon company was also recorded at the clerk's office. James W. Standley sold to the company approximately 420 acres of land located at Lamkin station, for the consideration of $23,000, represented by the assumption of a mortgage held by the carbon company and subject to the federal land bank of New Orleans.

CALIFORNIA HIT BY HEAVY RAINS

(By Associated Press)

Windstorm, flood and gale driven rain greeted refugees from winter in the California and Florida resorts Saturday while the season dealt more gently with the folks up north.

The worst storm in a year subsided in California after flooding highways and streets in San Francisco and southern California cities. Shipping was delayed by the gale, and the British tanker, Crescentia, long overdue from Japan, was feared lost at sea.

Residents in the foothills of the Sierra Madre mountains back of Los Angeles were warned of a flood approaching. The deluge blocked foothill boulevards with landslides between La Crescenta and Tujunca, made rivers of Los Angeles streets and emptied into downtown basements. Rowboats were ready to save marooned residents of Long Beach.

MAY CALL TROOPS TO KEEP ORDER IN BILOXI'S SQUABBLE

BILOXI, Miss., Jan. 5.—(AP)—It was reported in Biloxi tonight that an appeal might be made to Governor Sennett Conner for national guard troops to preserve order in this coast port Monday when a fight between two contenders to the mayor's office is to meet its crisis.

Special city police and deputies of Harrison county are being held in readiness for any emergency and Mayor R. Hart Chinn, one of the principals in the official row, expressed the belief tonight that there would not be any trouble exceeding sharp court contests over the qualification of candidates for office when the mayor and commissioners approach the hour of change, 10 a.m.

Heated verbal exchanges have occurred during the past few days between Mayor Chinn, incumbent and his elected successor, J. A. O'Keefe, over the mayor's challenge of O'Keefe's holding office on the claim of delinquent taxes and a similar challenge of the qualifications of some of the commissioners.

Mayor Chinn now faces a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill as a result of his recent fight in a council meeting with City Commissioner John Swanzy over a city gasoline bill.

Chinn is seeking to block the entry of O'Keefe into office on the claim that he had not paid his taxes and O'Keefe declared that the people elected him and he would take office Monday.

NRA ADJUSTMENT BOARD APPROVED FOR THIS PARISH

Three Monroe Men To Receive Complaints On Code Violations

Government approval of the three men selected to compose the NRA adjustment board for Ouachita parish has been received and the board is now ready to act, T. S. Hickman, NRA field adjuster for north Louisiana, said Saturday upon his arrival in Monroe from his headquarters at Shreveport. The board will receive complaints and may be appealed to by employers who believe they have been unjustly charged with violating code provisions.

M. C. Redmond, Monroe attorney, and former state senator from this district, will head the board as chairman, and will be the special representative of the public. Lee Ellis, Monroe contractor, and G. C. Williams, local painter, are the other members of the group and were named to represent business and labor, respectively. Mr. Williams and Mr. Ellis were originally named and they then selected Mr. Redmond as the third member.

Mr. Hichman said that since he last visited here several months ago he had been devoting his time principally to obtaining code compliance among the larger business and industrial concerns. He will be here on this occasion about 10 days or two weeks and in the future hopes to be able to spend about one week out of each month in Monroe, he said.

Action against violators in most instances is taken on information obtained by government investigators, Mr. Hickman said. Comparatively few of the complaints are received from employes of the concern complained against, as most of the employes are either afraid the complaint will react

MISS CLARK NAMED SCHOOL SUPERVISOR

Miss Irene Clark, daughter of O. O. Clark of West Monroe and a teacher in Crosley school in West Monroe, has been named as supervisor of class room instruction for schools of Union parish, it was learned here Saturday. She began her new work Saturday and will reside in Farmerville while engaged in her duties.

In her new capacity, Miss Clark will have direct supervision over the work done by the pupils in the 33 schools of the parish. Her work will be similar to that done by Mrs. Chrissie Williams, assistant to T. O. Brown, superintendent of Ouachita parish schools. School officials were pleased with the recognition accorded to Miss Clark by Union parish school authorities in offering her this position.

HUEY LONG ACTS TO TIE UP FUNDS AT NEW ORLEANS

Goes Into Court To Demand Accounting Of City Expenditures

OUTSIDE JUDGE NAMED

Kingfish Makes Charges Before Leaving Last Night For Capital

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5.—(AP)—On the allegation that the city of New Orleans had used funds illegally, the forces of Senator Huey P. Long, the dictator, today went into court to obtain an accounting of millions of dollars handled by the city under the administration of Long's political enemy, Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley.

A suit filed this afternoon in civil district court on behalf of Governor O. K. Allen and Attorney General Gaston L. Porterie, political aides of Long, asked for a tie-up of city funds by injunction for a public hearing on accounts.

Simultaneously the supreme court by a majority vote acted favorably upon a motion presented to it asking for the appointment of an outside judge to hear the case.

The court appointed Judge A. L. Ponder, of Amite, to sit on the case and January 15 was set for the hearing on the petition.

Before the scheduled departure of Long tonight for Washington to carry the Louisiana situation before the United States senate Long charged that the city of New Orleans, which he is striving to annex to his political machine, had "two million dollars worth of open accounts on their books" that the books, "two sets of them, one which says one thing and the other another," are so "messed up" that his auditors who have been checking them in his city legislative investigation can't tell anything about the books.

Long charged that the city was "four or five million dollars in arrears" and alleged that the city administration had misused $2,000,000 of highway funds that was given them by the state to construct and improve streets and roads in the city.

"I have been informed by George Wallace (assistant attorney general)" Long said, "that the court action will not affect the running expenses of the city. It will just affect open accounts and bank debts."

He declared that the court suit was intended to get the books of the city

Final Winners In Jinky Contest Are Named Today

In today's issue of the Morning World and News-Star there is a list of the prize winners for the last week of the Jinky contest which has been running in Monroe for thirteen weeks. There is scarcely anyone in Ouachita parish who has not made or at least tried to make one of the little Jinkys given by the co-operating firms in the contest.

The grand prize, $100, for the person entering the greatest number of Jinky sets was won by Mrs. C. C. Bell of West Monroe. She was the winner, but the Parent Teacher association made a great runner-up.

Mrs. Marie Bankhead Owen of the department of archives and history of the state of Alabama, seeing the Jinky contest in Montgomery, conceived the idea of using the Jinky plan to help the crippled children of the nation. She has written a little booklet picturing Jinky as a little character coming down to this earth with the thought of helping the tiny cripples throughout the land. In the center of the booklet in a Jinky. Her plan is to have these booklets sold by a national organization of women and then give a certain amount of the proceeds to the children and use the remainder for prizes for the persons making the best Jinkys. It is her idea to have one day in the year to be known as Jinky day and on that day to sell the booklets. In other words, in one day sufficient funds would be raised for the entire year.

Reilly Challenged To Name 4 Persons He Says Kidnaped And Slew Lindbergh's Baby

SEVERAL PERSONS ARE INVOLVED IN HAUPTMANN TRIAL

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 5.—The baby murder trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann has turned, in three short days, into a trial not of the chalk-faced German carpenter alone, but of many others—men and women, persons alive and persons dead.

That is the now apparent strategy of Edward J. Reilly, the shrewd Brooklyn lawyer who is directing the attempt to save Hauptmann from the chair. With double-edged questions, Reilly has waved the pointing finger (sometimes subtly, sometimes boldly) in the direction of various persons whose names have long been familiar in the "Lindbergh case," as well as some whose names have not.

Who are those concerning whom Reilly is seeking more light?

There is, for one, "Red" Johnson.

There is Ollie Whateley, the butler for the Charles A. Lindberghs at the time the Lindbergh boy-baby was kidnaped and murdered nearly three years ago.

Whateley is dead. His widow, the Lindberghs' housekeeper, arises spiritedly to defend her husband's name.

There is the shy, doe-like Betty Gow; and Violet Sharpe, the maid who committed suicide while the inquiry was at its height, no one knows why. And there is the New Jersey state police force. It, also, is on trial. And the venerable Dr. John F. Condon.

One more: "Swede" Anderson. Who is "Swede" Anderson, an aviator who held a stick on the early airmail planes and "had trouble" with Colonel Lindbergh?

These persons, and some others, are finding themselves unexpectedly "on trial" as the case of the people of the state of New Jersey versus Bruno Richard Hauptmann for murder of a babymoves steadily along. For instance, "Red" Johnson.

There was a time that Johnson found a questioning finger pointed at him. He was a friend of Betty Gow, the baby's nurse. He had driven an automobile into New England the night of the kidnaping. In the car was found a milk bottle. To feed a baby? Police wondered, and they questioned him. The milk, they found was for "Red" himself, he being in

CITY WILL HONOR PRES. ROOSEVELT

Junior Charity League To Sponsor Annual Birthday Ball

Plans for Monroe's participation in the nation-wide observance of the president's birthday, Wednesday, January 30, were announced Saturday by Mayor Arnold Bernstein, who has been named local chairman of arrangements for the event by Henry L. Doherty, national chairman of the president's birthday ball committee.

Mayor Bernstein announced that the Junior Charity league would be the local sponsors of the ball, and that the Chamber of Commerce of Monroe and West Monroe, as well as the city of Monroe, had pledged support of the program. More than 5,000 communities throughout the nation will hold similar balls on the same night, the proceeds to be devoted to the national campaign for the control of infantile paralysis. Last year nearly $1,000,000 was raised for the Warm

GUN-RUNNERS HUNTED ON MEXICAN BORDER

CALEXICO, Calif., Jan. 5.—(AP)—A fleet of trucks and motor cars believed to be speeding from the United States into Mexico with 120 machine guns and ammunition for revolutionary plotters was hunted strenuously by officers on both sides of the border tonight.

Instructions to stop the gun-running caravan "at all costs" were delivered to guards on both sides of the international line. Guard forces were doubled both in American and Mexican territory.

Reports that 300 additional machine guns were stored in a huge Los Angeles warehouse, presumably awaiting movement into revolutionary hands south of the boundary, sent detectives there on a hunt for the place.

Two men were held in Los Angeles after assertedly telling police the arms and ammunition had been collected and secreted there over a period of several months. The police said the arrest of "the big chief" of the suspected plot was imminent.

Bilbo Explains Why He Wished Post On Library Committee

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Asked today why he had requested assignment to the library committee, Senator Bilbo of Mississippi said:

"I want to investigate that Guttenburg Bible that Ross Collins bought."

Former Representative Ross Collins was an unsuccessful candidate in Bilbo's race for the senate. The famous Bible is kept in a glass case in the congressional library here.

"I want to find out," Bilbo said, "why three guards, working eight hour shifts and each paid $1,440 a year, have to stand guard over that Bible when the library has iron doors that even a Dillinger couldn't get through."

He added that he studied bibliography while in college and always had a "hankering for books."

The new Mississippi senator is one of the few that ever specially requested assignment to the library committee.

SAAR PLEBISCITE MAY BE DELAYED SEVERAL MONTHS

Postponement Talked As Rival Factions Face Meetings Today

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

SAARBRUECKEN, Saar Basin Territory, Jan. 5.—A possibility that the Saar plebiscite may be postponed several months was seriously discussed in official quarters tonight as rival Nazi and anti-Nazi factions prepared for mammoth open air demonstrations tomorrow.

Permission was given the two groups to hold the mass meetings, expected to be the biggest since the plebiscite campaign opened, in Saarbruecken the same day.

If the gatherings cannot be held peacefully the final Sunday before the balloting, it would be dangerous to attempt to carry out the plebiscite one week later, officials said they believed.

The task of preserving order during the test of the Saar's discipline will be left to police, troops of the league's international army being kept in barracks.

Should the mere presence of the "invisible army" prove sufficient to discourage the Nazis and anti-Nazis from flying at each other's throats, officials believe it will be demonstrated that the plebiscite is likely to take place without serious difficulty.

If serious conflict should develop tomorrow, however, it will be indicated—according to opinions expressed privately among league of nations officials—that the plebiscite cannot be held safely January 13 and should be postponed.

Nazis from all parts of the territory swarming into Saarbruecken aboard 80 special trains will gather in the morning on a hill south of the Saar river, while those advocating retention of league of nation's government will march during the afternoon to an athletic field north of the river.

Between the contending factions will be not only the river but police barracks and railroad tracks. To the east are the barracks of the British regiment of the league army, and near the Nazis' meeting place the newly arrived detachments of British armored cars and the battalion of crack Netherlands marines are quartered. To the west, across town, are the Italian tanks.

All the troops, however, will re-

SKELETON IS FOUND NEAR WATERPROOF

ST. JOSEPH, Jan. 5.—(Special)—The skeleton of a man found below Waterproof at a point between the Mississippi river and the levee is believed to be the remains of a "floater," or drowned person, Sheriff John Hughes said tonight.

No indications of foul play were found on the skeleton. It was considered probable that death had taken place several years ago, possibly as long ago as five years.

A purse which evidently had been of good quality was found beside the skeleton. It contained a five-dollar bill and three one-dollar bills.

The skeleton was fairly complete, though not intact.

No inquest was held. The body was buried where it was found under supervision of the sheriff's department.

Discovery of the body was at a point about one and one-half miles below Waterproof. A path used by persons in walking past the vicinity is located about 50 yards from where the skeleton was found, but the immediate location of the skeleton was concealed by briars.

A Mr. Gale and his son, of Waterproof, were said to have discovered the body last Wednesday afternoon.

Prosecutor Asks That Attorney Immediately Identify Slayers

HAUPTMANN IS SILENT

German's Lawyer States He Will Reveal Quartet This Week

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 5.—The announcement of Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, that he would name four persons next week as the "actual kidnapers" of the Lindbergh baby evoked from Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, Jr., tonight a challenge to name the persons immediately.

Reilly, in New York for the week-end recess of the Hauptmann trial on a charge of murdering Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., announced he would disclose the names of the four persons probably about Thursday.

Hauptmann, he said, was not one of them. He would not comment when asked directly if Betty Gow, the baby's nurse, was one of the four he intended to name.

"If Mr. Reilly knows any other persons connected with this case, as a member of the bar and as an officer of the court, he should disclose their identity to the prosecution authorities of Hunterdon county immediately," Hauck said.

"The state authorities are not attempting to persecute Hauptmann, but as far as the evidence thus far uncovered discloses he, and he alone, committed this crime."

Hauck stated further that if Reilly can produce the persons he believes are actually the kidnapers, he cannot understand why the defense attorney desires to wait until the prosecution advances its case further.

He added he was glad to hear that the defense intends to put Hauptmann on the stand, and indicated cross-examination would be thorough.

Reilly gave no hint of the identities of the four persons he said were guilty. He made his announcement at a special press conference in his Brooklyn, N. Y., offices. He said:

"On next Thursday I shall name four persons, and I shall charge them with the kidnaping of the baby, Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr. "Two of those I shall name are women. Two are men.

"Neither of the men I shall name is Bruno Hauptmann."

The florid Brooklyn lawyer declined to say whom he would name. To a specific question as to Betty Gow, the baby's nurse, he declined to make answer. He did, however, mention "Red" Johnson, who is no longer in this country, as follows:

"Miss Gow was on more or less friendly terms with Red Johnson, who was around Englewood (where the Lindberghs spent part of their time). He was examined at the time of the crime. However, I do not want to see him."

The lawyer commented, in passing, that Miss Gow "showed no hysteria, crying, or the usual symptoms a woman would normally show when a child to which she was closely attached is stolen. She was cold."

Reilly said:

"We intend to use three groups of witnesses to free Hauptmann. One group will establish a complete alibi. A second will involve handwriting experts. The third will be made up of fingerprint experts.

"I have felt all along that Hauptmann would get off. From the beginning I have believed that there was more than one person in this crime, yet the indictment names Hauptmann exclusively.

"All the surrounding circumstances indicate that Colonel Lindbergh and his wife were imposed upon by someone in the household. Yesterday, for example, it was brought out in the testimony that the baby was unaccustomed to strangers and that no one had access to the child except those connected with the household."

Reilly expressed satisfaction with

NEW KIND OF PURGE PLANNED BY NAZIS

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Lesser lights in the Nazi party were reliably described today as living in fear that they will be eliminated from the party rolls before the middle of April.

"The cleansing has already started," a non-German official declared today, "although in a different way from the blood purge of June 30.

"Some have already been ousted, but the big cleanup is expected in many party circles, including the ranks of the storm troopers, within three months.

"Prussian Premier Hermann Wilhelm Goering recently asserted publicly that there won't be another June 30, so a blood purge is not to be expected."

The statement was an outgrowth of a new crop of reports circulating in well-informed circles as a result of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's mysterious meeting last Thursday, which was said unofficially to be a consultation on Hitlerism's immediate domestic and international plans.

to Berlingame, Kan., where he said he stole a sedan. Driving the car to Georgetown, Texas, he stole another automobile, but placed the license plates of the first automobile on the latter.

The latter automobile was the one which Haywood abandoned in the 2600 block of DeSiard street after committing robberies in West Monroe. He said he left the car there while he looked about for something to steal which he could sell.

Returning before daybreak to the place where he had left the car, which had been "picked up" by police and stored, Haywood found it missing, it was stated. Later in the morning, before noon, he stole the car owned by Willis Montgomery from the intersection of North Second and Washington streets.

Driving the Montgomery car to Lonoke, Ark., Haywood said he attempted to break into a filling station there, and that an officer attempted to arrest him, but failed. Haywood left the town in the automobile he stole here. At Marion, an officer who had been requested by the Lonoke officer to be on the lookout for him, arrested him after shooting him in the hip when he attempted to resist arrest and take possession of the officer's gun, according to the confession.

Haywood's wound was not serious, it was reported.

The two robberies he admitted were the theft of a case of soft drinks from the Wallace service station, and gasoline stolen from the New Deal service station. Haywood was said to have stated he broke the lock on the pump at the latter station in stealing gasoline for the car he was driving.

The other robberies on the night of December 28 in West Monroe were performed at the Trenton street garage, where a 50-cent piece and about 50 pennies were stolen, and at the S. R. Terrall rooming house, where $18 was stolen from a roomer. At the T. John Department store, a pair of corduroy trousers and a corduroy jacket were stolen.

into court, summon the city's debtors and have it determined "who the city owes and how much."

"I think the city should welcome the suit," he said.

The petition of Allen and Porterie charged that the city government of New Orleans through the mayor and commission council had unlawfully contracted debts and had borrowed money from local banks contrary to constitutional provisions.

It requested that an injunction be issued to prevent the city administration from paying out any further money to retire its indebtedness exclusive of bonded debt.

The suit was directed against the mayor and commission council as the governing heads of the city.

to follow Mr. Roosevelt's plan to lump into an omnibus bill.

Final decision on how these measures will be administered has yet to be made. It was suggested in more than one quarter that a new executive department of welfare be created, but there was some objection among the leaders to this. However, it was decided that at least a central coordinating agency should be set up to unify administration.

Details of the social security program have not yet been given Democratic chieftains, particularly with reference to how large a percentage of contributions is to be made by industry for unemployment insurance. It was made clear, however, that the administration was prepared to propose the government create a fund to aid contributions until they were sufficient to meet demands. The government would be repaid this money out of future contributions. While members of congress digested the president's message of yesterday and studied reports of the conference attended by thirteen Democratic leaders last night, it was authoritatively developed today that:

The president virtually have given up hope of stopping passage of the soldiers' cash bonus in the house and plans to bring pressure on the Democratic dominated senate to prevent its overriding a certain veto.

The house ways and means committee, in the words of Chairman Doughton, Democrat, North Carolina, will take up the bonus as soon as it can with due consideration to other important matters without "delay or dodge."

REILLY ASKED TO NAME KIDNAPERS

the results of his long cross examination yesterday of Col. Lindbergh. He said the flier was "a perfect witness for our side."

Hauptmann himself will be the first witness when the defense gets its chance, Reilly said. The prisoner, pale as a ghost now and lean-faced almost to the point of emaciation, has been studying at odd moments to improve his English. While he has been in America more than ten years, he speaks with a pronounced accent and is sometimes difficult to understnd.

Hauptmann, who has been tight-lipped during all the weeks he has been in custody, had one comment to make after listening for hours to the examination and cross examination of Colonel Lindbergh.

"It is terrbile to kill a baby," Hauptmann told Reilly. "Whoever did it is a terrible person."

Reilly said Hauptmann was "terribly moved" by the recital of the sorrow that visited the Sourland Hills home of the Lindberghs the night of March 1, 1932.

"He is cheerful, though," Reilly added, "because he knows he is innocent."

One of the important pieces of evidence in the state's case is the ladder found outside the Lindbergh home the night of the kidnaping. It has bolstered the theory that a kidnaper climbed to a nursery window, took the baby from his crib and descended.

Asked about the ladder today, Reilly said it was "just scenery," implying that it may have been placed where it was found to turn suspicion away from the actual means of kidnaping. "It was more or less a plant," he added.

At Taunton, Mass., Dr. John F. Condon, the "Jafsie" of the ransom negotiations which led to the payment of $50,000 in ransom money, declined to say whether he would identify Hauptmann as the man to whom he paid over the money. He said he is holding his opinion of the identity "in abeyance."

Reilly said he will introduce finger-print experts, all of whom will testify that the ransom notes were not written by Hauptmann. One is a specialist in Teutonic handwriting.

Except for the jury—which is restricted over the holiday to walks and conversation—Hauptmann is about the only interested party in the trial who has not left town. Hauptmann was perturbed today when they gave him a newspaper with most of the news torn out. He is allowed one paper a day of his own choosing, but all references to his own case are deleted.

Hauptmann was not advised today of his mother's comments on the trial as given to an Associated Press writer in Kamenz, Germany. Reassuring her conviction that her son is innocent, Frau Hauptmann said she thought his arrest was the work of "enemies who want to destroy his life because they envy his happy marriage."

main in barracks unless they are urgently needed. International military officials were careful to keep bayonets and machine guns off the streets tonight, and Saarbruecken had much the appearance of any normally policed city.

In the first trouble since New Year's disorders, several men distributing pamphlets in Steinback, small town near the German border, were beaten up last night, and several shops set on fire. No one was injured.

An order for the expulsion of Prince Hubertus Zu Lowenstein, German exile and violent anti-Nazi, was rescinded today when the prince, who has been publishing a weekly newspaper favoring the status quo, promised to refrain from future political activity.

NRA ADJUSTMENT BOARD APPROVED FOR THIS PARISH

against them or do not see fit to make a complaint, Mr. Hickman stated. In a good many instances, however, complaints are received from other persons on behalf of the employes, and a complaint may be received from anyone. When a charge of a code violation is received a government investigator looks into the matter, the adjuster said.

Efforts of the field adjuster are devoted principally toward enforcement of wage and hour provisions of the code. The trade practices part of the code is left to the code authorities until they bring a complaint before NRA officials.

Mr. Hickman said that in Shreveport, where he has been furnished with three regular investigators, he is getting good compliance, especially on the part of the larger concerns. He does not have an investigator regularly assigned to duty in Monroe, but hopes to have two named for this work here soon.

There are some code violations, the adjuster said, on the part of those who are not familiar with the code. When complaints are made these persons are given proper information on the code and asked to comply with its provisions.

NEGRO SNATCHES WOMAN'S PURSE

A report that a negro had snatched her purse on the street at 112 North Eighth street, and fled, was made to police last night by Mrs. John Sugden.

The purse contained two one-dollar bills and 25 cents in change, it was stated.

Dr. C. P. Gray reported the theft of his medicine kit from his automobile while it was parked in front of Hemp's cafeteria, at the corner of North Grand and DeSiard streets.

Julius Cathie reported that a suit of clothes was stolen from his room at the Southern hotel, 202 North Second street.

A report that a burglar had entered the residence of A. K. Kilpatrick, 1409 Park avenue, was made to police last night, but an investigation revealed the house had not been entered by an intruder and that noise believed to have been made by a burglar evidently had been made by a cat.

the habit (it was explained) of drinking milk during the night.

Finally they let him go, with the understanding that he get out of the country, he having entered illegally, they said. So "Red" Johnson, once considered a "hot lead" in the case, departed.

Today his name is back in the records. Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel, injected Johnson into yesterday's trial session. Lindbergh was testifying, and Reilly asked him:

"Isn't it true, colonel, that the prosecution has brought Betty Gow back from Europe as a witness here, but has made no effort to bring 'Red' Johnson back?"

The colonel did not know. The implication was clear enough. Reilly mentioned the milk bottle and the fact that Johnson had been questioned concerning his friendship for Miss Gow and his whereabouts the night of the abduction.

Nothing much was said about the mysterious "Swede" Anderson.

Reilly introduced his name to the case when he asked Col. Lindbergh: "Did you ever know an aviator known as 'Swede' Anderson?"

The colonel replied: "I do not recall such a person, at least by that name."

Reilly: "Isn't it true that there was bad blood between you and this 'Swede' Anderson, and that he had made threats against you?"

The colonel renewed his denial of ever having known such a person.

The unspoken implication beneath this line of questioning was that there were several persons who might conceivably have had some knowledge, before or after the fact, of the tragedy.

Reilly's questioning is suave, unhurried but earnest. He lets his voice rise to drive home a point, then drops that particular line of interrogation, seemingly satisfied not to pursue the insinuated suspicion farther.

Insofar as Dr. John F. Condon was concerned, however, Reilly pushed the questioning determinedly. Dr. Condon was the "Jafsie" of the ransom negotiations. It was he who handed over $50,000 to a mysterious "John" in a Bronx cemetery—the money that led finally to Hauptmann's arrest.

Reilly brought out that Condon was unknown to Lindbergh at the time of the murder, but that Condon had gone to the trouble (on his own responsibility) of advertising in the Bronx Home News that he would act as intermediary if the kidnapers wanted him to. He received an answer to his advertisement, and the answer was marked with the same strange symbol that was used on the note which was left on the window sill of the Lindbergh home the night of the kidnaping.

Reilly: "Did it ever occur to you, colonel, that the master mind of the kidnapers might insert an advertisement offering to act as intermediary, and that he then could answer his own advertisement and carry on negotiations with himself, thus getting the ransom money?"

Colonel Lindbergh smiled and said that every possible angle had been considered, but that he had finally become convinced of Dr. Condon's full reliability.

CITY WILL HONOR PRES. ROOSEVELT

Springs Foundation, a project of the president, for the research in the fight against the malady and for the treatment of children suffering from the disease.

This year the major portion of the proceeds is to remain in the community where the fund is raised and a small percentage to go to the National Infantile Paralysis association. The entire program is designed as a testimonial of appreciation to the president for his services to the nation, courageously carried on in spite of the fact that he is a sufferer from infantile paralysis.

Details of the plans for the ball to be held in Monroe are being worked out by the officers and members of the Junior Charity league, which will have direct charge of all the arrangements, under the general direction of Mayor Bernstein, who late last week was invited by Henry Doherty to head the local committee. In his telegram to Mayor Bernstein, Mr. Doherty stressed the importance of the plans for combatting the dread infantile paralysis, which he said now affects 300,000 children in this country. Mr. Doherty urged the mayor to accept the local chairmanship as "a patriotic and humane duty to suffering children."

After conferring with officers of the Junior Charity league, who agreed to accept sponsorship of the president's birthday ball, Mayor Bernstein sent the following telegram to Mr. Doherty:

"Hon. Henry L. Doherty,
"Chairman President's Birthday Ball,
"New York City, N. Y.

"I sincerely appreciate your cordial invitation to serve as chairman of committee to arrange for president's birthday ball in this city as part of nation-wide plan to raise funds to combat infantile paralysis. I am exceedingly glad to accept this important task, having in mind the significance of the service it implies in the interest of many sufferers throughout the country who are victims of a terrible malady. I am glad to advise you that preliminary arrangements have already been made for the holding of the president's birthday ball in this city on January 30, and that the Monroe Junior Charity league has accepted sponsorship of the event. As chairman of the committee on arrangements I desire to pledge to you the full cooperation of our people in doing our part in a worthy movement that will afford opportunity to express our appreciation of the splendid leadership in construct zenship exemplified by our

OLENCE AVERTED AT MASS MEETING

satisfaction that the tax issue was settled.

The reorganized meeting adopted with shouts and by acclamation an oral resolution by E. J. Lorio, Standard Oil worker, declaring that "if satisfaction is not obtained we will take matters into our own hands."

The text of the resolution, offered by E. J. Lorio, follows:

"Be it resolved, that if the Standard Oil company accepts any compromise, it is O. K. by us, but we should hereby resolve and go on record to say, 'If any further persecution to Standard Oil continues, we should take the action in our own hands.'

"This is going to be orderly," said Bourgeois, getting the new meeting started. "There has been something said about putting out the lights, but nobody's going to put out the lights."

"When a man comes between me and my meat and bread I know what it means," George Curry, Baton Rouge said, speaking after adoption of the Lorio resolution. "I haven't got any more respect for Huey Long and Oscar Allen than for a sheep-killing dog.

"Fighting the Standard Oil has been Huey Long's hobby," Curry continued. "He blames the Standard Oil for the loss of the first dime he ever made.

"I haven't any bodyguards, but if Huey Long stepped up on this stage I'd take him on till oil froze over and we skated on the ice."

"We need action, not words," Bonnie V. Baker, sixth ward, East Baton Rouge parish police juror said. "The time has come when words are useless."

Bourgeois recommended consideration "of one or more sensible resolutions," which he said L. H. Unglesby would present.

"I'm sure you are not in favor of drastic measures," Unglesby said. "We hope we have a compromise, but we don't know we are going to get it."

Unglesby nominated Bourgeois president of an employes society that he suggested should be known as the "Three Little Pigs."

"That may sound crazy," he said, "but not when you think of the wolf."

Bourgeois was unanimously elected.

After the election of Bourgeois and others of a committee, a collection was taken to defray organizatfon expenses.

The workers surged to the rostrum and poured nickels and dimes into a hat.

The "Three Little Pigs" committee was formed of Bourgeois, E. J. Loric, B. V. Baker, L. H. Unglesby, George M. Curry, and Ben Hymel, all of Baton Rouge.

The meeting was declared "adjourned" by Steve Weber, a Standard Oil company employe, who said he did so at the request of J. A. Norton, chairman of the meeting.

"No! no!" several workers shouted.

Earl O'Quinn and Chester St. Amant, Standard Oil employes, made an attempt to denounce Senator Long.

Ernest Bourgeois, Baton Rouge, climbed on a chair, and cried:

"Who'll go with me to the state house?" Why can't we call a special session and repeal this tax?"

Turmoil threatened when another shouted:

"Are we mice or are we men? We want justice. I'm not satisfied that the tax is abolished. Where's our freedom?"

The crowd of hundreds of workers, although told that the tax question was settled but that official confirmation from the company had not been received, refused to break up, and milled around the pavilion.

"There's not a state trooper who will fire into our ranks," Bourgeois said. "They haven't got the nerve."

After Bouregois finished, the crowd quieted down but gave no indication of what it intended to do.

The Bourgeois started things off again by climbing on the rostrum and declaring that "the meeting had just begun."

"We are going to arrive at a definite plan," he said.

The building formerly occupied by a Sur-Wa store at the intersection of North Fourth street and Stubbs avenue was leased yesterday to the Louisiana Stores company, Inc., operators of Jitney Jungle stores, for a period of three years, beginning February 1 of this year, it was learned at the office of the clerk of parish court. The consideration in the transaction is $8,100, to be paid in monthly installments of $225 each.

The lease papers were signed by Samuel G. Wiener and Montgomery Martin, owners of the building, and E. M. Steen, president of the Louisiana Stores company, Inc.

The same lessors executed a lease to the same lessees for use of a building at the corner of Clayton and Cypress streets, West Monroe. The lease covers a period of three years, beginning January 12 of this year, and the consideration of $2,700, to be paid in monthly installments of $75 each.

Canada Finds Big Rum Plot As Brothers Fall Into Net

(By NEA Service)

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 5.—When four brothers, all reputed millionaires, go on trial here during the February term of the court of King's bench, Canada will be probing into the depths of what the government believes is a booze scandal to end all booze scandals.

Four Bronfman brothers, Sam, portly and sleek; Allan, smooth and baldheaded; Harry, rough, brusque, and forceful; and Abe, the oldest, mature and confident—are now free on personal bond of $100,000 apiece after surrender to the royal Canadian mounted police.

They are charged with conspiring to defraud the Dominion government of more than $5,000,000 in unpaid duties by smuggling liquor into Canada. All pleaded not guilty.

Smuggling liquor into Canada? You thought it worked the other way, didn't you? Well, repeal in the United States upset a lot of apple-carts in the liquor-running business.

Before repeal, huge stores of liquor were exported from Canada to the French island of St. Pierre Miquelon in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Manufactured for export, and actually exported to this foreign territory, it was not subject to Canadian taxes. From St. Pierre Miquelon it was destined to be "run" into the United States.

The famous "I'm Alone," whose sinking by U. S. coast guards brought five years of intricate legal tangles, was one of the great fleet of liquor boats working out of Miquelon.

Run Back To Canada

But along came repeal, and with the fountain of domestic liquor playing freely in the United States, there was little profit in taking the risk of smuggling the thousands of gallons of liquor stored on Miquelon into the United States.

Owners began instead to "run it back into Canada, where it could be sold cheaply because it had paid no taxes. Of course this was just as illegal as "running" it into the United States, and a lot more dangerous, as it turned out.

The Royal Mounted is charged with preventing smuggling, and it takes the job seriously. The reverberations of this latest shot against Canadian bootlegging have resounded from Vancouver to Halifax, and even across the ocean to Perth, Scotland, where a Scottish confederate of the alleged ring was arrested by Scotland Yarders.

Fifty-six men and one woman of the 61 persons indicted are already in the Mounties' liquor net, most of them in the maritime provinces, the headquarters now, as during prohibition, for liquor-running activities.

Big Ring Shattered

The present case follows on the breaking up last year of a $1,500,000 rum-running ring operating in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and the arrest and conviction of some 60 men. "This rase arises out of that investigation," said Superintendent F. G. Mead of the R. C. M. P.

Recent conviction of William Fraser, president of the Eastern Equipment company, of Dorval, Que., for conspiring to defraud the Dominion of $1,700,000 in unpaid duty on liquor brought into Canada threw interesting sidelights on how it's done today.

Fraser's associates formed a dummy oil company in Montreal and in Newark, N. J., and shipped the liquor in cunningly built tank cars. These were built so that the exterior showed one piece, but inside they had three compartments.

The middle one contained oil, the others alcohol. Whole fleets of small ships were used to drop liquor along the coastline between the gulf and Montreal.

U. S. Also Interested

In general outline, the Bronfman case is expected to develop similarly, involving the bringing back into Canada of liquor made here for export, untaxed. But in addition, United States treasury officials are now hard at work in Ottawa, the Canadian capital, studying the same tax books which now absorb Canadian customs men.

The American officials hope to find data that will permit them to collect some of the millions in taxes lost by the United States government millions in unpaid duties. Treasury officials hope the Canadian records will put them on the scent of recovery of some of these lost millions.

Potato And Corn Chip Concern Opened Here

A new business enterprise, the O. A. Fulk Chip company, manufacturers of potato and corn chips, has been established at 114 DeSiard street.

It was announced that the firm has installed the latest machinery available for its plant and that it products are the most delicious and palatable modern inventions have made possible. All of the surplus grease is removed from the chips by centrifugal force, leaving the natural flavor of the chips, it was stated.

The new products are known as "Vita-Sealed Chips." The potato chips are mineralized by leaving the peel on the chips, giving the consumer the whole vitamins of the potato, the announcement said.

The corn chips are an entirely new product here. They are made from the heart of the corn and are cooked, like the potato chips, in pure vegetable oil.

O. A. Fulks, owner of the enterprise, is a resident of Monroe, and was for years a traveling salesman, representing the Pet Milk corporation and the American Sugar company. He is well known in this area, and is familiarly known as "Pops."

W. Hodge will be in charge of the wholesale sales and Miss Lorena Bedsole will be in charge of the retail sales.

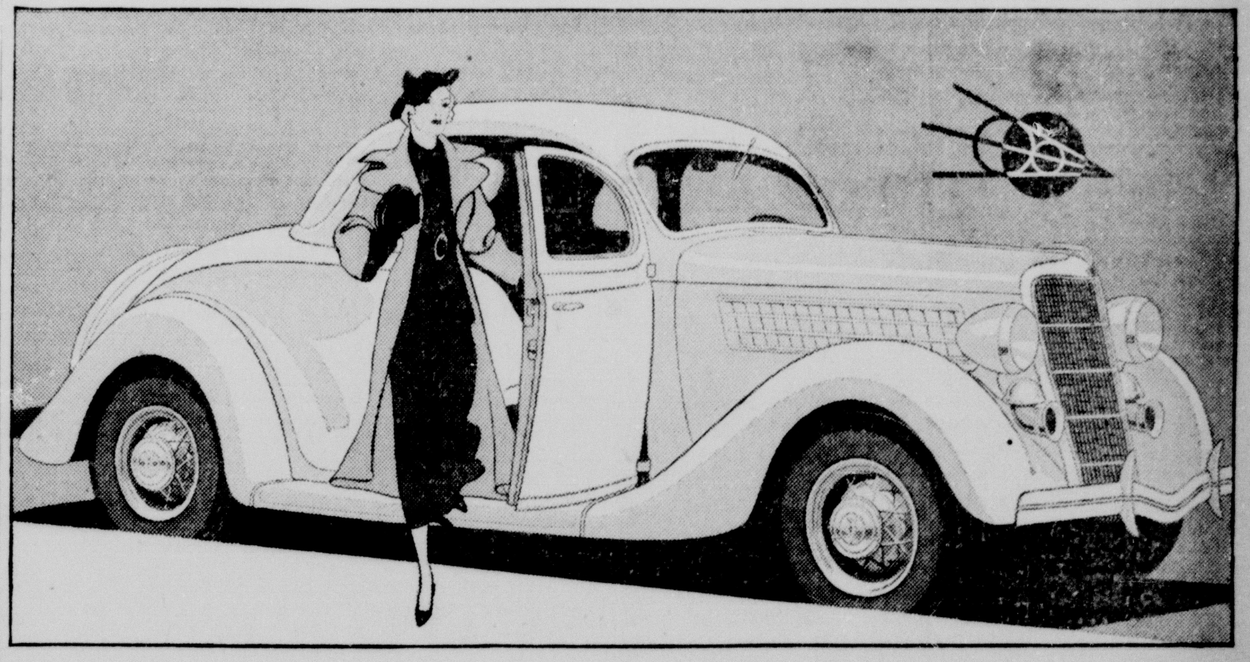
FORD V-8 FOR 1935



A Distinctive, Modern Car for the Woman Motorist

To the power, speed and brilliant performance of the Ford V-8, there have been added a new beauty, a new luxury—and a marvelous riding ease.

The Ford V-8 has always been a favorite with men. You've heard the men in your family talk about it. "That's a great car," they have said. "Eighty miles an hour when you want it, a smooth, powerful engine, swift pick-up and the ability to 'take it' all day long."

But the New Ford V-8 is a car in which women, too, can take a still keener pride and delight. A more beautiful car, with modern style in every line and appointment.

A "FRONT-SEAT RIDE" FOR BACK-SEAT PASSENGERS

In the New 1935 Ford V-8 you ride forward—nearer the center of the car. You ride on longer, more flexible springs. All weight is distributed to give Center-Poise. The back seat is roomy, restful and relaxing—the ride becomes a smooth and flowing glide at any speed, on any kind of road.

THE ROOMIEST, MOST COMFORTABLE FORD EVER BUILT AND THE EASIEST TO DRIVE

The New Ford is a bigger car than any previous Ford. It has wider doors and is lower—easier to step in and out. Front seats are 4 to 5½ inches wider. New, larger space is provided behind the rear seat for suitcases and bags, thus avoiding crowding of passengers.

New features make the Ford V-8 still easier for women to drive. There is a new soft clutch which requires less foot pressure. The brakes also require less pressure, although they are more powerful and stop the car more quickly and smoothly than ever before. New steering mechanism makes the car easier to handle.

STYLE THAT WOMEN WILL ADMIRE

A glance will tell you that the New Ford is just about the handsomest car you have ever seen. Its lines are modern, graceful, without being freakish. Its colors are new and attractive. It is a car that women will stop to admire as readily as they do a new gown.

LUXURIOUS APPOINTMENTS

Modern ideas in design and coloring are seen in the car interiors. New upholstery with narrow piping and pillowed seats; hardware in tones to match upholstery; a new, more convenient and very modern instrument panel; curved gear shift lever which adds to the comfort of passengers in the front seat; double sun visors; doors which are hinged in front and swing forward; Clear-Vision Ventilation—these are some of the features which make these new cars so distinctive.

FORD V-8 RELIABILITY AND SAFETY

Every Ford V-8 for 1935 has Safety Glass all around—in doors and windows—at no additional cost. Every car has welded all-steel body. And, of course, every Ford has the powerful and reliable V-8 engine which makes the car such a satisfaction to drive as well as economical to operate.

We invite you to drive this New Ford V-8 and see for yourself why it is the ideal car for women motorists.

Don't Deface Ideals

The practice that certain writers have of digging into the histories of great men and women, unearthing their faults, their weaknesses, and parading these defects, emphasizing them, magnifying them, is all very interesting, but where does it get us?

Sometime ago, after a leading minister of a certain denomination had done something just too bad, a writer observed: "Well, that proves that ministers, too, are merely human."

Of course, ministers are human. Of course every member of the human race is human. Of course, all the great men and the great women were human or are human. Every person who comes to this earth is human and is subject to the temptations of human life. Perhaps we might say that the reason why human beings are here is that they are human.

But is a human being to be judged by his faults, his weaknesses, by what he fails to accomplish; or is he to be graded by his virtues, by his accomplishments? Is it a good thing, after a person has done a good deed or made a good fight, to say of him, "Yes, but he was ill-tempered?" Perhaps the critic himself is ill-tempered, too, and in addition to that, he has never done anything worthwhile.

If a man has climbed a high, difficult mountain peak, and has planted a standard there, are you going to think about his achievement, or of the fact that he fell down a certain number of times during the climb? If a man builds a shining light house on a dangerous reef, are you going to think of what he did for mankind or about the talk that he got soused every now and then while striving for his objective?

Men and women who do worthwhile things in this world, do them in spite of their weaknesses. It is for that they should have credit. Persons who have shown us that great things can be done by weak mortals, deserve our approval of their accomplishments. There is no perfect person in this world. There is no person that does not do wrong. One may be imperfect in one direction, another imperfect in another direction. Yet what is the sense in mulling over a man's imperfections? George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and other shining lights of history, had their frailties, but they were great in spite of their imperfections. Their greatness shines the more because of the contrast with the faults, which only serve to emphasize the fact that they were big enough to surmount these and do worthwhile things in the cause of human progress. If we wish to ponder frailties, there are some much closer home we can dwell upon.

We can take comfort from the human weaknesses of great persons, their frailties prove that they are in our class. They are not separate and apart from us, so high up that we can never have any hope of doing just as well as they did. They are frail and weak in some of their ways, just as we are frail and weak in some of ours. Fine business! That encourages us. They are not gods and goddesses, but men and women like us. If they can go places, then we can go places; if they can move upward in spite of their handicaps, then we can move upward in spite of our handicaps.

What nonsense to spend valuable time writing and reading of the evils of men and women who have done great things! It would be far better to familiarize ourselves with the progress they have made, with the fine deeds they have done. Such contemplation might inspire us to follow their example. If they could make headway in spite of their human defects, we can make headway in spite of our human defects.

We need to get the habit of hero worship and of heroine worship. That principle encourages and inspires more persons to be heroes and heroines; it encourages and inspires ourselves, too.

CATCH CANCER EARLY

One of the most dangerous things about cancer is that people have been too thoroughly persuaded that it is utterly incurable. Feeling that way about it, and fearing the malady so greatly, many people fail to seek medical attention in time—and their fear of an incurable disease is translated into fact.

Dr. Ira I. Kaplan, director of the New York City Cancer institute, remarked recently that fully 40 per cent of the cancer cases now being cared for as hopeless would not be in that state if patients were educated to seek aid from the proper sources in time.

In order to provide that education, New York health authorities designated the past month as "Cancer month." Health authorities are convinced that if both public and doctors can be educated to recognize the first danger signals of cancer, and if the public can be safe-guarded from quacks, the cancer death rate can be reduced.

More Truth Than Poetry

THE AGE OF MIRACLES

Guides in the woods of Colorado insist that they have seen herds of deer wearing antlers.

I know that feminism
Is spreading wide and far;
Girls win with ease
Their law degrees
And practice at the bar.
They've learned the art of healing,
They operate great shops,
In every line
The creatures shine
Excepting that of cops.

And further evidences
Have lately come to light,
Though you may doubt,
With jeer, and flout
What I am going to write.
Somewhere in Colorado
Good trusty guides avow
That does appear
Both far and near
Arrayed in antlers now.

And thus across the prairies
Has feminism spread;
From old Pike's Peak
To Cripple Creek
It's forging on ahead.
And if this thing continues,
Some not far distant day
Around the girth
Of this wide earth
All sex will pass away

THE NEXT STEP

Man has succeeded in making cloth from trees, but creating figs from thistles appears to be still in the experimental stage.

PARADISE ENOW

Falls In Pool To Regain Youth

By BRUCE CATTON

Thorne Smith, who introduced a new brand of ribald insanity to the American novel, died some months ago. But he left one practically completed manuscript behind him, and this has been published. The result is a sprightly new novel, "The Glorious Pool."

If you are a Thorne Smith devotee, you won't need to be told about his style. If you aren't, however, a word of warning is due, lest you pick up a hot potato by mistake.

Let it be said, then, that Mr. Smith's books are an amazing blend of hilarious acceptance of impossible happenings—such as ghosts, and Greek statues which can come to life—and a broad and lusty impropriety.

If you shock easily, leave them alone. If you don't, you'll find a great many laughs in them.

"The Glorious Pool" deals with a 60-year-old New York business man, who calls on his mistress to celebrate the 25th anniversary of their—ah, liaison. They are both slightly decrepit and battle-scarred, but they tumble into a pool in her backyard and the pool has somehow become enchanted, so that both unexpectedly recover their youth.

Then things start happening. The house catches fire. While the French maid entertains the firemen, the rejuvenated couple borrow a hook and ladder truck and go adventuring.

The plot grows slightly complicated at this point, and more than slightly dizzy, but it's all pretty funny; and if you like humor so broad that you could drive a truck on it, here it is.

New Deal In Washington

WASHINGTON.—Among those who have little time to look back at a crowded year 1934, but prefer to look ahead at a 1935 that will be even more eventful, is found the corps of Washington correspondents whose business it is to supply you with exclusive forecasts, interpretation, behind-the-scenes narratives, and gossip. The parade of events here never slows down, which makes it the absorbing panorama it is, especially during the last two or three years.

But even a Washington correspondent with eyes on (and nose in) the future, may be pardoned just a moment to scan quickly back over 1934. It helps give perspective on 1935, helps reassure one that there have been plenty of times when he was out ahead of the parade with "advance dope" that was not only interesting, but really important.

Beats On Parade

For instance, "The New Deal in Washington" can look back on Dec. 13 and Dec. 23, 1933, when it was able to give you the first news of the effort to start a senate munitions inquiry, the investigation which has since reverberated through the government and the nation from the White House down. Other "beats" that cropped up in this column in 1934 (and remember that the "beat" or exclusive story is the manna of life to all good reporters):

Jan. 2—Alcohol Control administration to lift quota on all Canadian liquor.

Jan. 6—First definite prediction of Roosevelt's plan to take $4,000,000,000 profit for Treasury through dollar devaluation.

Jan. 8—U. S. to make rum in Virgin Islands.

Feb. 20—Government sets out to require standard labeling for canned goods.

March 17—Plot to oust Dr. Willard Thorp, chief of Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

March 27—First inside story of Harriman Hosiery Mills labor dispute, which later became a national issue.

First On Wirt Party

April 11—The first and exclusive story of what actually happened at the famous Dr. Wirt dinner party.

April 28—Advance outline of the Federal Housing Administration plan.

May 4—"Roosevelt will have more strength in the next senate than any president has had since George Washington."

May 31—Secret visit of John Maynard Keynes to White House and what he told Roosevelt. Later dispatches credit him with influencing New Deal spending program.

June 20—Johnson succumbs to the professors, who move into NRA to find out what's wrong.

Richberg For Johnson

July 6—First inside story of Johnson's decline and the unannounced rise of Richberg.

July 12—Exposure of unofficial postoffice claim of a surplus, later made official claim by Farley.

July 28—Advance outline of Cuban reciprocity treaty.

Aug. 14—First compilation of repayable loans among New Deal "expenditures."

Aug. 20—First inside story of Federal Housing administration mess.

Oct. 18—Roosevelt decides to take unemployed off cash dole and give them work.

Oct. 19 — Administration shelves James Harvey Rogers and Professor Warren, the "gold wizards."

Oct. 22—NRA to break down code price-fixing and production control as soon as possible.

And Now FOR '35

Nov. 2—Inside story of why President Hutchins of University of Chicago did not join the New Deal.

Nov. 23—Senate munitions committee dead broke; investigators work without pay.

Nov. 30—Internal explosions on National Industrial Recovery board.

Dec. 14—How close munitions investigation was coming to the administration as White House made apparent move to "take the play away" from Senate.

Dec. 20—Peek deal for cotton to Hitler has fallen through.

It's such things that make up a full year for Washington correspondents, and every one of us is betting that there will be an even fuller measure of excitement in 1935 on which to try the keenness of eyes and the length of noses. Which is all any newspaperman has any right to ask.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

THE LADY OF SEVEN LEAGUE LEGS.—Giovanna Agnese of Milane was 18 years old when she started her exhibition tour of Europe. She is described as a charming, accomplished young lady, normal in every respect except for her limbs which were the size of those of a giant. She was an accomplished linguist, and a public favorite for many years. The gossip columns of the day linked her intimately with four European rulers, the kings of Poland, Prussia, Spain and Portugal. My picture was drawn from an old print which in the 18th century enjoyed wide circulation through Europe.

HAMBONE'S MEDITATIONS

By Alley

(Copyright, 1935, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Lights of New York

By Paul Harrison

NEW YORK.—Personal column: Noel Coward was so named because his birth was expected on Christmas day. However, the stork beat Santa Claus to the chimney. First song he ever wrote was when he was nine and a member of the Chapel Royal choir at Clapham, England. The lyric began: "We're six dirty little choir boys, with really frightful minds. . ."

Bert Lahr, the comedian, is the most pessimistic fellow I've met starring on Broadway now, but believes maybe he ought to have gone into some other business. . . . Eddie Cantor was petrified with fright in his first appearance in his first vaudeville act at Hammerstein's Victoria. As a result, he sang in a nervous, staccato fashion and expected the curtain to be dropped on his neck. But the audience liked it, and Cantor inadvertently had discovered what all entertainers most desire—a distinctive style.

Shelia Barrett, the mimic, is the quickest with suave repartee of any gal in show business. . . . Ethel Merman is the grandest slangstress. A few years ago she literally shrugged herself out of a job as a stenographer and into a night club role. Other stenographers could sing, maybe, but they couldn't put over a song with their shoulders. . . . Jimmy Cagney, tough guy of the screen, collects antique furniture, reads poetry, paints a little, doesn't smoke or drink. Broadway finds he hasn't changed much since the days when he was a bellhop at the Friars' club here, and later a chorus boy.

Climax Meetings

The most dramatic thing that ever happened to Marc Connelly, the dramatist, were two meetings with Daniel Frohman. Thirty-eight years ago Connelly and his father chanced into Frohman's office. The producer said: "Come here, little boy," and opened a little door in the wall that looked down on the busy stage of the theater. That glimpse put the theater into Connelly's blood. . . . Four or five years ago he sat again in Frohman's office, and the old man remembered. He rose and swung open the same trap door. "Come here, little boy," he said.

George Gershwin, who writes music, and Ira Gershwin, who writes lyrics, have been driven nearly mad by the recurrent query: Which comes first in a song, the words or the tune? Fact is that there's no rule about it; the brothers work both ways. Incidentally, Ira was the first lyricist to put a seven-syllable word into a popular song. The word was "incompatibility;" the number, "I Don't Think I'll Fall in Love Today."

Sally Rand has slept on benches in Central park and eaten 10-cent dinners in the Automat. Used to make her own clothes and walk 40 blocks to save a nickel. She went shopping the other day and bought herself an ermine coat for Christmas. . . . Smoothest of magicians is Cardini, who never says a word as he goes through his amazing sleight-of-hand routines. He's unhappy, though; wants to be a legitimate actor, so that he can have lines to speak.

Romance

Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler are in town. In all the years both were in New York before their marriage, they hadn't met, nor had either seen the other on the stage. Jolson saw her in Chicago, proposed in San Francisco. He wasn't sure about the size of her finger, so bought three wedding rings before they went to get married. . . . Two forgotten episodes in the career of Walter Huston: Once played professional hockey for $15 a week while trying to get a job as an actor. Wrote songs, too, and introduced them in vaudeville. . . .

Lillian Gish, who made so many pictures, never goes to the movies. Hardly ever, anyway; a couple of years ago she saw some of her old movies re-run. One of those films was "Hearts of the World." . . . Courtney Burr, the producer, lost a million dollars when he was 18. He was a bank clerk, and left a package of bonds and cash in an office building. Found it, though. His next biggest thrill was seconding a friend in a formal duel in Poland in 1923. Nobody was hurt, but it was pretty taut drama.

Letter From L. B. Faulk Is Given To American Legion

Believed to have been the last letter written by First Lt. Leonidas Barkdull Faulk, son of Dr. R. W. Faulk, of Monroe, before he was reported missing in action in France during the World war, a letter postmarked in France Jan. 17, 1918, and addressed to R. E. Heap, then inspector of Monroe police, has been given by Mr. Heap to Leonidas Barkdull Faulk post of the American Legion.

The letter expresses thanks to Mr. Heap for the gift of a cake he sent to Lieutenant Faulk, and asserts that the writer "will be glad when I can get back to a game of dominoes with the crowd." Mr. Heap and the lieutenant had played dominoes together in the club room of a lodge.

The letter and the envelope in which it was sent have been framed and will be placed on the wall of the post's memorial home, it was learned from Isador Liebreich, post commander.

Lieutenant Faulk was born November 21, 1889, it was learned from Charles M. Mitchell, post historian. He attended Monroe city schools and graduated from the former city high school. He attended the University of Virginia and graduated from the medical school of Tulane university in 1912.

Shortly after September 1, 1917, after practicing his profession here for about five years, Lieutenant Faulk sailed for France as a lieutenant of the first grade of the United States army medical corps. He was first assigned to duty at an outpost of the British army near the Somme.

A few days after reporting to the front, Lieutenant Faulk was gassed. After receiving treatment for a brief period, he returned to the front, and "on March 24, 1918, he received a mortal wound, his death environed by an impenetrable mystery."

Lieutenant Faulk's letter which will occupy a place of honor in the memorial home was postmarked at field postoffice No. 56, and was stamped by censor No. 2024. The letter follows:

"France,

"Mr. R. E. Heap,
"Monroe, La.,
"Dear Mr. Heap:

"Your package sent to me by Mr. Hill of New Orleans received today, and I thank you ever so much. It is good to be remembered by old friends when one is so far away from home. Am having some very wonderful experiences over here, but will be glad when I can get back to a game of dominoes with the crowd.

"With best wishes to you and many thanks for the cake,
"Yours sincerely,
"L. B. FAULK."

TEXANS SEEK TO DRILL GAS WELLS

U. S. Engineer Asks That Any Objections Be Filed At Once

A communication received here Saturday from Major Lunsford E. Oliver, federal district engineer at Vicksburg, called attention to an application for drilling gas wells in Bayou Bartholomew and requested those who might have objections to file them immediately. The communication was as follows:

"J. E. Farrell and others of Fort Worth, Texas, have submitted an application to this office for permit to drill two gas wells in the old bed of Bayou Bartholomew, southwest of Perryville, La., well No. 1 to be located 0.4 mile below the mouth of Little Bayous Boeuf and well No. 2 0.6 mile above the old Bayou DeSiard outlet, 11.8 miles and 8.1 miles, respectively, above the mouth along the old channel.

"Plans submitted by the applicant show temporary drilling rigs, set on 24-footx68-foot platforms, supported on piling at the left water's edge and 10 feet above present low water level, the temporary derricks to be replaced by welded steel towers after the wells are completed, the permanent towers to extend above the 1932 high water level. Due to the cut-off and controlling levee crossing the narrow neck of the bayou in Section 15, township 20 north, range four east, Navigation on the main stream would not be adversely affected.

"Plans may be seen at the United States engineer office, postoffice building, Vicksburg, Miss., the United States engineer office, lock and dam No. 4, Monroe, La., or the office of the applicant in the Waggoner building, Fort Worth, Texas.

"All interested parties are requested to communicate with the undersigned expressing any objection to the proposed work of suggesting any changes that may be considerable desirable. It is requested that such communications be forwarded so as to reach this office not later than January 11, 1935."

Poet Laureate Of The World

Sir Rudyard Kipling, 'Written Out' After Full Literary Life, Rests On Laurels, Seldom Breaks Silence

By Milton Bronner

LONDON, Jan. 5—Rudyard Kipling, his birthday on December 30 bringing him to within one year of the time-honored three score and ten, presents the literary enigma of the century.

Literally millions of readers throughout the world would mob the publishers for first editions if he should announce a new book of fact, fiction or verse. Yet for nearly ten years he hasn't produced anything of importance, his efforts at fiction following the World war having, apparently, convinced him that he had no new stories to tell his vast audience.

Even in the United States, about which Kipling often has expressed derogatory views, a literary swan song would be greeted enthusiastically. For it was in the United States that the man who often has been called "the Poet Laureate of the world" scored some of his earliest success; where he met Caroline Starr Balesteir of Vermont and made her Mrs. Kipling; and where he collaborated with her brother in writing a novel, "The Naulahka."

Illness Won Sympathy

The tribute paid to him when he was stricken with pneumonia in a New York hotel years ago was such as has never been extended to any private citizen. The entire nation seemed to be watching and praying at his bedside. The newspapers in all their editions carried the latest bulletins issued by the doctors and a sigh of relief went up when Kipling successfully passed the crisis and went on to complete convalescence. In later years he was to repay this friendliness in an ill manner.

Kipling was born at Bombay, India, December 30, 1865. Art was in his blood. His father John Lockwood Kipling, had been professor of architectural sculpture in the Bombay school of art and later was curator of the Indian government museum in Lahore. His mother was Alice MacDonald of Birmingham, England, whose sisters respectively wed two famous English artists, Sir E. Burne-Jones and Sir Edmund Poynter.

Went to England at 6

At the age of 6 Kipling was sent back to England to live with relatives. He was lonely and homesick and this side of his life was echoed in two of his famous short stories, "Baa Baa Black Sheep" and "Wee Willie Winkle." At 13 he attended the United Services college at Westward Ho in Devonshire. Later he was to describe his life there in his book "Stalky and Co." in which he himself figured as "Beetle." When he was 16 and, still at school, his proud father printed for private circulation in Lahore a small volume of his verses.

At the age of 17 Kipling returned to the land of his birth and became sub-editor of the Civil and Military Gazette of Lahore. He celebrated his coming of age in 1886 by publishing his first regular book, "Departmental Ditties," composed of light satirical verse dealing with the life of the English in India. Now he had found himself and in rapid succession he wrote a large number of his best short stories which were issued in tiny books bound in yellow paper covers and on sale in all railway stations in India. Some of these were sent back to England by enthusiastic readers and soon both English and American collections of his stories were published. He sprang into fame almost over night.

Son's Death Shocked Him

His place in literature was now fixed securely, although he was not without his critics. There were those who said he could write about anything that his eyes could see, but that he could not feel with his heart. To this the reply was the unusually tender "They" and "The Brushwood Boy." Similarly there were those who denied that he wrote really great poetry. His were merely banjo tunes. But his great "Recessional" silenced all that. Life seemed to have filled Kipling's cup up to full measure with good fortune. He settled down comfortably in his residence, Bateman's at Burwash, Sussex, England. He got the Nobel prize for literature in 1907.

Then the World war broke out, Kipling became a sort of unofficial observer and wrote books on what he saw. He also poured forth verses celebrating the glory of England and his intense love of France. Then came the blow that struck him down. His only son and heir, John Kipling, 18, was a second lieutenant in the Irish Guards and was killed in the savage fighting at Loos. In later years, as a sort of verbal cenotaph, Kipling wrote a history of the Irish Guards during the war. Since then he had written other fiction, but there was nothing new in it. He simply repeated himself. There were signs that he had written himself out.

Irritated Canadians

A man of his forthright temperament and his strong prejudices was bound to be mixed up in storms and Kipling got his share. Years ago he aroused the wrath of Canadians when he called Canada "Our Lady of the Snows." Canadians took this as a slam at their climate, did not like it and said so.

GROTTO MEET DELAYED

Announcement was made Saturday that the meeting of Teflis Grotto, scheduled for tonight for the purpose of electing officers, has been indefinitely postponed. It is probable that a new date for the meeting will be fixed within a short time.

A volume of more than 1,200 pages would be required to list the number of chemical substances which can be extracted from petroleum.

Hixon and Mrs. E. T. Lee. Decorations of silver bells, white candles and southern smilax were used throughout the spacious living room and dining room. Standing in the receiving line beside the young bride were her mother, Mrs. Epsie Talbert, Mrs. Rodger Boughton, Mrs. Bacle, Mrs. Griffing and Mrs. W. E. Hixon. The guests were ushered into the dining room, where Mrs. Lee poured hot chocolate which was served by Misses Janette Hixon and Sara Elizabeth DeMoss beautifully attired in evening dresses. Fifty-seven guests were present and brought lovely and useful gifts to the bride whose marriage to Mr. Felix Boughton took place December 23. The couple are making their home at Minden.

Friends of Miss Katie Len Bell will be surprised to learn of her marriage to Mr. George Wright Heady of Owensboro, Ky., on Sunday afternoon, December 30, in the home of Mrs. D. C. Wright. Miss Bell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Bell of Mangham and at the time of her marriage was a member of the Mangham high school faculty. The young couple make their home in Owensboro, K

ritish Lion May Roar Or Just Purr At Arms Makers

LONDON, Jan. 5. — Practically forced by the revelations brought out at Washington by the senate committee investigating the munitions racket, the national government of Great Britain has announced its intention also to have an investigation. It will probably be by a royal commission. But by its terms of reference it will not go to the roots of the matter revealed at Washington.

Apparently:

(1) There is to be no follow-up to the charges made at Washington that British and American munition-makers had a partnership.

(2) There is to be no follow-up of the allegation that the international armaments ring brought pressure to bear to defeat the disarmament conference.

(3) There is to be no follow-up on the charges that American, British and other armaments makers played one nation against another in order to sell their death-dealing wares.

Editorials Ignore Facts

So far as the British public has been allowed by its newspapers to learn of what is going on at Washington, it has been deeply stirred. The Liberal and Labor party press published the evidence in pretty full details. A considerable part of the Tory press played it down. The one thing they stressed was the passing reference to King George. Indignant editorials followed this, but the writers did not take the pains to say that no more in America than in England did anybody believe that King George had made himself a salesman for British munitions manufacturers. They wholly failed to make the obvious point—that in their endeavor to sell their wares the arms peddlers even dragged the king's name into it. Taking this incident, a certain part of the press dubbed the whole Washington investigation as "a fishing expedition."

British Forewarned

In the house of commons Socialists and Liberals did their best to get the government to agree to a full investigation following American lines. But they overlooked the fact that, put on guard by what happened in Washington, most of the munitions makers of Great Britain—if such damning documents existed in their files—had had plenty of time either to remove them to a safe place or else to destroy them, so that nothing but innocuous business letters remained.

The British commission will investigate three questions which in some aspects are academic rather than realistic:

(1) To ascertain whether state monopoly in the manufacture of arms is practicable or desirable.

(2) To examine the system of government licensing and control of the sale of arms by the manufacturers of Great Britain and see whether it is effective.

(3) To discover whether improper pressure, alleged to be brought upon foreign countries to buy arms, can be avoided by state action.

No Sensation Expected

No sensational revelations can be expected from this commission. It is not intended to expose the secrets of the trade in arms. It will be given no power to examine books or documents. Furthermore, it will have the authority to hear in private evidence which it considers should be kept secret. In other words, even under the lame terms of reference under which it will work, if anything approaching hotness is reached, the commission will be able to bar out the news hounds.

The commission's main job, therefore, will be to make a report whether it is desirable that the government shall have a monopoly in the manufacture of arms or whether things will continue as they now are, with the government making some at its arsenals and big private firms making some at their own plants.

Questionnaire Creates Stir

In connection with this whole armaments and war business, another curious phenomenon is taking place in Britain. The league of nations union issued a questionnaire, which was circulated all over the island. It was intended to sound the mass of the people on their views regarding the league of nations, as a possible preserver of international peace, and also dealt with the arms traffic.

Immediately a tremendous assault was made on it by the Tory press and leaders. The papers attacked the ballot, but many were very careful not to print it so their readers could form their own opinions about it. Nevertheless, men like Lord Robert Cecil and Dr. Barnes, Anglican bishop of Birmingham, warmly approved of the referendum. About 175,000 ballots have already been signed and sent in.

The results have been as follows: 97 per cent voted that Britain should remain in the league of nations. 93.9 per cent voted in favor of arms cuts. 88.9 per cent voted in favor of the abolition of war airplanes. 94.4 per cent voted to suppress the traffic in arms. 95.3 per cent voted in favor of economic measures against an aggressor in warfare. 75.8 per cent voted in favor of military measures against such an aggressor.

CHAPTER I

Barrett Colvin, bronzed by sun-baked miles of sand, sat forward so that he might see the windows of Fifth avenue. It was a bit earlier than mid-afternoon but many windows were warm with the yellow glow that is a glare by night. The skies were sullenly low and there was a drizzle in the chilly air. The English, Barrett reflected, would call it "a dirty day." To the average New Yorker, it was "rotten weather." Those folks upon whom he had recently turned his broad back would call it "the will of Allah." Well, the faith of the east was the most comfortable but Barrett didn't share it.

He moved uneasily and lit a cigaret. It was always unsatisfactory to come back. Memories that seared his mind would leap from embers. A corner of an uptown street or an old building would brush away 10 years to make him see Marcia, his tempestuous little sister, the daughter of his father's second wife. Marcia, violent in her trap. Marcia crying, "Barry, you must help me; I've no one else!"

He had intended to help her, but with the passing of years he had been less and less certain about what he had done by putting himself between her and the storm. He had made it easy, without meaning to, for her to evade her responsibility and to live a lie.

And now Marcia was married. She had written Barrett, "Of course Dick doesn't know." And here, from her evasion, was another problem and one of the oldest ones—a problem discussed often in "Advise to the Lovelorn" columns in answers to letters usually beginning, "Shall I tell the man I am going to marry, etc." Almost always the description of the unfortunate affair ended with a wistful, "I was so young."

Barrett Colvin tossed his half-smoked cigaret from the lowered taxicab window to lean back, already wearied of civilization which is not always so ordered as it seems.

He hoped Dick Radnor deserved the devotion he had won from Marcia. The facts might so easily come out in time, Barrett reflected, and unless Dick were the man Marcia thought him to be there would be the devil to pay.

He must go up to see the boy, Marcia's boy, Barrett decided, as soon as he could manage to get away from town. Marcia did not care for him as she should and it wasn't fair to the youngster. He must have grown a good deal, Barrett reflected. It was four years—a broad four years—since he had seen the child whom Marcia had implored him to "adopt" and whom he had adopted.

Barrett Colvin felt a little tingle when the taxicab turned into a sedate old street where brown-stone-fronted houses told of other times and other manners. This was getting home. No matter how far one wandered or how insistent the call of distant countries, for every man some one house or some one woman meant "home."

The door was opened as the taxicab came to a sudden halt. Higgins, the butler, appeared, obviously excited to have "Mr. Barrett" home again. The chauffeur swung several scarred, bulging bags from the car to the walk. Higgins' eyes were fixed upon his master, his voice almost tremulous.

In a window across the street Barrett saw the imperious head of Miss Ella Sexton, saw her nod stiffly and wave a handkerchief so black-bordered as to suggest a death of yesterday.

Barrett, after bowing deeply, went up the brown stone steps of his home. So little was changed. The glimpse of Miss Ella, the characteristic tilt of her aristocratic nose, told him that she still ruled sternly and coldly over all those who waited her death.

At the door, which Higgins held open, Barrett turned again and as he did so saw a girl hurrying up the steps of Miss Ella's house. A pretty picture she made with her young grace and energy.

"One of the Thorpes?" he asked Higgins.

"No, Mr. Barrett. That is Miss Elinor Stafford. She's grown a deal these four years, sir."

Barrett nodded. His smile widened. He remembered Elinor Stafford dimly as a gawky youngster with a brace on her teeth, a youngster with an especial talent for stumbling. He had met her at Miss Ella's house—the golden shrine for all those relatives who felt they should be remembered in the Sexton will.

The hall and Higgins shutting the world away with a closed door. How good it was to be home! The same dimed, lovely tapestry. The same ancient hat rack that Barrett kept because, looking at it, he could sometimes fancy he saw his father's hat on the black marble surface, his mother's small gloves and card case.

"It's good to be here again, Higgins."

"And it's good to have you, sir!"

Barrett saw that Higgins' eyes held tears and he laid a strong hand on the old man's arm. With a gentleness that, combined with his strength, beckoned too many weak mortals his way, Barrett asked, "I hope you've been well, Higgins?"

"Yes, Mr. Barrett. Now and again a bit lonely—not that I mean to complain, sir! I think you'll find everything as you want it, Mr. Barrett."

"I'm certain everything's in fine shape."

"The harbor was foggy, I presume, sir?" Higgins asked as he took Barrett's coat, weighted by the wet in the day's air.

"Pretty thick—"

BARRETT COLVIN

ELINOR STAFFORD

"Quite four hours late, you are, sir; I've been watching by the window."

"Lucky to get in, at all."

"I presume so. You've lunched, sir?"

"Yes; thought I'd better. By the by, are there any letters?"

"A number, sir. On your desk--"

A few minutes later when Barrett was poking through his mail—frankly and naively surprised at its bulk—Marcia came hurrying in. "Darling!" she called from the doorway of the big, dark room. He turned, rose and she was in his arms, crying, laughing, clinging to him.

"The same huge thing," she exclaimed breathlessly, standing away, "and so famous, dear! You don't know what you're in for! I haven't been to a dinner this winter that someone hasn't said, 'So Barrett Colvin is your brother? How remarkable!' I don't suppose I do look as though I could possibly be related to anyone so brainy. Oh, it is good to see you, dear!"

She pressed close again and for a moment hid her face against the top button of his waistcoat. Then she drew away and raised her face to let him see her smile and her misted eyes.

"I'm so frightfully happy," she admitted. "Dick's such a perfect husband! And to think you haven't even met him! Darling—may I have a cocktail?"

Barrett rang for Higgins, at the same time studying Marcia. She had grown lean, hungry-looking, nervous. He hadn't remembered those sudden, angular mannerisms.

"You're pretty stingy, Marcia," he said perplexedly.

"Darling, everyone is! You'll notice it. May I have a cigaret? Thank you so much. I've been tearing all day. Always so much to do—" She dropped to a chair as Higgins appeared at the doorway. "Good afternoon, Higgins. Will you bring me a Manhattan?"

Higgins murmured greeting, bowed and departed. Marcia sat forward on her chair.

"I want to talk to you about a lot of things, Barrett. Are you too frightfully tired?"

"Not at all," he answered and tried valiantly to stifle the conviction that she would have gone on, no matter what his answer.

"Well, in the first place," she began, and then paused. She drew a deep, unsteady breath, sat forward and continued. "I've been—uncomfortable lately about—what happened before you went away. It's bothered me more than ever before. More even than when I realized—!"

Again she paused. Barrett's eyes grew sympathetic. He knew what it must cost her to say all this.

Marcia went on again. "When I realized," she repeated, moistening her full, scarlet-tinted lips, "about—Lon Moore—what a fool I'd been—everything!"

Barrett glanced at the hand holding her cigaret, noticed how it shook and glanced quickly away. "Poor child!" he thought. "Poor child!" The pain of others always aroused in him a blend of fierceness, tenderness and strength.

Marcia drew another deep breath before going on with her story. "Dick's extremely conservative. All his life his father went to his office at exactly 9 each morning and left it at the stroke of 4. He never varied. And Dick's mother still feels that no 'lady' appears on the streets before 6 in the evening with a bare throat. She wears those funny little boned net collars. Dick adores her and—oh, I know it all sounds terribly mixed up!" She sagged back for a second. "I can't seem to tell the story but—they're that way, all of them, about everything! Never getting away from the path of what they're supposed to do. I wish I could make you understand!"

"I think I follow better than you suppose," Barrett put in gently.

"I hope so. Barrett, I'm so terribly alone!"

It was Marcia's old cry, always voiced while someone else shouldered her burdens. "You see," she went on, "for a man, Dick has lived with such decency. He's absolutely certain I was completely innocent and inexperienced when we were married. Oh, Barrett, if he knew the truth he'd never get over it! Never! I'm afraid to risk it. I—I can't live without Dick—now."

Her eyes blurred. Barrett saw her lips tremble. "But what is it that's set you to thinking about all this?" he asked, leaning toward her.

"Well, partly it's seeing so much of Dick's family and finding out how they feel about things. The Radnors are so truthful it's almost a trial to dine with them. The other day Dick found a new servant had lied and—he dismissed her!"

"He didn't love her," Barrett pointed out, smiling a little.

"No, but could he love anyone who lied?" Marcia questioned, a break in her voice. She went on quickly without waiting for an answer. "But that's only part of it. In January I'm going to have a child!"

"My dear!" Barrett leaned forward to lay a hand upon hers. "I'm so happy for you!"

She smiled and for a moment the smile dispelled the somberness that could so easily eclipse her dark, Spanish beauty. Her hand turned beneath his to grip his fingers.

"Thanks, Barry. Sweet of you. But what I wanted to say—Dick's—my child—must not be threatened!"

"How?" he asked, perplexed. "I don't follow you."

"Well, Mr. Dexter brought the boy to town the other day," she stated.

"But I don't see—"

"He brought him to see me. He presented himself—and the child—in the most assured manner. Dwight was away, thank heaven! A new maid whom I dismissed immediately let him in. Mr. Dexter said he thought I would want to see my brother's ward. There was something in the way he said it, Barry—"

"I'll attend to that," Barrett promised angrily. "What happened?"

"Well, he said your check for his salary had been delayed and that he needed the money."

"He lied. Did you give him anything?"

"Yes. All I had at the moment. I think a little over $200—"

"That was very foolish, dear," Barrett commented levelly. He stared, frowning, at a rug at his feet.

"I was in terror for fear he'd stay until Dick came. There's a strong family resemblance about the boy. He looks so much like you, Barrett. He's going to be tall and lean and strong and he has the same square chin. Anyone seeing him would notcie it. They couldn't fail to. I want you to—get him out of the country—"

She leaned toward her half-brother. "Barry—you'll help me?" she asked. She added, weakly, "There's no one else to whom I can turn. No one else!"

Barrett rose to his feet to pace the room. He was aware of Higgins entering, carrying a shaker and tall-stemmed glass on a tray, of Higgins mending the fire and tip-toing away. Marcia, a small, smouldering, dark beauty, sagged back in the chair she made seem large. She sipped her cocktail, set it down on a nearby table, and the click of glass meeting mahogany was loud in the heavy stillness.

At last Barrett spoke. "I can't promise you anything," he said almost harshly. "I'll have to see what is best for the boy."

"Barry, you're not going to be unreasonable about this?" she asked plaintively.

He smiled a little mirthlessly. Anyone who dared to oppose Marcia was invariably "unreasonable." But, poor child, that was not her fault. She had been pampered, petted ,indulged absurdly, and that fact had made her tragedy.

"I must do what I feel to be fair to the boy," Barrett repeated, "and I'll start by firing Dexter," he ended grimly.

"If people see him and hear he's your adopted son they'll think he's—more than adopted," Marcia pointed out. "He looks—so like you now!"

"I know that," Barrett agreed. "I've always known it. We have strong characteristics as a family. But I'm not worrying about that, Marcia. I want to be certain to do the thing that is best for you, for him, for everyone."

"Oh," she murmured miserably. For a second she closed her eyes. Opening them, she glanced at a small, jeweled watch that ticked against her wrist. She rose quickly and Barrett rose. "I must be off," she said in almost her natural way. "We've a dinner engagement. And, dear, when are you coming to see us? Not that I quite know when you're free, but I'll look it up and let you know. Will you come to dinner?"

"Of course."

"We haven't time now to settle anything but I know you'll come to my view point. You'll realize it's the only one!"

"We'll see. I'm only trying to be fair."

"You won't be fair to me if you keep me in terror!" she contested hotly.

"I think we'd better not discuss it now, dear," he said firmly. She raised her slender shoulders. Her chin went high. Without a word she turned toward the hall.

Frowning, he followed her unhappily. He saw her pick up a pair of gloves from the table, watched her pull them on with two sharp tugs. He hoped Marcia wasn't going to leave him angry. He had looked forward eagerly to seeing her, his small half-sister and only relative. Stifling a sigh, he stared down at her, so small, so seemingly frail but capable, he knew, of bitterness and artfully wrought plans for revenge.

She raised her heavy eyelids for a moment to give him an insolent, chill glance. Then she melted, to cling to him sobbing and laughing.

"I am a beast, Barry! But—you must help me!"

"I do want to help you, dear," he assured her. He patted her shoulder reassuringly.

"Will you" (she mopped her dark eyes) "come and have a long talk with me—soon?"

"Whenever you have a free moment, telephone and I'll come running!" he promised.

"Barry, you are so sweet!" she broke out and, to his embarrassment, kissed his big, tanned hand. She had always been as extravagant in showing love as hate. Barrett wished he had not had to remember that fact.

He held her mink coat a moment later. "I worry, too, Barry," she was saying, "because the boy looks so much like you. People who hear that he's your ward will think—you know—that he is your son, hidden to save—shame—"

Marcia's back was toward him. Barrett realized she was hoping by repeating this suggestion to frighten him into exiling her son, small Gerald Moore. She should have known him better than that!"

"As I said before, Marcia," he pointed out slowly, "I realized that possibility when I adopted him. As a family we are a rather pronounced type. But my own peace and comfort would never let me hide him."

"Oh, well—!" she flung out petulantly. He followed her down the steps, tucking a sleek rug around her knees as the chauffeur waited instructions. Standing at the open door Barrett felt the heat reaching toward him from the car in which orchids trembled in their silver vase.

Vanity case, mirror, cushions, foot rests, cigarets, lighters—all were within the car and the windows were firmly closed to keep out any chill. Barrett thought, "Unnatural and wrong. Makes too much softness, too much shielding—just as I have—"

Marcia interrupted his thoughts. "Dick is longing to meet you. You will come soon?" she asked.

"Any evening you name."

She glanced idly across the street, turned quickly to the chauffeur. "Jensen!" she said crisply, "please step across the street and ask Miss Stafford if I may drive her home—"

* * *

Barrett felt his heart rise. Coming down the steps of the house opposite was the girl he had seen before. The girl who had been "little Elinor Stafford" and an ugly duckling. She was beautiful now, he saw, as she crossed the windy street, followed by the stiffly deferential Jensen.

"I'll wager you don't remember me!" he said as she neared the curb.

"Oh, but I do!" the girl contradicted shyly yet with a flush that he did not understand. The grip of her small hand was strong and honest. Her deep violet eyes met his levelly. Barrett felt suddenly within himself a glow of an almost forgotten warmth.

"It was so kind of you, Mrs. Radnor, to offer—" the girl began.

Marcia cut her short. "Hop in, child!" she said. "I'm late now. I meet Dick down town every day to ride home with him. Isn't that incurably romantic?"

"I think it's nice," said Elinor. Barrett laughed; a laugh prompted by pleasure. It was exactly as he would like her to think. "Nice."

"Aunt Ella wants to see you, Mr. Colvin," said Elinor Stafford.

"I'll go to see her very soon," he replied, "but—you used to call me 'Barry' and I resent the change. A man should hang around to keep the home fires burning."

She smiled at him. Marcia, consulting her small watch again, murmured something about having to hurry on. The door of the car was closed, a moment later the motor purred and Barrett watched them disappear.

Elinor Stafford, he decided, was the sort of youngster one needed to meet on a day when the air was weighted by chill mist and one's temples were growing gray. She was so different from Marcia with her genius for finding tight corners and for dragging everyone near her into those corners too. Poor passionate, impulsive, blind and selfish Marcia! Well, this time he would think first of the boy who deserved first thought. After all, he and Marcia, though comparatively young, had not the years ahead of them that the child had. Marcia's child, his ward, Gerald Moore.

The house seemed strangely empty as he returned to it, rather dismal and, in spite of a comfortable temperature, a little cold.

For some reason he did not clearly understand a vision of Elinor Stafford's face remained before him. He wondered when he would see her again.

Report Of New Gas Well Is Filed Here

A report of a new gas well in Ouachita parish was filed Saturday at the Monroe office of the state conservation department. Known as Carbons Consolidated Fee No. 6, the well came in with a daily capacity of 1,472,000 cubic feet.

Tests showed the new well to have a rock pressure of 800 pounds and to have been completed at a depth of 2,299 feet. It is located in section 14, township 19 north, range five east.

GOODBYE SUCKERS!

And we say "bon voyage" to Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell, the two-timing, gold-digging manicurist heroines of Warner Bros.' comedy, "Kansas City Princess," playing today and Monday at the Capitol theater.

AT LOCAL THEATERS

AT THE PARAMOUNT—With the aid of a trio of gallant comedians, Roland Young, Alison Skipworth and Reginald Owen, who contribute outstanding performances, Bing Crosby and Kitty Carlisle have another smash hit in "Here Is My Heart," Paramount's newest musical romance, which opened at the Paramount theater yesterday.

While Crosby and Miss Carlisle, teamed a second time, provide their customary excellent performances, the three veteran troupers almost steal the picture with their hilarious antics.

Miss Carlisle plays a Russian princess, with Young, Owen and Miss Skipworth as her happy, but hapless relatives. Their unique methods of attempting to escape poverty, while living at the most expensive hotel in Monte Carlo, provide gales of laughter.

Crosby, himself, given a chance to do light comedy, turns in a classic portrayal of a wealthy radio star who turns waiter in order to be near the girl he loves. Miss Carlisle, as the princess, in playing her third consecutive leading role, is charming and proves conclusively that the studio was right in teaming her with Crosby again, following the success they scored in "She Loves Me Not."

Marian Mansfield, a newcomer with a really excellent voice, and William Frawley occupy the other important roles in the film.

The story deals with Crosby's attempts to buy from Miss Carlisle a valuable, historic pistol. To be near her, he becomes a waiter and promptly falls in love. He even buys the hotel in order to keep her from being ejected. Eventually he wins the girl, but loses the pistol, which turns out to be an imitation anyway.

Frank Tuttle directed the light, entertaining picture in his usual efficient fashion. Two Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin songs, "June in January" and "With Every Breath I Take," are hits.

Alfred Savior is credited with the original story, with Edwin Justus Mayer and Harlan Thompson doing the adaptation.

AT THE CAPITOL—Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell, the pair of charming bombshells who caused explosions of laughter in "Havana Widows," and other pictures, again are teamed as a couple of chiseling, gold digging manicurists in the Warner Bros. picture, "The Kansas City Princess," which comes to the Capitol today.

Supporting this comedy pair are such famous comedians as Hugh Herbert, Robert Armstrong, Osgood Perkins, Hobart Cavanaugh and Gordon Westcott, which places "The Kansas City Princess" high in the ranks of riotous fun makers.

The fun starts when Miss Blondell flirts with the wrong baby while her own sweetheart is out of the city, the man proving the smarter of the two, and getting away with the girl's flashy engagement ring as well as a little loving.

Knowing her gangster lover, Dynamite, and realizing her inability to explain the loss of her ring, she and her pal, Miss Farrell, beat it for New York on a convention train as two outdoor scout girls." They fall in with two small town aldermen, somewhat worse, or better, for drink, and are persuaded to join them in a trip to Gay Paree. But Dynamite is wise and has followed, bent on getting courage and his big sparkler.

On the boat the girls meet a millionaire playboy and in Paris they bust right into the aldermen's wives and the philandering wife of the millionaire and her lover, and the fur flies in a regular storm of laughter.

Robert Armstrong has the role of Dynamite, Hugh Herbert is the dumb, but droll millionaire, with Hobart Cavanaugh and T. Roy Barnes as the two small town aldermen. Gordon Westcott is the love thief who steals not only the hearts of the ladies but their jewels as well, while Osgood Perkins plays the role of a double-crossing French detective.

AT THE STRAND—A dual personality has persistently remained with Janet Gaynor, from the time in her early girlhood when she played tomboy during the better part of the day with her pals of the Philadelphia and Chicago street games, to her latest assignment in "Servants' Entrance" at the Strand theater, West Monroe, a role which also demanded two characterizations of her—namely, a rich and a poor girl.

But turning from a pampered, rich heiress, as she must in her new film with Lew Ayres, into a common scullery kitchen maid was something else. She began to sympathize with all the kitchen maids in the world, with dishes piled greasy and high from feastings they never shared.

In spite of the fact that she apprentices herself into the role of a poor house-servant in order to qualify as a housewife in her new film assignment, the line between rich and poor which she must cross again and again in the picture calls for a craftsmanship in acting technique more demanding perhaps than any Miss Gaynor has essayed heretofore.

With Lew Ayres as the chauffeur of a wealthy family, Miss Gaynor is cast as a servant in the same household.

AT THE RIALTO—Shirley Temple, sensational new "baby" star, is featured in the current attraction at the Rialto theater in West Monroe, "Baby Take A Bow." Included in the supporting cast is James Dunn, popular young actor.

The picture is heralded as one of the most entertaining stories of its kind ever to be filmed and little Shirley is as cute as can be. James Dunn portrays the role of Shirley's father, a young man who has just completed a sentence in the penitentiary and who is determined to go straight even in the face of former underworld pals and an effort by his "cop" enemies to make a crook out of him.

Through his love for his little girl and her undying faith in her "dad" he wins out and the picture comes to a dramatic though very happy ending.

It will be the attraction at the Rialto today and Monday.

RABBI BINSTOCK SPEAKS MONDAY

B'nai B'rith Devotes Itself To Wider Scope Of Activities

B'Nai B'rith, under the auspices of which Rabbi Louis Binstock will speak at the Jewish temple here Monday night at 7:15 o'clock, has been devoting itself to a wider scope of activities, Rabbi F. K. Hirsch said Saturday. These activities include service to college students and anti-defamation work.

The student activity program is spoken of as Hillel foundation, taking its name from the famous rabbi of almost 2,000 years ago. It is said to be the product of the vision and perseverance of the late Rabbi Benjamin Frankel, who established the first student service institution at Champaign, Ill., where he officiated as rabbi, in 1923.

In the following year the project was offered to the executive committee of B'nai B'rith, which undertook to beocme its sponsor. Having been approved by the international convention in 1925, this great movement was launched. Since that date foundations have been established at leading universities, including Wisconsin, Ohio State, Michigan, California, West Virginia, Texas, Cornell, Northwestern and Alabama.

Classes, discussion groups, religious services, tournaments, dramatics, social meetings and a score of other activities are included in this service. In fact, it was said, every phase of Jewish life and thought is touched upon. Wherever these foundations have been established they have received the enthusiastic approval of the institution.

It is behalf of this phase of B'nai B'rith that Rabbi Binstock will speak Monday night. Knowing his reputation, those of the temple here expect a real message.

NEGROES TO MEET

A meeting of negroes interested in "Africana," a self-help organization among members of that race, has been called for Sunday afternoon at the Savoy ballroom. Thirty-five members were taken into the organization at a meeting New Year's day and it is expected a large number of others will be enrolled Sunday.

AT THE PARAMOUNT TODAY

Bing Crosby and Kitty Carlisle in a scene from the rollicking comedy with music, "Here Is My Heart," the attraction at the Paramount theater for today and Monday. Alison Skipworth, Roland Young and Reginald Owen help out in the fun-making.

ident says everything will be done "in the spirit and intent of the American constitution." The American constitution forbids taking a man's property without "due process of law," even to give it to some gentleman who neglected to save while saving was possible.

THE PRESIDENT is sick and tired of palliatives, measures that cost money, producing no permanent good results. He says the dole, merely handing out money, is "a narcotic."

He is tired of distributing market baskets or cash or jobs cutting grass, picking up leaves and pieces of paper in parks.

He intends to create jobs that will have permanent future wealth-creating value, for the nation.

UNCLE SAM will build bigger, better roads, eliminate grade crossings, make "better use of national resources," make livelihood secure "against the major hazards and vissicitudes of life." To that will be added "the security of decent homes."

The president has his program ready. He dreads the effect of "continued dependence upon relief," which "induces a spiritual and moral disintegration, fundamentally destructive to the national fibre. To dole out relief in this way is to administer a narcotic, a subtle destroyer of the human spirit. It is in violation of the traditions of America. Work must be found for able-bodied, but destitute workers. The federal government must and shall quit this business of relief."

Very welcome those words, to all Americans including especially those that have endured the keen humiliation of hated "charity." Dante describes that when he tells that he knew how it feels to hold out the hand for bread.

INTERNATIONAL conditions disturb the president a little. He says: "I cannot with candor tell you that general international relationships outside our borders are improved. Old jealousies are resurrected, old passions aroused, new strivings for armament and power, in more than one land, rear their ugly heads."

The president hopes that "calm counsel and constructive leadership" will keep the world out of trouble.

Our own country, the president thinks, need not worry, because "our peaceful and neighborly attitude toward other nations is coming to be understood and appreciated."

YOU WILL READ every word of that message carefully, for it means a great deal to this nation, in which the central government has taken the lead in everything.

The United States treasury is the only "bank" engaged in active business. The president is the directing head, manager, ruler of every national enterprise from the far northwestern tip of Alaska, all the way to Key West.

OUTSIDE of the president's all important message you read that Colonel Lindbergh swears that the voice he heard in the cemetery, the voice of the man taking $50,000 that he paid as ransom for his child, was the voice of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, accused of kidnaping and murder.

You may see in print the twelve faces of the Lindbergh jury. Study those faces, then study the numerous photographs of Hauptmann sitting in court, and ask yourself, which faces seem more intelligent.

New Jersey's attorney general says Hauptmann is more intelligent than all the lawyers in the case put together.

Reporters say that Hauptmann "appears to enjoy posing for the photographers." That, psychiatrists will tell you, is a bad sign for Hauptmann and his chance of acquittal.

In the pictures today we have a beautiful bride of last month, Mrs. Hayden Cutler, who before her marriage to Dr. Cutler was Miss Elizabeth Biedenharn. The marriage was performed at Bethaven, handsome home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Biedenharn (Left). Home portrait by Nina Webb.

The three charming girls in the picture are the junior bridesmaids selected by Mrs. Irvin Shlenker, last week's bride, as members of her wedding entourage. Prominent Nuptial Event Claims The Interest Of Society In This Section

Claiming prominence among the interesting events of the Yuletide was the marriage of Miss Sadie Barham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Barham of Oak Ridge, La., and Mr. Thomas Oliver Files, Jr., at the Methodist church of Oak Ridge, Thursday, December the twenty-seventh, with Reverend D. C. Barr officiating.

The church was transformed into a scene of sylvan beauty with southern smilax and luxuriant ferns forming the background. Bermuda lilies, in classic formation banked the altar where myriad cathedral tapers cast a mellow glow. While the guests were assembling a nuptial concert was rendered by Mrs. R. C. Windsor, pianist. Mr. W. T. Mott sang in splendid voice, "I Love You Truly" and "At Dawning."

The wedding party walked down the white carpeted aisle to the strains of Mendelssohn. The ushers and groomsmen in formal evening attire came first. They were Mr. Jack Moseley of Monroe and Mr. Allen C. Barham, Mr. Sam Conger, Dr. G. E. Mott, Midshipman Eugene Barham.

The bridesmaids, Miss Evelyn Ponder, Miss Virginia Norris, Miss Susie Files, wore smart white crepe models with trimmings of Kolinsky fur and carried glorious sheaves of crimson roses.

The matron of honor, Mrs. J. M. Mott, wore a similar gown of white crepe and also carried crimson roses. Miss Ada Mott, maid of honor, wore a stunning model of white transparent velvet and carried an arm bouquet of red Radiance roses.

The beautiful flower girls, Genevieve White and Bonnie Marie Windsor, wore picturesque floor length frocks of white taffeta and carried Colonial bouquets of crimson blossoms.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Dr. Garnet E. Barham of Crowville, was met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man, Mr. Fred R. Files of Kilgore, Texas.

The bride's lovely type of brunette beauty was enhanced by her classic gown of ivory satin with court train and lace veil which was held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of white brides' roses and valley lilies tied with white bridal chiffon. The handkerchief she carried was of rose point lace and was used by her mother on her wedding day. The handsome diamond sunburst brooch which she wore, was a gift from her mother and a family heirloom, being a treasure from the jewel box of her maternal grandmother.

Ann Menefee of Monroe and Martha Ann Grambling of Sterlington were the diminutive train bearers. They wore frocks of white. Joseph M. Mott, Jr., whose costume of white satin was in keeping with the other members of the party, carried the wedding ring on a pillow of white satin.

Throughout the ceremony Traumeri was rendered softly by Mrs. Windsor. As a recessional Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus was used. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Those in the receiving line included the members of the wedding party, Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Files and Mrs. T. E. Barham. Mrs. Barham wore a handsome model of black lace with a corsage of crimson roses. Mrs. Files wore a lovely grey model with a corsage of pink carnations. Misses Eugenia Files, Ellie Traylor and Mrs. R. E. Barham assisted in receiving the guests.

The bride's table, overlaid with a handsome lace, was centered with a plaque of pink carnations and baby breath. Lengths of pink tulle fell

GOOD MORNING! "Another year gone," we say . . . we are wrong, the year is not gone . . . it is safely tucked away in the experiences that help to make us what we are . . . every year of our life brings experiences that ought to count in a richer personality . . . we can be thankful for what the year just passed has contributed in experiences, unhappy as well as pleasant . . . they have helped us to enlarge our life and we can look forward to what the New Year will bring in opportunity, in work, in play, in association with our fellows . . . The passing of the old year left in its wake a chain of pleasant memories that will shed fragrance along the path ahead . . . the sight of Elizabeth Biedenharn standing tall and willowy in her wedding gown taking the sacred vows in the drawing room of Bethaven drenched in the perfume distilled by hundreds of white rose petals . . . and then again the sight of her glowing, piquant face peering from under the brim of the cossack hat and rust colored suit of Russian trend, standing in the group of friends and admirers at the station where a deluge of rice showered down upon the happy pair . . . of course you heard how Elizabeth's boy friends got even with Doctor Cutler for taking her away by distributing pamphlets up and down the passenger train on which the bride and groom departed on their honeymood . . . imagine their chagrin when every passenger filed past their section, some just for curiosity and others to offer felicitations . . . scarcely had the furor died down when Bertha Alyce Masur and Irvin Shlenker walked altarward with the eyes of the social world upon them . . . breathtaking was the stream of guests, in formal evening attire, escorted to their seats by those good looking young men who wore so jauntily their white boutonnieres . . . and then later the Y. M. H. A. where champagne flowed like water with every one drinking to the health of the beautiful bride and the man of her choice . . . the orchestra played on and on until the last guest departed with reluctant feet . . . the bride's mother in silver-blue lame frock was a prominent figure in that surging crowd of beautiful women who passed to and fro like birds of brilliant plumage . . . Mrs. Hyman Leibreich in violet velvet and silver slippers . . . Mrs. Sylvan Masur, a shining figure in white satin with Marie Antoinette collar of rhinestones and over all a handsome white ermine coat . . . Mrs. David Weingarden in sea green velvet with rhinestone clips . . . Mrs. Louis Hart in Russian tunic embroidered in nail heads . . . Mrs. Leah Weise was a striking figure in black velvet with bands of gold beads of medieaval trend . . . Mrs. Simon Shlenker, Jr., in classic gown of black velvet with her young son, Simon the third at her heels . . . this handsome lad in his white satin suit and dazzling white skin added coup de grace to the wedding entourage . . . to tell you about all those good looking people at this affair would be well night impossible . . . suffice to say, however, that never in all the tides of time has there been a more fashionable gathering of the clans in this city . . . the luxurious evening mode depicted at this wedding may be the end of the depression once and for all and the beginning of a new era . . . it really is our signal to let loose the shackles, polish up the family coat of arms and once again dress to the manner born . . . The beauties of Napoleon's day were not more beautiful than some of our own glamorous women . . . Martha Kilpatrick in gleaming white satin was our idea of glamour at the New Year's Eve ball at Lakeside club . . . Anna Brown, another glamorous person whose beauty is enhanced by evening attire . . . Speaking of New Year's Eve reminds us of the crush at the Quiggles home where the rooms were almost rent asunder by the surging crowd . . . their particular brand of hospitality proved most acceptable . . . Did yesterday's romantic wedding surprise you? . . . We had always counted on seeing Nancy Lee in wedding habiliment . . . with her exquisite cameo-like features and her shining black hair she would have been a perfect dream bride in traditional white satin . . . however, she looked mighty stunning in a grey wool tailleur with all those orchids nestling under her chin when she said "I do." . . . the air is electrically charged these days . . . scarcely do we get our breath from watching one bride and groom clasp hands than another whiff of orange blossoms assails our nostrils . . . far be it from us to even whisper of those approaching events so closely guarded . . . Layton Platt tasted of his last fried chicken, southern style, until next Christmas when he again comes home from New York for his annual visit . . . Byron and Minta Vaughn piled the fried chicken high on their luncheon table Friday and urged Layton to stow away as much as he pleased of his favorite dish . . . nowhere in all the vast metropolis can a southerner find anything to equal this specialty of the house of Vaughn . . . at least Layton says so and he ought to know as he had been uselessly searching for it ever since he first went to New York five years ago . . . All those boys and girls who came home for Christmas with such glowing faces have folded their tents and silently departed . . . Mary Lee Sullivan, home for the holidays full of the enchantment of Washington . . . she vowed the days are shorter than they used to be so swiftly the time flew while in Monroe. . . . Saw a lovely young thing purchasing stacks of linens in a department store . . . somehow it smacked of wedding bells and sure enough, we discovered just yesterday that they will ring out on the eighth of February . . . so sorry we are pledged to secrecy . . . Lily Harrington off for New York for her annual brushing up on contract. . . . And so goodbye until next week when we will say good morning with great zest due to the interesting bits of news we will have for you.

SOCIETY

Mrs. James Hunter Dorman Introduced To Members Of Bastrop Society At Tea Hour

Claiming prominence among the many beautiful Yuletide events was the reception at the Morehouse Country club complimentary to one of the season's lovely brides, Mrs. James Hunter Dorman of this city with Mrs. C. N. Dalton and Miss Justine Dorman of Bastrop, the gracious hostesses.

The spacious lounge of the clubhouse was transformed into a moonlit, winter garden scene where myriad tapers cast a silvery glow. Silver, green and white was the color theme with rays of lights from the crystal chandelier overhead filtering through the maze of silver streamers. Southern smilax massed in the background further accentuated the woodland effect theme.

The tea table in the dining room attracted the throngs of beautifully gowned guests. Handsome point de Venice lace covered the table centered with a glorious plaque of white carnations and baby breath. White tapers in silver candelabrum gleamed along the board where dainty confections in silver compote were placed for the delectation of the guests.

Mrs. G. H. Dorman, mother of Mr. James Hunter Dorman, Miss Eunice Newton, aunt, and Miss Lilly Thompson, cousin of the bride, received with Miss Dorman and Mrs. Dalton. Miss Dorman wore a lovely model of blue crepe with silver accessories. Mrs. Dalton wore a becoming model of nile green with harmonizing accessories. The bride was exquisite in her wedding gown of white velvet.

Mrs. James Madison and Mrs. Leland Howard presided over the tea table from four to five o'clock, and Mrs. H. M. Bennett and Mrs. D. L. O'Neal from five to six o'clock.

The refreshments sustained the bridal theme in the ices molded in the form of silver slippers containing mint sherbert, and the white petit fours embossed in the bride's initials, E. C. D. Green and white mints were also served.

The presence of several charming matrons wearing exquisite evening models and offering courtesies, added considerably to the colorful panorama. They were Mrs. Arthur Ross, Mrs. William Douglass, Mrs. H. Webb Madison, Mrs. Ansel Ard, Mrs. Roland Bounchaud, Mrs. Farmer Benson, Mrs. H. F. Madison and Miss Virginia Robinson.

More than one hundred and fifty members of society paid their respects to the hostesses and enjoyed the pleasure of meeting the lovely guest of honor, Mrs. Dorman.

from the chandellier to the corners of the table.

Miss Lucile Huffman in crimson velvet with trimmings of brilliants, and Miss Queenie McDuffie handsomely gowned in black crepe with a corsage of red roses poured tea and coffee from silver services. The tea girls, Misses Mary Emma Binion, Lady Dalton Pipes, Emma Sue Norris, Martha Files, Blanche Thomas of Monroe and Sarah Street of McComb, Miss., wore charming evening models.

The cake, a beautiful confection, elaborately decorated in roses and valley lilies, was surmounted by a miniature bride and bridegroom. It reposed in the center of the beautifully appointed bride's table and was first cut by the bride who later changed her wedding raiment for a smart tailleur and with Mr. Files left for a brief honeymoon trip.

Mrs. Files is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Barham. She is a graduate of the Louisiana State Normal college and is a member of the Phi Kapa Sigma fraternity. Mr. Files attended the state university at Baton Rouge and is a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsil fraternity. He is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Files. The many handsome wedding gifts which were on display were an expression of affection and esteem in which this popular young couple are held. Their friends are gratified to know they will make their home in Oak Ridge.

Pratt-Harrington Nuptials

The interest of many friends is centered in the announcement of the marriage of Miss Rubye Pratt, youngest daughter of Mr. Thurston B. Pratt of Bastrop, La., to Mr. Guy Harrington of Bastrop, Saturday morning at one o'clock. The impressive ceremony was read at the Presbyterian parsonage by Rev. O'Neal in the presence of a few intimate friends and relatives. Due to the recent bereavement in the bride's family the wedding was simply performed. Mr. Harrington is employed at the paper mill at Bastrop. The young couple will make their home with the bride's father on the Bastrop-Monroe road.

At the close of business session the hostess assisted by Mrs. H. H. Reardon, served a delicious salad course with fruit cake and Russian tea to the nineteen members present. The next meeting, the first Tuesday in February, will be with Mrs. C. A. Zimmer, 111 Linderman avenue, West Monroe, La.

Mrs. Henrietta Campbell, department president of Louisiana U. S. W. V. auxiliary, and Miss Clara Youngblood, department secretary, of New Orleans, were guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Arnette during their stay in the city.

Mrs. T. L. Tippitt is now convalescing nicely from a recent serious illness. Visitors, however, will not be permitted to her room for a week or more.

Interest Of Friends In This Section Of The State Centered In Bell-Heady Nuptial Event

A wedding that claimed the interest of many friends in this section of the state was that of Miss Katie Lynn Bell, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bell of Mangham, to Mr. Joseph Wright Heady, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Heady of Owensboro, Ky., Sunday, December the thirtieth. The ceremony, charming in its quiet simplicity, was performed by Rev. L. W. Cain of the Winnsboro Methodist church.

The bride was gowned most becomingly in brown and chartreuse crepe, wearing a corsage of talisman roses and Parma violets.

Following the honeymoon the happy young couple will make their home in Owensboro, where Mr. Heady, a graduate of Kentucky university, is recognized as an authority in the field of agriculture. Mrs. Heady, who before her marriage was a member of the faculty of the Mangham high school, attended Northeast Center of L. S. U. and Louisiana State Normal, where she was a general favorite.

Only members of the bride's family were present to witness the ceremony. Mr. S. Wright of Owensboro, an uncle, was a distinguished representative of the bridegroom's family.

ALLISON GIVEN TOP RANKING BY NET ASSOCIATION

TEXAN REPLACES SHIELDS AS NO. 1 ACE IN FIRST TEN

Lott And Stoefen, Recently Turned Pro, Ranked By U. S. L. T. A.

By Bob Cavagnaro
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Wilmer L. Allison of Austin, Texas, "the man who wasn't wanted" last year on the Davis Cup team, today was placed at the head of America's 1934 "first ten" tennis players by the United States Lawn Tennis association, which included two professionals in the select group for the first time.

While Allison's selection for top-honors was a reward for his remarkable showing in the 1934 championship final against Fred Perry of England, after he had been hastily summoned to England for Davis cup duty only upon arrival to be told he wasn't wanted, the tennis fathers were obliged, by their own rule, to rank Lester Rollo Stoefen and George Martin Lott, Jr., doubles champions who recently turned pro, placing them at No. 5 and No. 6, respectively. They also retained their ranking as the top doubles team.

Guided by a rule which specifies that a player who still is an amateur on October 15, when the date for ranking consideration expires, is entitled to ranking, Walter Merrill Hall, president of the U. S. L. T. A., said:

"A fellow who has played all year as an amateur is entitled to ranking. No player who has turned professional before October 15 should be ranked." Lott and Stoefen did not relinquish their simon-pure status until several weeks after the deadline.

An almost similar situation developed in 1926 when Vincent Richards turned to the commercial field but the U. S. L. T. A. did not rank him for that year because he had joined C. C. Pyle's barnstorming troupe with Suzanne Lenglen on October 1.

For the third consecutive year, Helen Hull Jacobs of Berkeley, Calif., was placed at the top of the women's "first ten." Miss Jacobs has won the championship for three consecutive years. Sarah Palfrey Fabyn of Brookline, Mass., who was a finalist in the 1934 championship, was ranked second, and Carolin Babcock of Los Angeles, was placed at No. 3.

Allison's choice marks a promotion for the agile Texans, who was ranked No. 2 for the past two years, and makes the seventh consecutive year he has been placed in the first ten. Were it not for the omission of Lott's name from the front ranks in 1932, his choice this year would have made it nine straight for the veteran Chicagoan.

Second place was awarded to Sidney B. Wood, Jr., of New York, generally recognized as the country's foremost singles player, while Frank X. Shields, who topped the list last year and two months ago launched a career in motion pictures, dropped to No. 3.

From there on the list is barely recognizable from last year's ranking although only two of the 1933 names are missing. Gregory S. Mangin of Newark, N. J., twice former indoor champion, dropped from No. 5 to No. 13, and Keith Gledhill of Santa Barbara, Calif., No. 9 last year, was omitted because he turned pro last summer.

Arkansas Cagers Open Schedule Next Thursday

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Jan. 5.—(Special)—When the University of Arkansas Razorbacks open their conference basketball season with Rice institute at Fayetteville Jan. 10 and 11, it will mark the beginning of their 12th season of court competition in the southwest. During the last 11 years, the Razorbacks have won 70 per cent of their games with Southwest conference opponents and 72 per cent of all other basketball games.

Basketball history at the University of Arkansas began in 1923, when Francis A. Schmidt, now head coach at Ohio State university, organized a freshman team that went through a five-game schedule without defeat. Before 1923 basketball was only an intramural sport at Arkansas. The following year the Razorbacks played a full schedule, including 12 games with conference teams. That year Arkansas won three conference games and lost nine, ending the season in seventh place. In non-conference games, however, the Razorbacks were better, winning nine of their 10 games.

In 1925, Arkansas won 10 conference games and lost four to place third in the conference standing. The following year Coach Schmidt directed the first of several championship teams at Arkansas. The Razorbacks won 11 conference games and lost one to cop the championship in 1926. They repeated in 1927, 1928, 1929 and 1930, being the only conference team ever to win five consecutive championships.

Northeast Center Five Opens Schedule Tuesday

Indians Meet Monticello Aggies, With Normal Game On Thursday

The Northeast Center basketball team will get its first test under fire Tuesday night when they clash with Arkansas A. & M. college of Monticello in their opening tilt of the season at Northeast Center's gymnasium. The game is slated to get underway at 7:45 p.m.

The game with the Arkansas Aggies was originally scheduled to be played before the Christmas holidays but was postponed until Tuesday night in order that the Arkansas cagers could disband when school closed for the holidays.

After Tuesday night's game against the Aggies, Coach Cary Phillips will have two days in which to correct the mistakes made in the opening game before the Indians take the floor against the Louisiana Normal Demons Thursday night, at the local college gymnasium in their second engagement of the season.

Coach Phillips has had his squad of Purple and Gold cagers going through some lengthy workouts for the past two months, except for the ten-day layoff for the holidays. He said that with a week's drill behind them since the layoff, they were ready for the opening of the season.

The Indian squad of 20 candidates has been shifted around during the practice periods in an effort to find the combination that would click together. Phillips indicated yesterday after the workout that he would probably start Boly Lemak and Burt Trichel at the forwards, George Pryor at center, and "Red" Mays and Norris White at the guard berths.

Pryor, who played end on the football eleven, is a tall, rangy youth towering around six feet, two inches, and gained his basketball experience while in high school in Corsicana, Texas. He is being relied upon to hold down the position at center.

The Indians' forwards, Lemak and Trichel, are not quite up to the six-foot mark in height, but are both exceptionally fast and crack shots under the basket.

The Aggie forwards will probably find it hard to get many crip shots over the Tribesmen's guards, May and White. May is a hefty youngster weighing around the two-hundred pound mark and towers six feet, two. He was named all-state center in '32, while a member of the championship Denham Springs five. White, a sure shot under the basket, received his cage experience at Ouachita parish high school, where he held down a guard position for three years.

If any of the five probable starters fail to measure up to expectations, the former Brown Paper mill coach said he would have several combinations to substitute into the game.

The starting lineup for the Monticello club will have Richardson and Bratton at forwards; Harper, center, and Culbertson and Redden at guards.

BOBBY JONES AT ORLEANS TODAY

Atlantan And Whitney Play Freddie Haas And Fred Odom In Match

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5. — (AP) — When Bobby Jones tees off in the best-ball foursome to be held here Sunday for charity, he'll be teamed up with the veteran player who eliminated him from his first major tournament more than 15 years ago.

The world's most famous golfer is paired with Nelson Whitney, known as the "dean of southern golfers" against a pair of flashy-shooting local youngsters, Fred Haas, Jr., and Fred Odom II.

Whitney, who has won the southern golf championship more times than any other man, eliminated Bobby when the "grand slam" winner was a mere stripling in the quarter-finals of a southern championship tournament.

But the two will be playing together Sunday against Haas, 18-year-old southern golf champion, and Odom, the local city champion.

Whitney was the first prominent golfer the south ever produced, witnessed by his five southern titles. In the 1934 tournament, Whitney produced the tournament thrill by gaining the quarter-finals through a brilliant field.

Young Haas, who annexed a score of titles last summer and who holds nearly every course record in this city, stroked out a par shattering round this past week to equal his own course record of 65 over his home course, which has a par of 70.

The Junior League is sponsoring the benefit match Sunday. It will be played over the Metairie golf links here.

Miami Open Tourney Is Postponed Until Today

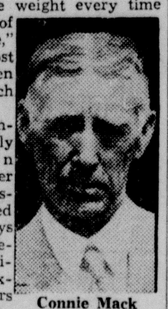
MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Heavy rains and high winds today caused a postponement until tomorrow of the second 18-hole round of the $2,500 Miami open golf tournament here. The final 36-hole frame, originally scheduled for tomorrow, will be played Monday.

MANAGERS GIVEN FREE REIGN NOW

Little 'Front Office' Interference In Big League Trading

By Paul Mickelson
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

CHICAGO, Jan. 5. — (AP) — Major league baseball managers used to shudder and lose weight every time they thought of the "front office," but nowadays most of them don't even know there is such a place.



Connie Mack

Big league managers are really managers again with more power than they possessed or dreamed of in the trick days before baseball became a big business and the anxious club owners ruled their domains with an iron fist, buying and selling players over the meek protests of their field pilots.

Before the current movement began to give the harassed managers more authority, the late John McGraw and Connie Mack stood out as the only two pilots whose word was final in baseball deals. If either of those who wanted to make a deal, fire or hire, they did so and their quick actions resulted in many pennant winners for the Giants and Athletics.

But today. A manager with almost autocratic power over his team is the general rule, not the exception.

The world's championship St. Louis Cardinals, the Cleveland Indians, Cincinnati Reds and Washington still repose most of their faith in the "front office," but all the others depend on their managers with varying degrees of dependency.

Connie Mack, Bill Terry of the Giants and Charlie Grimm of the Cubs are the standout dictators of their policies among the big league managers today. Closely following them in extent of authority are Rogers Hornsby of St. Louis' Browns, Joe McCarthy, veteran New York Yankee pilot, Casey Stengel of Brooklyn, Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox, and Mickey Cochrane of the Detroit Tigers, who gained tremendous headway with Owner Frank Navin by bringing Detroit the American league pennant in his first season at the club's helm, a feat duplicated by Terry.

Jimmy Wilson of the Phillies, Pie Traynor of Pittsburgh and Bill McKechnie of the Braves usually confer at some length with their bosses before making deals. Owner Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey do most of the scheming for the St. Louis Cardinals with respectful attention to Manager Frankie Frisch, about the same setup as prevails at Washington, Cleveland and Cincinnati.

ATHLETIC GROUP WILL MEET HERE

Northeast Louisiana Association In Annual Meeting Saturday

The annual meeting of the Northeast Louisiana Athletic association, comprising practically all of the schools of this section, will be held in Monroe next Saturday morning, J. B. Thompson, Jr., of Delhi, president of the association, announced yesterday. The meeting will be held at the Frances hotel, starting at 10:20 a. m.

Mr. Thompson said yesterday that letters had been mailed urging all principals and coaches of Northeast Louisiana to attend the meeting.

The association was organized last winter in a meeting at Delhi. Many coaches and principals who attended the first meeting found it convenient to arrange their football schedules there, and an even larger attendance is expected this year. The association includes both Class B and Class A schools. Last year football was the chief topic of conversation but next Saturday basketball and other sports probably will come in for considerable discussion.

"Many things of importance will be discussed at the annual meeting," Mr. Thompson said. "All principals and coaches are urged to attend."

Homer Football Schedule For Next Year Announced

HOMER, Jan. 5.—(Special)—The Homer Pelicans' football schedule for 1935 has been completed and the following schedule is announced by P. C. Rogers, principal of the school.

Choudrant at Homer, Sept. 20; El Dorado at El Dorado, Sept. 27; Minden at Minden, Oct. 4; Lake Charles at Homer Oct. 11; Mansfield at Homer Oct. 18; Byrd at Shreveport, Oct. 25; Fair Park at Homer, Nov. 2; Haynesville at Homer Nov. 11; Ruston at Homer Nov. 15; Bolton at Alexandria Nov. 22.

NEVILLE ELEVEN TO PLAY 11-GAME SCHEDULE IN '35

Minden And Fair Park Added To Tigers' Football Program

The Tigers of Neville high school, who went through their most successful gridiron season in years last fall, will face one of the toughtest schedules ever attempted by the local forces when they open their 1935 campaign, according to the schedule of games for next fall as announced by Coach Percy Brown last night. The schedule includes eleven battles, seven of them on the home field.

Missing from the Tigers' list of foes for the coming season will be Junction City, Ark., and Greenville, Miss. But in their places will be two of the toughtest elevens in north Louisiana, the Minden high school aggregation and the Fair Park Indians of Shreveport. They also meet the Blue Boys of Natchez, Miss., whom they defeated in 1933. Natchez forfeited to the Bengals last season when a conflict in schedule appeared.

The Camden, Ark., Panthers have been moved into the Tigers' opening date in the place of Junction City. The Panthers have always furnished Neville plenty of action with the number of wins being 2 to 1 in favor of the Arkansas huskies. This will be their fourth encounter since 1930 and will be fought out at Camden.

The Fair Park Indians will assist the Tigers in opening their home schedule with the game coming second on the Bengals' list. The battle will mark the inauguration of sports competition between the two schools.

The rest of Neville's opponents will appear in practically the same order as last season. Oak Grove, Ruston, Winnfield, Haynesville, Natchez, Vicksburg, Miss., and Lafayette will be played in that order.

Minden will follow the Lafayette Lions in the place formerly occupied by Camden, while the Bastrop high school Rams will be back in their old slot on the Bengals' enemy list, Thanksgiving Day, to close the Tigers' season.

The Rams are among Neville's most ancient foes, including Oak Grove and Ruston, and the annual turkey day affair between the two elevens has always drawn a big crowd. Last season, for the first time, the game was played prior to Thanksgiving. However, it is now back as before and will close the season for the two teams.

From the eleven squads that face the Tigers next season, only two can boast of beating the Bengal combination in the past season. They are Haynesville's Golden Hornado and the Lafayette Lions. In each instance the locals were beaten by a one touchdown margin only.

With the exception of Fair Park, Minden and Natchez, not on the past schedule, the Neville forces defeated their other foes in some of the best games ever played by the locals. Their defeat of the heavier Camden team was one of the biggest upsets of the Tiger campaign.

The 1935 schedule is:
Sept. 20—Camden, there.
Sept. 27—Fair Park, here.
Oct. 4—Oak Grove, here.
Oct. 11—Ruston, there.
Oct. 18—Winnfield, here.
Oct. 25—Haynesville, here.
Nov. 1—Natchez, here.
Nov. 8—Vicksburg, here.
Nov. 15—Lafayette, there.
Nov. 22—Minden, here.
Nov. 28—Bastrop, there.

SICILY ISLAND GIRLS BEAT OUACHITA, 47-23

WISNER, La., Jan. 5.—(Special)—Sicily Island won the annual senior girls basketball title here tonight when they defeated the Ouachita parish high school girls of Monroe, 47 to 23, in the final game of the tournament.

Sicily Island's sextette showed a consistent offense that clicked smoothly to more than double the score turned in by the Monroe team.

Sicily Island defeated Jonesville, 20 to 16, in a hard fought game to advance to the finals, while Ouachita won the right to meet the Island sextette by trimming Mangham, 29 to 5.

Despite the fact that Ouachita finished second in the tournament, that team carried off high scoring honors, Miss K. Rowland piling up 54 points during the tourney. Miss Wilkinson of Sicily Island was second with 33 points, with Miss Russell of Jonesville trailing closely with 32 points.

Fourteen teams entered the annual tourney. A large crowd witnessed the championship game tonight.

Mrs. Paul Dean Named Arkansas Tech Beauty

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Mrs. Paul "Daffy" Dean discontinued her college career at Arkansas Polytechnic here when she married the St. Louis pitcher last December 20, but the local student weekly "Arka-Tech" nevertheless nominated her as "Tech's beauty of 1934-35."

Mrs. Dean, the former Dorothy Sandusky, was a winner in a local beauty contest a year or so ago.

Her picture, with those of 17 other candidates nominated by various campus groups, will be submitted to Dick Powell, Arkansas movie star, who will make the selections for the college year book.

Morrison To Confer With Vandy Officials Monday

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Coach Ray Morrison of Southern Methodist university, Dallas, will be here Monday to confer again with Chancellor James H. Kirkland of Vanderbilt university and members of the executive committee of the athletic association about the head coaching post that has been offered him.

Heavyweight Wrestler To Handle Boxing Show Tomorrow Night

Scotty Dawkins, heavyweight wrestling star who's spending several weeks with relatives here before resuming his activities on the big time mat circuits, will referee the four boxing bouts at Roosevelt stadium tomorrow night, Promoter Charlie Bruscato announced last night.

Dawkins weighs around 220 pounds and fans at least will have the satisfaction of knowing that someone will be in there who can handle the situation, if the necessity for rough work arises. Dawkins has refereed a number of boxing matches in the past and is said to be a thoroughly capable official.

"There's one thing the fans can count on," Scotty said yesterday. "And that is that I'll make 'em fight, if humanly possible. My experience as a wrestler has taught me that inactivity in the ring bores the fans and I'm sure the same rule applies to boxing."

The Monday card, which presents profesional boxing in Monroe for the first time in more than a year, includes four bouts totaling 26 rounds. Bruscato expects the card to be a crowd-pleaser and has assured local mitt bugs that they'll see plenty of action. Popular prices will be charged.

Following is the card:

Main event, 10 rounds, Battling Brown, 175, Fargo, N. D., vs. Mickey Hazuda, 170, of Pittsburgh.

Semi-final, eight rounds, Frankie Kolborn, 147, Waterloo, Iowa, vs. Red Barnett, 147, Laurel, Miss.

Preliminary, four rounds, Popeye Willett, 169, Shreveport, vs. Mike Dundee, 170, Oklahoma City.

Preliminary, four rounds, Butch Martin, 193, Monroe, vs. Jack Warner, 197, Los Angeles.

All but Hazuda and Barnett have been working out daily at the stadium for the past week. All are said to be in excellent shape.

The main event is creating considerable interest hereabouts. Brown recently fought a 10-round draw with Gorilla Jones, last year's middleweight champion, at Miami. He's said to be a rugged battler, with a real wallop in both fists. Hazuda has become quite a favorite around Natchez and Ferriday. He is said to possess a right that packs dynamite.

The complete list of officials for the show was announced yesterday. Judges will be Paul Fink, Sam Rubin and Percy Brown. Sam Jones will keep time.

The show will get under way at 8:15 o'clock.

PINEVILLE, Jan. 5.—(Special)—The 14th annual Central Louisiana high school basketball tournament will be held at Louisiana college Friday and Saturday, February 22 and 23. The tournament will include games for boys and girls, and the winning teams will receive gold basketballs, while winners of second and third places will receive silver and bronze trophies.

The rally this year, is expected to be attended by a large number of excellent teams. The outcome is in doubt, in view of the fact that very little report has been published relative to the strength of the teams of Central Louisiana. The general rally consists of track for boys, and girls volley ball, and literary events will be held in April.

A meeting of the executives of the Central Louisiana rally, principals and coaches, will be held at Louisiana college Saturday, January 19, at 10 o'clock for the purpose of perfecting general plans for boys and girls basketball rally, and the general rally, which comes in April.

Bowl Official Denies He Has Barred L. S. U.

PASADENA, Calif., Jan. 5.—(AP)—C. Hal Reynolds, chairman of the Tournament of Roses football committee, today issued a vigorous denial of a statement quoting him to the effect that his organization would bar Louisiana State university's football team from the Rose Bowl as long as Huey Long is connected with it.

Reynolds said he had not been questioned on that point, and hadn't said anything about it.

"Besides," Reynolds declared, "the selection of the eastern representative in the Rose Bowl game, each year, is not in the hands of the Tournament of Roses committee. x x x

"Pasadena has not barred Huey Long, or any southern football team from the Rose Bowl. We like to have them come out."

CUNNINGHAM WINS FROM VENZKE IN 800-METER RUN

Kansan Staves Off Strong Stretch Challenge And Wins In 1:57

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Glenn Cunningham, holder of the world's indoor and outdoor record at one mile, swung back into competition on the boards tonight with a thrilling victory over Gene Venzke of the University of Pennsylvania in the 800-meter run at the Knights of Columbus track and field meet.

With the same relentless stride that carried him over a mile in 4:08.4 on the Madison Square Garden banked track and 4:06.7 over the cinder track at Princeton to establish new world marks last year, Cunningham stepped to the front one and a half laps from the finish and then staved off the brilliant stretch challenge of Venzke, himself one-time holder of the indoor record for the mile.

Less than two yards separated the pair at the finish, while William Ray, of Manhattan college, closed fast to nip Harry Williamson, University of North Carolina ace. Cunningham, preparing for more important battles against his arch rival, Bill Bonthron, was clocked in 1:57, considered remarkable time for the flat boards.

Venzke, trying a comeback after trailing Cunningham and Bonthron consistently last year, stepped to the front at the bark of the gun while Cunningham and Williamson, running wide to escape the jam on the first curve, dropped back to fifth and last in the field of seven, respectively.

The smooth-striding Pennsylvanian continued to show the way through the second lap with Ray in second place but both Williamson and Cunningham had moved up to where they were less than three yards back of the leader. With the start of the third lap, Williamson, his long stride working like a clock, collared Venzke and swept to the front by a margin of a few feet over Venzke and Cunningham.

They were coming down the back stretch on the next to the last lap, when the Kansan made his bid. He turned on the steam and in a few strides was winging along in front by two yards with Williamson second, a like distance in the van of Venzke.

The race appeared to be a runaway when the gun announced the start of the final lap and Cunningham rapidly was leaving his rivals far behind. Venzke still had something left, however, but found himself some five feet short as they hit the tape. Venzke was clocked in 1:57.3 while Ray, who caught the tiring Williamson in the home stretch, was caught in 1:58.8. The southerner's time was 1:59.

SENATORS DEPEND ON YOUNG HURLER

Griffith Expects One Of Three Recruits To Come Through

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Unable to obtain a top ranking pitcher as yet, Clark Griffith banks on one or more of his youngsters coming through as a winner for Washington next season.

The canny swapper of baseball talent professed willingness to unwrap the rubber band around the $250,000 he got from Tom Yawkey for Joe Cronin but said as yet he has heard of no "sensible" propositions.

So his faith and prayers are centered in a trio of rookies—Reese Diggs, Orville Armbrust and Sid Cohen. Diggs, particularly, has attracted Griffith, known as the "Fox" during his pitching days.

"Diggs is a raw, 19-year-old kid from Pimlico, Md., but he did so well on the Senators' last road trip that Catcher Luke Sewell reported he had more "stuff" than any of the other righthanders.

"Control and confidence are all he needs," Griff explained, "he's natural pitcher if I ever saw one. Other kids have jumped to the majors with little or no seasoning, and Diggs will get his chance."

Griffith likes everything about Armbrust except his avoirdupois. The fat boy has been shaking off weight all winter and may be down to a normal size by spring. From Sam Holbrook, who joined the Senators from Chattanooga, Griffith heard high praise of Cohen.

Griff has eight other moundsmen, but some will be scissored off the squad. The eight are Earl Whitehill, who had a pretty good year in 1934; Bobby Burke, who looked good in spots; Monte Weaver, an in-and-outer, and Jack Russell, Walter Stewart, Al Thomas, Alec McColl and Ed Linke.

ALABAMA GIVEN ROYAL WELCOME

Stanford's Conquerors Greeted By 5,000 Fans On Arrival Home

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Whistles shrieked, a band blared the battle hymn and 5,000 adoring citizens and students today joined in a royal welcome to Alabama's Crimson Tide, fresh from new triumphs in Pasadena's Rose Bowl.

And the Crimson Tide responded with boyish grins and waves as they piled off their train to mount a platform as guests of honor to hear themselves praised by university officials and leading citizens.

Dr. George Denny, president of the University of Alabama, who stayed at home, was on hand to greet the returning heroes, and express his appreciation for their victory and sportsmanship.

The blast of the whistle of the locomotive of the Crimson Tide special was the signal for the fire siren and factory whistles to screech their welcome, and a tremendous shout went up from the 5,000 who braved a drizzling rain to greet the Tide.

Judge Henry Foster, acting chairman of the board of trustees and an ardent supporter of the Alabama football team, extended the welcome and said "Stanford claimed she would have beaten us with power plays, but you rascals wouldn't play that way, and with your courage, fighting hearts and skill, you beat the greatest team the west ever produced."

Stanford's ability and courage was praised by Coach Frank Thomas and Bill Lee, husky tackle and captain, but Millard Howell, brightest star of the game, and Don Hutson, his pass receiver, said they would let "Bill do the talking for us."

Reilly Smith, quarterback whose blocking drew paens of praise, came back lugging a black cat that he had picked up in New Orleans last night as the mascot for next year. The cat will either be named "Midnight" or Cleopatra.

The cat excited comment as the team grouped on the platform during the welcoming ceremonies.

The drizzle became a downpour before the ceremony was ended, and standing in the rain, students and townspeople joined in singing Alma Mater, after which everyone ducked for cover, including the band.

It was next to the last public appearance of the team in a group, as nine of them are seniors and have played their last collegiate football.

The final appearance of the team as a group will be next week at the annual banquet tendered by the chamber of commerce.

GOLF ASSOCIATION TO CUT EXPENSES

Curtailment Of U. S. G. A. Activities Likely With Drop In Roster

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—While the United States Golf association closed 1934 with a balance of $4,649, Herbert Jaques, of Boston, the retiring president, today warned the annual meeting that unless the association's club membership roster was increased during the current year continued curtailment of activities would be necessary.

Jaques ended ten years with the association, the last two as its chief executive with this warning and then turned the gavel over to Prescott S. Bush, of Greenwich, Conn., who along with other officers and members of the executive and nominating committees, were unanimously elected by a single ballot cast by the secretary.

Harkening back to the days of 1929, when the U. S. G. A. had 1,129 clubs on its roster, Jaques disclosed that the present membership is only 839 and said that 65 clubs resigned last year.

"Of necessity this diminishing membership had forced a curtailment of activities," he said, "and unless the membership is increased curtailment must continue."

Before retiring Jaques announced that the 18-hole matches in connection with the women's national championship at Interlachen, Minn., next August, would be held in the afternoons of the four days they run instead of the mornings to attract larger galleries.

TECH FIVE OPENS WITH 30-23 WIN OVER WILDCATS

Bulldogs Protect First-Half Advantage To Down La. College

RUSTON, La., Jan. 5.—(Special.)—Louisiana Tech's Bulldogs opened their 1935 campaign for S. I. A. A. basketball laurels tonight by trimming the Louisiana college quintet, 30 to 23, in an interesting battle.

The game was a nip-and-tuck struggle for the first few minutes of play but Louisiana Tech steadily forged ahead and after the first 10 minutes the Bulldogs were never behind. The Wildcats took a momentary lead as the game opened and again held a slight advantage over the Techmen after five minutes of play.

The McLane-coached quintet began to click after they warmed up, however, and the half found Tech leading, 18 to 10.

The second half was closer than the first, with the Pineville cagers scoring 13 points to 12 for the Bulldogs, but Tech managed to protect its first-half advantage. It was the fourth victory of the season for Louisiana Tech, the Bulldogs having won three games with independent teams prior to the opening of their association schedule tonight.

Brooks, Tech center, and Crowell, Louisiana college guard, were tied for high scoring honors with eight points each. Each had three field goals and two free throws. Close guarding by both teams kept the score down. Waters and Garrigus, Tech guards, were particularly effective and each turned in some nice floor work. Crowell, Wildcat guard, and C. Barron, forward, were best for Louisiana college. Bass made a couple of sensational long shots for the Wildcats.

The Techmen thought they would be without the services of Billy Mitchell, regular forward, tonight but he arrived from Pasadena, where he witnessed the Rose Bowl game, shortly before game time and hopped into a uniform to help his mates get off to a good start in the association race. Mitchell made five points.

Bass, Louisiana college forward, and Garham, one of the Tech forwards went out of the game by the foul route.

ELLY MEETS ANGELO AGRO IN STADIUM FEATURE

OPULAR MATMAN FACES ANOTHER TOUGH OPPONENT

Husky Italian Ranked Sixth In Canadian Heavyweight List

Ernest Kelly, popular heavyweight who has been meeting some tough foes lately at Roosevelt stadium, will draw another roughhouse artist next Wednesday night when he tackles Angelo Agro, husky Italian, in the main event of the weekly stadium mat show, Promoter Charlie Bruscato announced last night.

Kelly, the 210-pound former Tennessee football star, was injured last week in his hectic battle with Johnny Plummer but he will be fully recovered by Wednesday night, he advises Promoter Bruscato. Kelly suffered his injury when both Plummer and Sid Westrich, the 219-pound referee, fell on top of him at the end of 41 minutes of wrestling in the first fall. It was at first thought that he had suffered a fractured rib but an examination at a local hospital revealed nothing more serious than a torn ligament and a badly bruised side. Kelly remained here last Thursday for treatment at the hospital.

Agro, who also weighs 210 pounds, hails from Ottawa, Canada. In the list of Canadian rankings, Agro is listed sixth among the Dominion wrestlers. Fast and plenty tough, fans who have seen him in action have compared with with Garibaldi, the famous Italian grappler. He is being touted as a likely challenger for the heavyweight championship.

According to advance notices, Agro can wrestle "clean" or he can be as rough as they come, with little regard for the rules. And if Kelly's luck runs true to form, Mr. Agro probably will pick next Wednesday night to "get dirty." The Italian wrestled Chief Chewchki last Monday night [illegible] card at Memphis. Following the match, Londos remarked that Chewchki had nothing on Agro when it came to the dirty work.

Agro is said to be one of the most conscientious trainers in the business. He keeps in perfect shape and doesn't smoke or drink. He is said to have dropped only a few of the 170 matches in which he has performed.

Promoter Bruscato said yesterday that he expects Agro to wrestle "clean" but that "you never can tell."

"Agro can be one of the cleanest wrestlers in the game," Bruscato said, "but he can dish it out when he becomes riled. Kelly also is a clean wrestler, so they may behave themselves Wednesday night."

Bruscato said that he was attempting to line up a good semi-final match to go with the Kelly-Agro affair.

Bruscato also announced yesterday that five prizes will be given away to the fair fans. The prizes will be donated by the R. and A. Jewelry company.

Bobby Jones Says

It is always gratifying to look back upon a golf tournament with the thought that the winner played the best golf and deserved to win. It is even more satisfying to look back upon an entire year, as we can now upon the year 1934, and find that every major title was won by a champion who really belongs. The 1934 winners are a solid lot who, though they may be beaten, will never let you down.

Lawson Little's performance winning through both the British and American amateur championships, when both were played almost entirely over the eighteen-holes route, was the outstanding accomplishment in golf for the year, and indeed for several years. To do this a man must have a definite edge over the rest of the field. It would be possible to clash through one tournament but not through both.

As a matter of fact, there is little doubt that last year, Little was the best amateur golf in America. At the Brookline championship it was evident that his was the smoothest-working game from start to finish, and he had the temperament to back it up. Not once did he even look as though he might be beaten and one looked in vain for an opponent who could give him a seriously close rub.

Last Day Efforts Won Open

In the open championship, naturally, the going was a bit closer. Saraen looked to be the most likely winner for most of the way, although he could never quite shake himself loose from Bobby Cruickshank and Wiffy Cox. But as so often happens, Olin Dutra's two magnificent rounds on the last day brought him from an unnoticed position to the head of the list at the finish. It was a splendid effort by a golfer whose ability has long been recognized.

There were too many fine golfers among the professionals to make it possible for anyone to dominate this division as Little dominated the amateurs. Paul Runyan played some of his best golf in winning the P. G. A., and he and Ky Laffoon took the two largest slices from the money tournaments. Henry Cotton blew the entire field out to sea by playing some of the most spectacular golf the British Open has ever seen.

Not one of these important results was surprising. Nor was the winning of the ladies championship for the third time by Virginia Van Wie. Though pressed closely in the final by young Miss Traung of California, Miss Van Wie gave another impressive demonstration of her right at the top of women's golf.

The thing I like most about these 1934 champions is that they take their golf seriously and work hard to continue improving. Not one of them, having reached the top, will relax even for a moment from this effort to keep on improving. With this sort of spirit they all should keep near the front for some years.

Determined Golfers

Little and Cotton are two remarkable examples of what hard, intelligent work can do when coupled with a determination to succeed. When Cotton first came to America several years ago he was far from being the great golfer he is today. And Little, as late as 1933 was just a good amateur. But each was smart enough to spot his weakness, and humble enough to learn from others how to strengthen these points. Success won in this way deserves an extra bit of acclaim. It does the game good for such men to win.

While Bobby Jones will be glad to answer as many readers' questions in this column as possible, it will be impossible for him to answer letters personally. Write your problem to him care of Monroe Morning World.

Bobby Jones' latest leaflet "How To Hit a Straight Flying Shot," will be sent to anyone who requests it on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Wanted: Congenial Jobs By Sadder And Wiser Coaches

Now Where? Ask Grid Leaders; Boston Crew May Pep Up In '35

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Question: If there are five well-known coaches looking for jobs and only three big jobs available, how many well-known football coaches will be in the breadline in 1935?

By simple mathematics, any football coach who has been around a large university several years will tell you that the answer is at least two, but figuring out which two is another matter.

The five coaches interested in the question are Eddie Casey, Dick Hanley, Biff Jones, Bill Ingram, and Frank Carideo. The schools looking for coaches are Harvard, coached in 1934 by Casey, and Northwestern, coached in '34 by Hanley.

Two Popular Gents

With the time for spring practice coming on and the annual football coaches' meeting over, Bill Bingham, graduate manager at Harvard, and Tug Wilson, athletic director of Northwestern, remain the most popular pair in the university athletic fraternity.

Meanwhile, it is interesting to note that at both Harvard and Northwestern promising squads will report to the new skippers when the spring drill rolls around.

Up Boston way, they are pointing out that Eddie Casey was about to have a good year when the old blue envelope came around. Evidence for this was the last half of the Yale game when the Crimson shoved the Blue all over the field.

Harvard's case is typical of the other two vacant jobs. Casey's successor will have two excellent ends awaiting him, Emile Dubiel, and Shaun Kelly. Yale scouts rated this pair the best the Elis met all year, which is something of a compliment to Wesley Fesler, the handsome all-America end from Ohio State, who was their coach.

Harvard's Gain

Harvard also had the belated pleasure of seeing two Crimson tackles handle their jobs ably in the last half of the Yale game. These boys were Bob Watson and Graham Spring, who were finally substituted for Adlis and Burton. Spring, the oldest man on the Harvard squad in 1934, who stands 6 feet 4 inches and weighs 194 pounds, transferred from Notre Dame to Harvard. He did not play football in South Bend.

But the Harvard backs are even more promising for the 1935 season than the linemen. In addition to such backs as Capt. Bob Haley, Ford, Hedblom, Jackson, Mosely, Watt Ecker Bilodiau Gibbs, Adzigan, and Blackwood, the new Harvard coach will have Francis Lane back. Lane, ineligible in 1934, is considered the best blocking back at Cambridge since Horween's day. He was a regular in 1933 until he was forced out with a broken leg.

Good Crimson Team

The critics may be judging prematurely but they claim there are several promising freshmen on the way up to help the Crimson out of its trouble. Among the newcomers is Waldemar Wysocki, who sounds like an all-America. More is known, however, of Art Oakes, captain of the 1934 freshman team, who passed the ball against the varsity last year with more precision than any player on the varsity squad.

There's even an Irishman coming up from the frosh to try for the regular quarterback job at Harvard. He is Dick O'Toole and he has all the pepper that made O'Flaherty, Logan, Watson, and McGlone successful in other days behind the Crimson line.

Alabama's Capt. Bill Lee has put his intercollegiate football career behind him, but Harvard has another Bill Lee, who will be making a bid for one of the tackle positions next autumn. Lee weighs 195 pounds and was the fastest lineman from tackle to tackle on the freshman team.

Bill Glendinning and Dave Glueck are the promising freshman guards.

Everyone Wants Harvard Job

With all this material available, at least four of the five coaches could probably be induced to consider, for a consideration, the Harvard job.

Bill Ingram could probably be induced to forget about going into business, Biff Jones might be willing to listen to a transfer to Cambridge, and Hanley certainly would welcome a chance to get into the east, where the competition met by Harvard scarcely matches Big Ten competition. Carideo, of course, would welcome anything after his experience at Missouri.

Both Northwestern and California expect to give their new coaches better material in 1935 than Hanley and Ingram, respectively, had in 1934. And it goes without saying that the new Missouri coach will have no harder time than Carideo had last season.

In the army of the unemployed are these four famous football coaches. Casey was at Harvard, Hanley at Northwestern, Jones at Louisiana State, and Ingram at California. Now they are all looking for a job.

Food Fads Aid Little In Athlete's Training

Evidence Shows Sports Participants Profit From Sensible Diet

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

We used to have a great many notions about the kind of food athletes ought to eat. Certain foods, for instance, were said to be good for runners, and others were said to be bad for the wind.

With development of our modern knowledge of diet, we realize that it is not possible to give a distance runner endurance by any special food, or to make a hammer-thrower or football player stronger than he really is by feeding him raw meat.

All foods are made up of proteins, carbohydrates, fats, mineral salts and vitamins, and must be taken in relationship to the various proportions of these constituents. Liquids are necessary to life and have to be taken by everyone to preserve health.

There are trainers who try to restrict the fluids taken by athletes to the barest amount consistent with living, and by such action seriously injure the health of those whom they would benefit. This strange notion is particularly associated with the boxing ring, and many a trainer has lost his boxer a match because he did not allow sufficient liquids.

The best food is one which is easily digested. The accumulation of undigested material in the bowels is harmful to health and will interfere seriously with any physical effort. Furthermore, accumulation of undigested material in the bowels results in diversion of blood and the energy of the body toward the handling of that food, when they may be required elsewhere.

If large amounts of material in the form of food, fluids, or gas collect in the stomach and intestines, the diaphragm may be forced upwards, interfering with breathing and with action of the heart.

Because overcooking may harden the fibers of meat and make it difficult to digest, some trainers have gone to the opposite side and have fed raw meat, which is just about as difficult to digest.

Furthermore, these things are not palatable. There is little to be gained in aiding the digestion, if you produce at the same time nausea and a disturbance of the mind.

The athlete should not be forced to eat beyond the requirements of his natural appetite, regardless of the strange notion of some trainers that some people should eat enormous quantities of food and then exercise to work the material into their bodies.

Strength cannot be automatically acquired from food in this way.

The athlete requires protein for repair of his tissue. Furthermore, proteins and fats will give energy as well as carbohydrates. When it was found that sugar is used by the body in muscular activities, trainers began urging athletes to take sugar before races.

The evidence as to the usefulness of this method is not so well established as to make it worth adoption.

Individual requirements for food must be taken into account in relationship to all training. In general, athletes are urged to abstain from smoking and the drinking of alcoholic liquors.

The uses of alcohol in every day life are sometimes as a stimulant to the appetite, sometimes as a sedative to overstrained nerves. The healthy athlete, with the effects of fresh air and exercise, does not require alcoholic assistance for his body activities.

The evidence as to the effect of tobacco on the respiration and on the heart is sufficient to indicate that it is certainly of no special use to the athlete. Many famous athletes have smoked tobacco without very seriously damaging their records, and in some cases smoking has been useful in quieting overstrained nerves.

In general, however, it is no serious matter to deprive a young athlete entirely of tobacco.

REVOLTA WINS IN RIVERSIDE MEET

Milwaukee Pro And Amateur Partner Post 66 In Qualifying Round

VICTORIA CLUB, RIVERSIDE, Calif., Jan. 5.—(AP)—John Revolta of Milwaukee and Ed Babcock, Los Angeles, won the second qualifying round of the Riverside amateur-pro golf tournament today with a best ball card of 33-33—66, six strokes under par. They played over sodden fairways and slow greens.

While it was three strokes more than Henry Picard, Hershey, Penna., and Ken Sommerfeld, San Diego, Calif., took to lead yesterday's half of the qualifying field, the score was phenomenal in view of the playing conditions.

Revolta, pro of the Tripoli Country club, turned in a fine 69 in his own right to win $100 first prize money.

Five teams tied for second place with 67s, with the pro-members receiving $45 each for their share of the second qualifying round money of $500.

These were: Tod Menafee, San Antonio, Texas, and Lieut. B. A. Schreiver, a former Texan now of March field, near here; Orville White, St. Louis, and Paul Sleppy, Long Beach; Dal Jeffers, Santa Ana, and Louie Alabaster, Riverside; Eddie Loos, Chicago, and W. B. Davidson, of Riverside; and Guy Paulsen, Ft. Wayne, Ind., and Alex Hanson, Riverside.

Playing conditions were more exacting than those of yesterday, with best ball cards of 72, equaling par, qualifying the field for tomorrow's final round with yesterday's leaders for the $1,000 in prize money and an array of amateur prizes.

ALABAMA AGAIN DEFEATS TULANE

Greenies Put Up Staunch Battle But Lose By 31-26 Score

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5.—(AP)—The Crimson-clad quintet of Alabama turned in a 31 to 26 decision over Tulane's Greenies here tonight, to sweep a two-game series before 700 spectators. The Tuscaloosa team triumphed in Friday night's opener, 24 to 12.

Alabama took an early lead, was tied twice during the opening minutes of play, but pulled away to a 17 to 10 lead as the first half ended.

Tulane came back with a stronger attack in the second period, pulling up to within three points of its rival, at 27 to 24, with four minutes left to play, but the rally fell short. Jim Whatley of Alabama got under the basket for a neat goal, and a minute later Jimmy Walker sent a long throw through for two more Alabama points. Gus Clark's two free throws for Tulane after Raphael Sneed's foul ended scoring for the evening, and in 60 seconds more, during which time Clark missed a throw on Al Nogi's foul, the game ended.

The Crimson team had six football players on its line-up, and Tulane used three. It has been less than a week since all nine were in gridiron togs, which might have played some part in the nature of Saturday's cage game.

Appling Signs Contract For 1935 With White Sox

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Luke Appling, Chicago White Sox infielder, said here today that both he and Marshall Mauldin, young Atlantan who played several games with the White Sox last summer, had signed new contracts with the Chicago club.

Of the 14,000,000 inhabitants of Yugo-Slavia, only about 1,000 belong to no church denomination. Approximately 48 per cent of the entire population belongs to the Orthodox church, 37.5 per cent are Roman Catholics, and 11 per cent Moslems.

FRICK SEES CLOSE NATIONAL LEAGUE FINISH THIS YEAR

President Also Expects Eight Clubs To Be Bunched In Race

By Ford C. Frick
(President, National League)

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—It would be expecting a great deal to have as close a finish to the 1935 National league pennant race as we had last year, with the Cardinals and Giants fighting it out right down to the final day of the season, but I look for at least five clubs to figure in the closing drive this year.

The New York Giants, as a result of the deals with Philadelphia for Dick Bartell and George Davis, look to have strengthened themselves at previously uncertain spots to a greater extent than any other club. They are certain to give the world champion Cardinals a great race, with the Chicago Cubs, the Pittsburgh Pirates and either the Brooklyn Dodgers, the Phillies or the Boston Braves as a fifth pennant contender. It will take actual play to show what the latter three clubs can do.

There should be no such gap between the first and last-place clubs as there was at the finish of the 1934 season, when the Cincinnati Reds were 42 games behind the pennant winners. At least half this gap should be closed because of the active and aggressive team-building conducted by the Reds, as well as other second division teams. In fact I will not be surprised if Cincinnati shows more improvement than any other club in the league this year.

The big trade between the Chicago and Pittsburgh clubs, while involving some outstanding performers, does not figure to give either a distinct advantage. It was about an even exchange, on the whole, but the change in uniforms may prove an impetus to the players concerned, including Fred Lindstrom, Larry French, Guy Bush and Babe Herman.

We look forward with special interest in the National league to the experiment with night baseball. It should be made clear that the league owners were unanimous in deciding to try the experiment, limiting to seven the number of games which any single club can play under the lights. Three clubs, New York, Brooklyn and Pittsburgh expressed themselves as unwilling this year to play night games, but they are entirely agreeable to having others try out the idea.

At least two clubs, St. Louis and Cincinnati, are certain to install the lighting system. They are prime movers in the experiment but they also urged its definite limitation, this year. Baseball men will watch the results with special interest.

The National league looks forward with keen anticipation to the third annual all-star game with the American league to be played this year in Cleveland. This has become an event of outstanding national interest. Naturally, we hope to turn the tables on our friendly rivals in this game but we are looking forward also to the hope of turning out a pennant winner able to make it three straight for the National league in the world championship series.

N. J., schoolboy, advanced four notches to No. 4, taking the place accorded last year to Clifford Sutter, former intercollegiate titlist, who fell to eighth. Stoefen's ranking is a demotion from No. 3 last year while Lott's rating represents a rise from 10th place to 6th.

Seventh place went to Berkeley Bell, one of the game's outstanding "in and outers," who was graded 18th in 1933. J. Donald Budge, the Oakland, Calif., "red head," is a newcomer to the list, rated 9th, and Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, the fiery little Georgian, dropped from seventh to tenth.

Cotton

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5.—(AP)—The cotton market today was somewhat more active for the short Saturday session and prices showed a downward trend because of disappointment over the president's message, rather easier outside markets and lower cables than due. There was also liquidation by disappointed longs and considerable selling by Bombay in this and other American markets.

After opening 2 to 4 points down the market gradually declined all session under selling pressure until March traded down to 12.59, May to 12.67, July to 12.69, Oct. to 12.56 and Dec. to 12.61, or 6 to 7 points under the opening figures.

The close was barely steady and at the lows showing net declines of 9 to 12 points for the day.

Exports for the day 5,785.

Cotton futures close barely steady at net declines of 9 to 12 points.

The general market closed barely steady at net declines of 9 to 14 points.

New York Stocks

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Stocks backed and filled rather listlessly in today's brief market session and most of the leaders were unable to get out of a narrow fractional range. Improvement was shown by some of the motor, traction and specialty issues. The close was steady. Transfers approximated 500,000 shares.

After overnight study of the president's message to congress, speculative forces seemingly concluded that the administrative program was about in line with expectations and contained little that could be considered as an immediate market stimulus.

The financial district, at the same time, was moderately cheered by the assertions of the chief executive that spending for public works to cut unemployment would be kept within the government's credit. This was interpreted in some quarters as anti-inflationary and as an indication that funds for relief projects would be raised through orthodox methods. The failure of the message to mention price-raising or prospective monetary policies was also viewed as constructive.

Of more importance to the equities market, it was felt in most boardrooms, was the budget message which is to be delivered to congress Monday. It was hoped this would provide a bullish influence which would enable stocks to resume their upward trend. It was realized, however, that, in view of existing uncertainties, the president might present an "open-end" budget.

Some of the building shares found friends on the strength of possible profits connected with the national public works program. Automotive issues were active and firm as the New York automobile show opened and hopes for expanded sales grew brighter. The better tone in the traction group reflected the belief that unification of the New York companies was near. The rails did not follow through on their yesterday's advance and most of the utilities did virtually nothing.

Commodities were somewhat dull. Grains traveled a restricted path and cotton was a trifle lower most of the time. Bonds were quiet and mixed. Gold currencies continued to ease in terms of the dollar.

Shares of Auburn automobile got up more than 2, and Allied Chemical and Simms Petroleum were up nearly as much. Continental Can edged into new high territory for the year. Gainers of fractions to a point or so included Johns-Manville, American Radiator, Foundation Company, Liggett & Myers B, U. S. Gypsum, Packard, Chrysler, U. S. Steel common and preferred, U. S. Smelting, N. Y. Shipbuilding, Interboro Rapid Transit, Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit, Manhattan Modified and American Sugar Refining.

Such issues as Case, General Motors, Deere, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Union Pacific, Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey and American were virtually unchanged. American Telephone firmed.

The rail stocks apparently paid little attention to the somewhat more than seasonal decline in freight car loadings for the week ended December 29. The figures, usually forthcoming on Friday but delayed because of the holiday, disclosed total loadings for the period of 425,120 cars.

This was a decrease of 122,775 below the aggregate for the previous week and was attributed partly to a sharp curtailment in coal shipments due to the unseasonably warm weather in the final week of 1934. A drop in the movement of merchandise freight was also a factor. The total was 29,645 cars under the corresponding week last year.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Downturns of wheat prices early today resulted more or less from uncertainty over President Roosevelt's budget speech expected on Monday and from ensuing legislation. Opening unchanged to 3-8 lower, May 99 3-8 to 1-2, wheat afterward sagged all around. Corn started at 3-8 off to 1-4 up, May 89 1-8 to 1-4, and subsequently held near the initial limits.

Wheat closed firm, 5-8 to 1 1-8 above yesterday's finish, May $1.00 5-8 to 3-4, corn 1 1-8 to 1 1-4 up, May 90 3-8 to 1-2, oats 1-4 to 3-8 advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12 cents.

CHEVROLET SHOWS FINER '35 MODELS

Master De Luxe And Standard Lines Offer Greater Values

Master De Luxe models, strongly emphasizing beauty and style, and new standard models, featuring high-powered performance with economy, are announced today by Chevrolet.

Master De Luxe body models include sedan, coach, business coupe with luggage compartment, sport coupe with rumble seat, sport sedan, and town sedan. In addition to the coach, business coupe, phaeton, and sport roadster, which comprised the Standard line last year, the 1935 Standard line includes a full sized four-door sedan and a sedan delivery car for light commercial uses.

The 1935 New Standard has been given virutually the same performance ability as the Master De Luxe which however, departs distinctly from previous Chevrolets in striking advances in design of body and trim. The engines, incorporating many improvements over the 1934 Master motor, are of the same size and design in both models, while in the chassis the chief difference is the presence in the Master De Luxe of Chevrolet enclosed knee-action suspension, now entering its second year improved in construction and operation.

Mechanically, the two models have in common numerous important improvements in construction and design. Both engines have an original system of high pressure jets supplying oil to connecting rod bearings, and electro-plated pistons, heavier crankshafts, and other new features that contribute to better performance, smoothness and economy. In both chassis, newly designed clutches, more effective braking systems, stiffer frames, and other advances in design give greater ease of operation, increased durability, and a better ride.

Visually, the new Master De Luxe retains only the characteristic outlines of the radiator, and the familiar trade-mark on hub caps and radiator emblem, to indicate that it is of Chevrolet origin. The V-radiator itself is narrower and more sloping, the unit fenders are highly contoured in their streamlining, while the windshield not only slopes back steeply but also is slightly V-shaped, causing all the forepart of the car to flow smoothly into the body, which is the utmost in smoothness. By utilizing the newly developed all-steel roof construction, Chevrolet has attained a sleekness formerly impossible, its highly crowned roof sweeping from the windshield to the streamlined, graceful rear end in a continuous curve, an effect heightened by the absence of roof panels and moldings and by the continuity of body color over the entire top.

Every detail of the car is new, starting with the front bumper and including the radiator grill, the ornament that supplants the radiator filler-cap (now under the hood), the horizontal hood louvres, the running-board pattern, streamlined door handles, spare tire mountings (concealed in some models), tail lamp, and rear bumper. Aside from appearance, there are important improvements in body comfort and spaciousnness, and especially in the ride. The wheelbase of the new Master De Luxe is increased to 113 inches, and an even greater increase in body space has been gained by moving the engine forward. The appearance of great length has been enhanced by lowering the floor level, dropping it one inch near the ground by lowering the chassis side rails.

The Master De Luxe sport and town sedans have integral trunks embodied in the rear panels, with compartments for the spare wheel. In the three sedans, pressed steel wheels with short rounded spokes are regular equipment. Wire wheels with large hub caps are used on the other models.

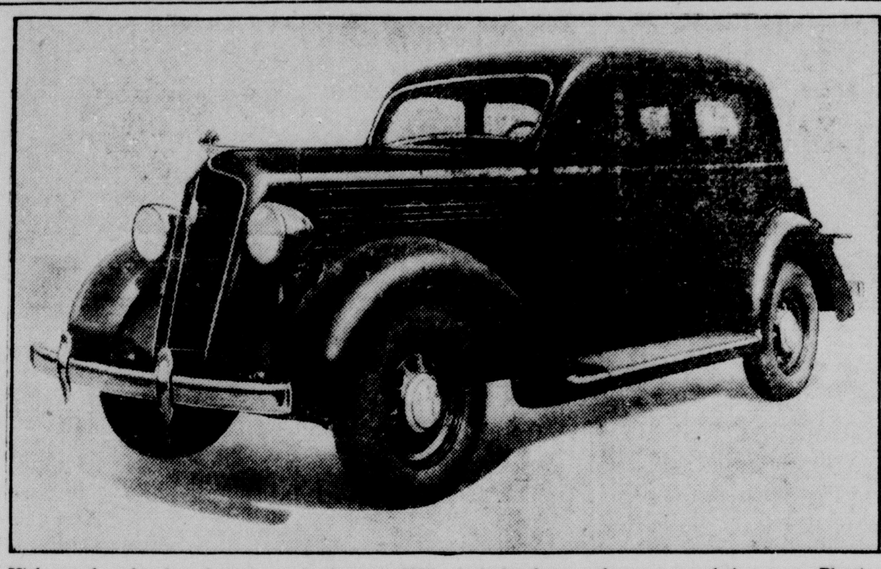
In the lower priced line of new Standard models, larger bodies, a new engine with 23 per cent more horsepower, an improved chassis frame, and numerous other new features give improved performance, still better economy, and increased comfort and safety.

Bodies are generally improved in spaciousness and comfort, and possess many new convenience and appearance features. The newly added four-door sedan has the same dimensions as the coach, which is 3 1-4 inches longer than the 1934 model and provides 2 1-2 inches more leg-room in the rear compartment. The closed models all have flat floors in the rear compartment, the ridge formerly existing in front of the seat having been eliminated. The driver's seat, in all closed models, is equipped with finger-tip control for quick adjustment.

Redesigned dials, behind concave glass that eliminates reflections and promotes visility, are mounted in an improved instrument board having walnut-grained panels.

The main chassis changes are the result of a comprehensive revision of design to effect a marked increase in performance ability. To attain greater acceleration, higher speed, and better hill-climbing, Chevrolet has adopted for the new Standard line the large "Blue Flame" engine of the same displacement (206.8 cu. in.) and compression ratio (5.45 to 1) as used in the 1934 Master models, but incorporating many new features contributing to better performance throughout its speed range. To match the gain in engine power and car speed with the necessary increase in braking ability, the cable-controlled braking system also has been improved in operation and increased in capacity. The chassis frame is improved in strength and stiffness to an even greater degree than would have been required merely to keep pace with the increase in the loads imposed upon it by both the engine and the brakes.

NEW HIGH-SPEED SAFETY PLYMOUTH FOR 1935



High speed and safety features mark the new 1935 Plymouth. It boasts the most powerful engine Plymouth has ever built—82 horsepower—and this power increase has been gained without changing the bore or stroke. The 1935 Plymouth is three inches wider and three inches longer than the model of last year. Its All-Steel Safety body has been made more rugged than ever. Floating Ride has been adapted to the new Plymouth by a complete re-distribution of weight and the result is a new "soft" ride. With its flowing lines the appearance of the new 1935 Plymouth is one of modern beauty.

PONTIAC REVEALS FINE NEW MODELS

New Low - Priced Six Joins Straight Eight In Line For 1935

A new low-priced six now joins an improved straight eight to form the nineteen-model line of cars presented by the Pontiac Motor company for 1935. Closely approaching the lowest price field for the first time, Pontiac's two new cars should reap an increase of the total of the industry's business. The new six will be available both in standard and deluxe models.

The wheelbase of the six is 112 inches as compared with 117 inches for the eight. In appearance, it duplicates closely the modern streamlining of the eight.

Five distinctive body styles are offered on the standard six. The models with bodies by Fisher, include: 2-door and 4-door sedans; 2-door and 4-door touring sedans (with built-in trunks), and standard coupe. The deluxe six also includes a sport coupe and cabriolet.

The straight eight provides seven body styles.

Both Pontiac chassis have ample power for the modern mode of high-speed travel. The six-cylinder engine develops 81 horsepower at 65 miles an hour, while the straight eight delivers 84 horsepower at 70 miles an hour.

A comparison of the straight eight with that of last year, reveals many improvements and refinements that also are included in the new six.

Briefly, they are: a marked change in appearance; new Fisher solid-steel "Turret-Top" bodies; build-in luggage space; concealed spart tires; "V" type windshield; greater width in both front and rear seats; divided a folding back front seats in 2-door sedans; new instrument panel; package shelf in all models; new lamps, hydraulic brakes with double and triple sealed drums; new action clutch; automatic choke in the eight; air cooled generator with voltage regulator; interchangeable main and connecting rod bearings; silver alloy connecting rod bearings; steel spoked wheels; increased steering gear ratio; knee-action units (except on standard six) mounted on rigid tubular cross member, and new radiator and hood grilles.

New features are intended to enhance the economical performance, durability, dependability, speed and riding qualities of the 1935 line. They emphasize the almost unbelievable values of the motor car of 1935.

First glance reveals a marked development in the art of scientific teardrop streamlining. Streamlining of radiator, hood, lamps, fenders and Fisher solid steel bodies, has produced an ensemble of clean, flowing lines, with an absence of bumps or projections. Although stylish, it does not cross the borderline of "smart taste."

Outward grace and character are strengthened by the unique manner in which the designers have handled the radiator and hood grille work to give an effect of fleetness without awkwardness or misplaced emphasis. The vertical lines of the radiator grilles astonishingly create the impression of narrow sleekness. A further softening of the entire appearance ensemble is brought about by almost eliminating the gap between the front fenders and the hood.

From the standpoint of appearance as well as construction, the solid steel Fisher body, used for the first time by Pontiac in 1935, is the major feature of the new Pontiac. It is claimed that Fisher solid steel bodies are superior in the distribution of the steel in the interest of greater safety, as well as the satisfying style, comfort, room and convenience that accompany superior safety.

Top fabric over wood-bows and slats, or wood-bows and chicken-wire, have been superseded by a solid steel roof. The steel roof rests on a foundation of steel bows, welded to the steel body panels. Windshields are the "V" windstream type introduced for the first time into the low price field.

Appropriately borrowing a term from the naval architect, this body is called the "Turret-Top". With a hint of ruggedness and dependability, when viewed from the front or rear, it distinctly approaches the design of a torpedo. One of the most finished bids of artisanship is in the slight taper of the body and rear fenders.

Pontiac engineers say the new bodies are quiet and that in test runs last summer, when the weather was above 100 degrees, the temperature inside the solid steel bodies registered below that in the conventional slat-roof type.

Owners of 1935 Pontiac sixes and straight eights will have a choice of seven colors with mouldings, striping and wheels finished to harmonize. Interiors of both sixes and eights reveal an all around increase in inside body dimensions and consequently roominess, for which the solid steel body is largely responsible. The front seat in the 4-door model on both "6 and 8" and in the 2-door on the 8 will accommodate three passengers without crowding.

Two-door sedans on the six cylinder chassis are equipped with bucket front seats, while in the straight eight, a full width front seat with a divided back is provided. Both halves of the back are hinged at the lower edges and may be pushed forward to permit easy entrance to the rear seat. Door widths in 2-door models have been increased from 42 1-2 to 46 1-2 inches, while in the 4-door models, the increase is from 35 to 36 inches.

NEW TERRAPLANES AND HUDSONS HERE

Many Improvements Listed For Popular Cars In 1935 Models

The new Hudsons and Terraplanes for 1935 have arrived and are now on public display for the first time in the showrooms of Simpson Auto Parts company, West Monroe, local dealers. Featured by lower, longer lines with more power, even finer performance and two of the latest developments of the industry, the new cars are expected to create a tremendous amount of interest. The two developments which are entirely new to the industry are the steel-roofed body which incloses the passengers in a silent, solid steel compartment with perfect ventilation and the new electric gearshift which entirely clears the front compartment and gives real finger-tip control of the car.

For 1935 the Hudson Motor Car company will build a Special and DeLuxe series Terraplane 6 on 112 inch wheelbase and a complete series of Hudson cars on three wheelbases, namely, 116, 117 and 124 inch wheelbases. New for 1935 is the Hudson Big Six with a 93 horsepower engine mounted on 116 inch wheelbase chassis. There are five models of the Hudson Standard 8 on 117 inch wheelbase with 113 horsepower, and three models of the Hudson DeLuxe 8 on the 117 inch wheelbase with 113 horsepower. In addition there is the big 8 which will be produced in two models—Custom Club sedan and Custom brougham on 124 inch wheelbase, also with 113 horsepower.

From a performance standpoint the Hudson and Terraplane models all offer improvements for 1935 over 1934. Detailed advancement in engineering and construction in the engine has resulted in increased power without any change in the basic dimensions. As a result of these improvements the power-weight ratio of the new cars is considerably more advantageous than for 1934 with a resulting increase in acceleration, hill climbing ability and top speed.

From an appearance standpoint the cars are lower and longer. The radiator grills have been improved with a higher and narrower effect. The grills are of the pierced type and are very distinctive. The Terraplane grill retains the radial or sun-burst effect of 1934, while the Hudson grills are of two types. The one on the Big Six Hudson is distinctive for that car and the other is used on all Hudson 8's. On both the Terraplane and Hudson, streamline trunk models are available for any sedan or coach.

Another very noteworthy improvement in the Terraplane and Hudson cars for 1935 is the completely redesigned braking system. The brake drums are now made of alloy steel and are machined and polished. The sections have been increased 20 per cent to give greater rigidity. They are now held to an absolute concentricity. A more flexible type of brake shoe is being used, resulting in perfect conformity of the shoe with the drum when the brakes are engaged.

Perfect equalization of brake pressure on the shoe is obtained by a new rotary equalizer which operates with a minimum of friction. The brake cables are hooked to this equalizer which rotates under the impulse of either brake pedal or emergency brake lever, giving an accurately equalized pull and uniform movement on each of the brake cables.

A study of the engineering behind the new Hudson and Terraplane cars indicates that while the fine performance has been even further improved, none of the ruggedness for which the cars have also established a reputation, has been impaired.

It is estimated that 70 per cent of the increase in horsepower of the 1935 motors is the direct result of improved combustion chamber characteristics which have been built upon the patented features of Hudson sylinder head design carried over from previous years.

ARLET FEVER WARNING GIVEN

No Danger In School Situation If Parents Will Be Careful

Possibility that it may be necessary to close some of the schools of the parish unless greater care is exercised in preventing the spread of the present outbreak of scarlet fever was expressed Saturday by Dr. J. W. Williams, director of the Ouachita parish health unit. There should be no difficulty, however, in handling the situation if those in whose homes the malady occurs will exercise proper care, the physician said.

In a statement Saturday, Dr. Williams said:

"Every case of scarlet fever that has come to the attention of the health department during the present outbreak—and we have seen them all—has been comparatively mild, but in dealing with scarlet fever we have a germ that is hard to handle.

"There are two dangers present in a situation of this kind. One of them is that the disease may spread from patient to patient and may increase in virulence until there becomes a strong likelihood of death in each case. Another danger is that the present mildness of the disease will cause people to relax their vigilance and thus bring about a further spread of the malady.

"There is a further danger in the fact that while the disease may appear to be mild it is likely to affect the heart and kidneys. For this reason the patient should be kept in bed and should not be allowed to move around or leave the room. If we had a few deaths in this outbreak there might be less danger of its spreading.

"My advice is to keep the child in bed, under a doctor's care, and to take every precaution against spreading the disease. Families in whose homes scarlet fever occurs also should see to it that their physician notifies the health department immediately, as this will help in shortening the time the child must be quarantined and thus kept out of school.

"All except three of the 20 cases that have come to our attention recently have been reported from Ouachita parish high school. This makes it somewhat more difficult to handle than in the grade schools, for the reason that the pupils move from room to room, instead of staying in one part of the building all the time. Another thing that makes it difficult to handle is the fact that the high school students are so reluctant to lose time from their work. In some instances parents have insisted on sending children to school from a home in which there is a known case of scarlet fever. To prevent the spread of the disease, however, it is necessary that we exercise the greatest care."

In concluding the statement Dr. Williams again said he did not think it would be necessary to close any of the schools and that he thought the situation could be handled without much trouble if those whose children have the disease will only use the proper precautions in protecting their future health and in seeing that they do not make outside contacts.

Clarks

Miss Vivien Jones entertained at her home on the evening of December 31 with a New Year's buffet supper in honor of Miss Charlotte Box of L. S. U. and Miss Virginia Thomas of Louisiana Tech, who were at home for the holidays.

The season's atmosphere was reflected in the beautifully decorated Christmas tree, holly, mistletoe and other symbols of the Yuletide and New Year. Interesting games and contests were arranged as entertainment. After the supper the party was carried to the Library theater to see a midnight performance of "Coquette" presented by students of the Clarks high school under the direction of B. E. Howard, principal. Miss Jones was assisted in extending the courtesies of the evening by her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Paul Jones. Guests who enjoyed this delightful evening were the Misses Faye and Raye Cooksey, Miss Vera Corbin, Miss Marjorie Lewis, Miss Dwana Megison, Miss Charlotte Box, Miss Virginia Thomas, Travis Knight, Karl Kraft, Delaney Wade, Clifford Chapman, Byrd Buffington, Joe Warren Beasley, Clayton Fenton, John Webb., Jr., and S. CARRIS TO ATTEND SOCIETY'S MEETING AT ORLEANS TUESDAY

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5.—(Special)—The managing director of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, Lewis H. Carris, will be guest of honor at the annual meeting of the Louisiana Society for the Prevention of Blindness which will meet in New Orleans Tuesday.

The program will include an address by Mr. Carris, reports on the work and plans of the local society, an exhibition of sight saving devices and social features.

Physicians, scientists, social service workers and the general public from all parts of the state are urged to attend.

In a recent interview, Dr. Chas. A. Bahn, president of the Louisiana Society for the Prevention of Blindness, issued the following statement: "About two thirds of all blindness is preventable. When the public understands the simple fundamentals responsible for the fact that more than 100,000 persons in this country are needlessly blind, we will have done our duty."

Plans are under way for the organization in 1935 of a number of affiliated societies for the prevention of blindness in various sections of the state.

Mr. Carris is expected to be in Monroe during the week at a date to be fixed later, when he will address members of the civic service clubs on the plans for organizing affiliated societies for the prevention of blindness. He is coming to the city under the auspices of the Monroe Lions club, which has as one of its major objectives a program for aiding the blind and helping children with impaired vision.

January 3, 1934.

There was a legal session of the city council of the city of Monroe, Louisiana, held this day with the mayor presiding and Commissioner Swayze present.

The mayor stated the object of the meeting.

ORDINANCE NO. 2707
By Mr. Bernstein

An ordinance to license, regulate and control places and premises used for selling alcoholic, vinous and malt liquor; to prescribe the location of such places and premises; to restrict and restrain the operation of such business in the interest of the public peace and safety; to repeal all ordinances, or parts of ordinances, in conflict with this ordinance; and to provide penalties for the violation of this ordinance.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained by the city council of the city of Monroe in legal session convened, That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to sell, or offer for sale, or keep for sale, any intoxicating spirituous, vinous or malt liquor, exceeding in alcoholic content six (6%) per cent by volume, without first obtaining from the city council of the city of Monroe, a license or permit to engage in such business.

SECTION 2. Be it further ordained, etc., That nothing in this ordinance shall apply to beer, porter, ale, fruit juices and wine as now regulated by Ordinance No. 2681 of the city council of the city of Monroe, adopted on April 11, 1933, unless and until the congress of the United States, or the legislature of the state of Louisiana shall define such beverages as intoxicating.

SECTION 3. Be it further ordained, etc., That any person, firm or corporation applying for a license authorized by this ordinance shall pay to the city of Monroe on or before engaging in such business the following scale of fees for such licenses or permits, dating from the first day of January of each year and expiring on the 31st day of December of each year:

For each wholesale dealer the sum of five hundred and no-100 ($500.00) dollars per annum.

Be it further ordained, etc., That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to sell, or offer for sale, or keep for sale, any spirituous, vinous or malt liquor controlled by this ordinance in, on, or near any premises located in a residential district; and for, the purpose of this section, a residential district is defined to be: "A location where the place of sale is situated so that, within a radius of 300 feet, a majority of the front footage of property is occupied by residential structures."

SECTION 9. Be it further ordained, etc., That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to sell spirituous, vinous or malt liquor controlled by this ordinance outside of the place, or premises, for which a license is granted; provided that nothing in this section shall prevent the delivery of such liquor in unbroken or unopened packages or containers.

SECTION 11. Be it further ordained, etc., That any person, firm or corporation securing a license under this ordinance shall display the same in the place or premises for which it shall be issued, and shall maintain the same on exhibition and diplay continuously during all of the hours within which it is permitted to do business.

SECTION 17. Be it further ordained, etc., That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to sell, keep, or offer for sale, any spirituous, vinous or malt liquor defined in this ordinance without first obtaining from the United States and the state of Louisiana each and every permit authorizing such person to engage as dealer in intoxicating liquors defined by the United States and the state of Louisiana.

TECH CONDITIONS MUCH IMPROVED

President Bond Finishes 20th Biennial Report Of Affairs

RUSTON, La., Jan. 5.—(Special)—That conditions at Louisiana Tech are improved in many respects may be deduced from the 20th biennial report of the affairs of the state's senior college here, just prepared by President G. W. Bond.

The report has been submitted to Governor O. K. Allen; Judge H. H. White of Alexandria, president of the state board of education; T. H. Harris, state superintendent of education; members of the state board of education, and to members of the legislature.

The printed pamphlet contains financial statements of the general fund and the boarding department fund, with no deficit existing in either account. Although the college was "in the red" more than $50,000 in 1928, the deficit was eliminated entirely about three years ago.

While the financial statements in the pamphlet concern only the biennium of 1932-34, other parts of the report show figures covering earlier years.

The report shows, for instance, that there has been a steady improvement in the qualifications of the faculty. In 1928, there were three teachers at Tech with the Ph.D. degree; 28 with the master's degree; 35 with the bachelor's degree, and three with less training than that required for a bachelor's degree. At present, the faculty includes the following: Ph.D., 6; master's, 36; bachelor's, 21, and less, 2.

Another indication of the college's advancement is the increase in enrollment. In 1928, the report shows, there were 778 resident students on the campus, while in the present semester there are 1,101 resident students, exclusive of resignations effective at the end of the fourth week of class work.

In 1922, when Tech first granted the bachelor's degree, 10 students were graduated, the president points out, while in 1934 diplomas were granted to 122 seniors, exclusive of students receiving teacher's certificates.

From 1927, when the Tech library was built, until 1934, the number of bound volumes in the library has been increased from 5,765 to 15,534, according to the report. These figures do not include numerous bound magazines, newspapers and public documents.

"During the past seven years," President Bond reports, "it has been possible to make a number of permanent improvements on the campus, even though there has been no appropriation for these items. The new boys' hall was erected at a cost of $68,000 from money received from a former appropriation. The athletic field has been greatly improved, and with an appropriation made by the last legislature a concrete stadium, with modern equipment and with a seating capacity of 3,000, will be erected during the 1934-35 session.

"Through the cooperation of the state highway department and certain friends of the institution who were willing to donate the materials, the drives on and around the campus were paved during the last few years."

The report also comments on a campus painting project of about $21,000 and a wiring project of about $15,000, both of which are now under way through the medium of the civil works administration. It also refers to social and religious life of the students, extra-curricular activities, the printing department maintained by the college, students aided by the FERA, organization and rating by accrediting associations, and other phases of the institution.

The last sentence in the text of the report says:

"The institution is now on a cash basis and meets its current obligations as they become due."

COURTHOUSE WORK WILL START SOON

Plans For Bastrop Building Drawn By Architects In Monroe

One of the projects expected to get under way in this section of the state within a short time, following withdrawal of the order holding up PWA funds in Louisiana, is the construction of a new courthouse building at Bastrop, it was stated Saturday by H. H. Land of the firm of J. W. Smith and Associates, architects. It had been feared that a tie-up of this fund might materially delay the construction.

Plans for the courthouse have already been drawn by the architectural firm here. The building is expected to be erected at a cost of about $30,000, through funds provided by the public works administration.

Another building project for which the firm has drawn plans, though not in any way connected with PWA or other public funds, is the construction of a new Catholic church at Lake Providence. This building will cost about $7,500 and will be a brick structure replacing the present frame building.

The firm also expects to draw plans for several other buildings of good size within the near future, it was stated, but plans for them were said not yet to be definite enough to announce. One of the buildings for which they have already drawn plans, but which has not yet been built, is the residence to be erected for Judge Charles Schulze, superintendent of Louisiana Training institute, for about $15,000. It is not expected that this work will be done before spring or early summer.

Kusin Will Leave Tonight To Attend Furniture Exhibit

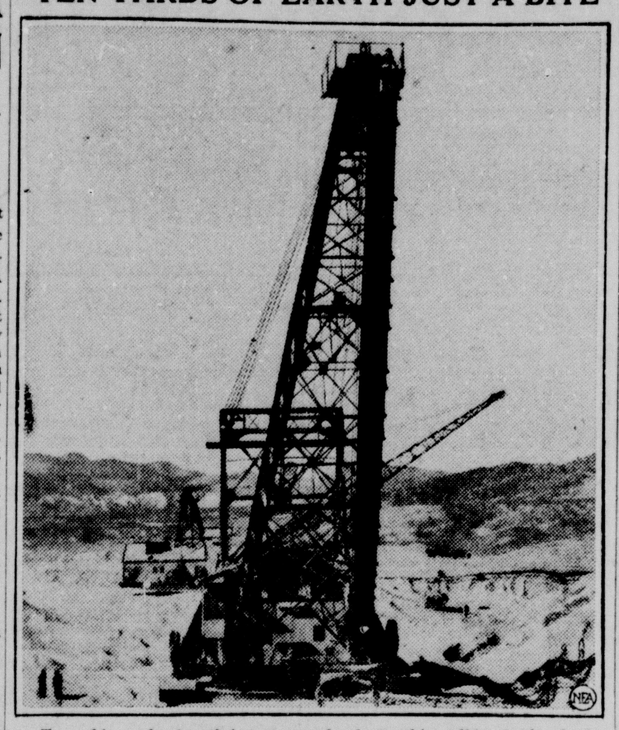
Joseph Kusin, owner of the Dixie Bedding and Furniture company, will leave tonight for Chicago, where he will attend the annual bedding manufacturers' convention and the January furniture show.

While in Chicago Mr. Kusin will make furniture purchases for the wholesale and retail furniture stores. New shipments will begin to arrive within a short time. He advised those contemplating the purchase of an occasional piece of furniture or furnishing a complete home to wait to see the new arrivals in furniture.

Mr. Kusin is optimistic over the business outlook for 1935, believing that business in all lines is beginning to show improvement and that indications are that this will be one of the best years since 1926.

Retail sales within the last few months, he said, have gradually increased and asserted that buyers are leaning toward better merchandise this year. He expects to buy a more varied line and promises one of the most complete stocks of home furnishings in this section of Louisiana.

TEN YARDS OF EARTH JUST A BITE



Ten cubic yards of earth is just a good gulp for this walking bridge dredge operating along the route of the $33,000,000 All-American canal, from the Colorado river to California's Imperial Valley. Towering far into the air, it is an outstanding attraction in Arizona, where it is shown at work north of Yuma, following recent dedication of the project.

MARTIN RETURNS

A. C. Martin, 504 South First street, who has been a patient at the Missouri Pacific hospital at Little Rock, Ark., for nearly two weeks, returned to his home here Friday night.

CITY WILL MOVE STREET CAR BARN

Transportation Equipment To Be Housed At New Location

Following the recent substitution of bus service for street car service in the north end of town, D. A. Breard, commissioner of finance and utilities, said Saturday that the transportation storage and maintenance barn would be transferred from its present location in Forsythe park to the Frank Eason building on Lee avenue and Dick Taylor street. Some time will be required to accomplish the change and it may be 60 days or more before it is completed, Mr. Breard said.

The Eason building was said to have been selected because of its convenient location and because of the comparatively low cost of preparing it to house the street cars, busses and maintenance equipment. It is 100 by 150 feet in dimensions and the property includes about half a block of land, thus providing plenty of space. Mr. Breard said the property had been purchased by the city and a record of the transaction probably would be filed soon.

It became necessary to discontinue street car service on Riverside because of the state highway bridge and highways leading to it along Louisville avenue. For this reason the cars were taken to the north end of town only for servicing. It was not deemed advisable by members of the city commission to maintain the tracks merely for the purpose of transporting cars to the north end for servicing. Such portions of the track as are suitable will be salvaged.

The old barn in Forsythe park is in a somewhat dilapidated condition and it is expected that it will be torn down after all the machinery and equipment have been transferred to the new location. This work, if done, will be done under the supervision of R. D. Swayze, commissioner of streets and parks, as a part of the beautification program at the park, it was stated.

Bigger Crop Production Seen In Claiborne Area

HOMER, La., Jan. 5.—(Special)—An increased production in the growing of tomatoes, sweet potatoes and Irish potatoes is predicted for this area this season as indicated by the early preparation for extension of crop operations.

Beginning Monday definite arrangements for the advancement of truck gardening and the raising, principally, of tomatoes and potatoes, will be made at a series of meetings to be held here throughout the week, ending next Saturday.

Hot beds for growing tomato plants are already in use and will supply enough plants to fill the needs of this entire trade territory.

Shipping facilities have been extended with two new tomato sheds at Athens and Magnolia, Ark. Loading sheds will be stationed at the following places: Homer, Haynesville, Gibsland, Saline, Athens and Magnolia, all in the territory traversed by the L. & N. W. railroad.

THEFT REPORTED

W. E. Rabb of Vicksburg reported to police that a man's overcoat and a woman's purse were stolen from his automobile Friday night while it was parked downtown.

BALL RITES TO BE HELD TODAY

Funeral For Hunting Accident Victim Is Planned At 3 P. M.

Funeral services for John Ethridge Ball, 54, well known among local game hunters and older residents of the city, who accidentally shot himself fatally Friday afternoon, will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at his home on the Richwood road, with Rev. Colvin of Rayville and Rev. D. C. Barr of Oak Ridge officiating. Interment will be made in Riverview cemetery with Masons in charge.

A request was made that all members of Western Star lodge No. 24 meet at the Masonic hall at 2 o'clock. From there members of this organization will attend the funeral in a body. Mr. Ball was a thirty-second degree Mason, a Shriner and a member of Western Star lodge No. 24.

Pallbearers will be H. C. Mize, C. R. Tidwell, Ira Pettit, T. L. Morris, Lawrence McDonald, W. G. Miller, Frank Chase and Joe Mundo, Sr.

Surviving are the widow and a sister, Mrs. O. A. Dunn of Girard.

Mr. Ball had lived here practically all his life. He was employed for many years as a blacksmith by the V. S. and P. shops here and later worked as a saw filer for saw mills. In recent years he had operated a truck and poultry farm on the Richwood road, south of Louisiana Training institute.

Mr. Ball's left side was almost shot away after he thought he had taken all the shells out. The accident occurred on the Prairie road southeast of Monroe. He was found at his car in a dying condition and died about 15 minutes after arriving at a sanitarium in Monroe. Before he died, however, he said he had thought he had taken all the shells out of the gun and that he was pressing the barrel down toward the stock when the cartridge was discharged.

Hardwood Mill Is Being Erected Near Bernice

BERNICE, La., Jan. 5.—(Special)—Mayo and Sons sawmill is installing a hardwood mill just south of town, which will be in operation, it is hoped, by the first of next month.

The plant will be a dimension mill that will cut hickory and oak in lengths from six to 18 feet.

The wood, it was said, will be shipped to Dover, Ark., and later to Europe to be used for skis.

PARISH SCHOOLS WILL CELEBRATE

Ter-Centennial Of Higher Institutions Will Be Observed

Plans are already being made in Ouachita parish, as well as throughout Louisiana and the entire nation, for the celebration in March of the ter-centennial of high schools in the United States, T. O. Brown, superintendent of parish schools, said Saturday. There will be a special observance in this parish and the occasion will also be appropriately noted in the state and nation, Supt Brown said.

Appointments for the state organization for celebrating the 300th anniversary of high schools in Louisiana were announced recently by Charles F. Trudeau, state high school supervisor. District chairmen were appointed from among school superintendents and Supt. Brown was named chairman of the celebration committee for Ouachita parish.

State organization for the celebration was planned in pyramid with every high school principal being asked to serve as ex-officio chairman of the local observance committee. The district chairman will have general supervision over the local committees. Principals of the three parish high schools in Ouachita parish will serve as local chairmen under Supt. Brown.

Although the entire school term of 1934-1935 was designated as the ter-centennial celebration period, celebration ceremonies were fixed to take place in the spring.

As in the national celebration, ceremonies within the state of Louisiana will pay respect to the American tradition of public, universal and democratic high school education, established with the Boston Latin school in 1635. By means of exhibitions and pageants, the schools will also foster a greater public appreciation of the problems and achievements of high schools, it was announced.

In Ouachita parish the high schools will carry out exercises befitting the occasion on March 15. On the night of March 14 a radio program on the subject will be presented. Supt Brown said that station KMLB of Monroe had agreed to donate the necessary time on the air for the program.

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY -:- The Trojan War—Part V -:- By J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

TRUE TO HIS PROMISE TO ULYSSES, ACHILLES, WITH HIS FRIEND PATROCLUS AND THE FLOWER OF THE FIGHTING MEN OF THESSALY, HASTENED TO JOIN THE WAITING GREEK HOST AT AULIS.

AGAMEMNON GAVE ORDERS FOR THE ARMY TO EMBARK FOR THE ATTACK ON TROY. BEFORE SAILING THE SUPERSTITIOUS GREEKS MADE SACRIFICES TO THE GODS TO BRING THE FLEET FAVORING WINDS.

BUT FOR MANY DAYS GALES AND HEAD WINDS DELAYED THEIR DEPARTURE. AGAIN AGAMEMNON CONSULTED THE ORACLE. HE WAS TOLD THAT THE GODS WERE ANGRY AND WOULD NOT BE APPEASED UNLESS HE SACRIFICED HIS DAUGHTER IPHIGENIA TO THE GODDESS DIANA---!

AGAMEMNON SORROWFULLY CONSENTED, BUT JUST AS THE PRIEST WAS ABOUT TO SLAY THE GIRL, A DEER APPEARED. TAKING THIS AS A SIGN THAT DIANA WAS NO LONGER ANGRY, THE PRIESTS SACRIFICED THE ANIMAL INSTEAD OF IPHIGENIA.

AT LAST FAVORABLE WINDS FILLED THE SAILS OF THE GREEK SHIPS AND THE VAST FLEET SET OUT ACROSS THE AEGEAN. THERE WERE MORE THAN A THOUSAND SHIPS, EACH BEARING A HUNDRED MEN.

THE GREEKS SPED ACROSS THE SEA AND SOON LANDED ON THE SHORE OF ASIA MINOR NEAR TROY. THEY HAD HOPED TO TAKE THEIR FOES BY SURPRISE, BUT THE TROJANS HAD BEEN WARNED OF THEIR COMING.

TROY WAS STRONGLY FORTIFIED AND WELL PROVISIONED. WHEN THE INVADING FLEET WAS SIGHTED, THE ALARM WAS SOUNDED AND ALL THE TROJANS FLED INTO THE CITY.

FROM THE SECURITY OF THEIR STOUT WALLS THE TROJANS HURLED DOWN DERISIVE DEFIANCE AT THE GREEKS.

© 1935, J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

FINDING TROY COULD NOT BE TAKEN BY STORM, THE GREEKS ENCAMPED AROUND THE CITY AND SETTLED DOWN FOR A LONG SIEGE.

Amazing Aftermaths For 2 Romantic Girl HITCH-HIKERS A Millionaire Debutante An Adventurous "Hello Girl"!

"Going My Way, Mister?" They Cried—and Got Knights of the Road as Husbands: Evelyn's Gold Mine Crashed, But Virginia Is Still Happy, Though Laid Up in the Hospital

DETERMINED THUMB AND CHIN

Virginia Gates McCafferty, Looking So Wistful Above, Deserted Pink Teas for the West and a He-Man of the Open Road.

YOUTH. A midday sun. Dust on your shoes. A whistle on your lips. Knapsack swinging. Heart pounding. And a stalwart man trudging beside you down the Open Road.

What more could romantic girlhood ask than this?

Evelyn Winant Walcher and Virginia Ewing Gates McCafferty, two hitch-hiking young ladies of different backgrounds but similar tastes, wanted nothing more when they set forth, modern pilgrims in search of adventure. They found plenty. They found all that was in the book and more besides—they found husbands. Both met and married Knights of the Open Road.

Later, by coincidence, each girl asked her father for $250—one in order to get home to papa, the other to finance domesticity in California. But that was later.

Evelyn and Virginia did not know each other. Evelyn was a New York telephone operator and Virginia a wealthy Philadelphia debutante and heiress, daughter of a university president. Evelyn found the Open Road strewn with thistles, while Virginia found roses of ecstasy, albeit they were roses with thorns.

But both girls started out with hopes as high as the mountain peaks that towered around them in the country known as God's.

Evelyn began hiking from Littleton, Col., where she had gone with her 19-year-old brother, Theodore, on a photograph-soliciting jaunt. She set out, made her way to Idaho Springs—and there she met rugged Nestor Walcher, 40-year-old wandering gold miner.

Their paths lay side by side. The Open Road bred rapid romance. They were man and wife within a few days after they met.

And now the two started out to cross the Arizona desert on foot. It was midwinter. Puckered lips stiffened. Caressing fingertips froze. Feet became cakes of ice, while the honeymooners sat on tin cans by the side of the road, waiting for passing autoists to take pity on them.

It was one thing to sing—"where the winds blow free!" and quite another, Evelyn discovered, to feel the real wind in the marrow of your bones!

Evelyn arrived in Los Angeles on the verge of a nervous and physical breakdown. Aimee Semple McPherson, the Four Square Gospel Evangelist, took her in; she was even allowed to sit in Aimee's personal lounging chair.

"It cost $1,000, so you can imagine how comfortable that chair must have been," explained Evelyn naively. "Aimee fed me and brought me books to read. Why, I felt just like a queen."

A short-lived feeling for Evelyn! She went into a hospital and was practically unconscious for fifteen days. When she recovered, she and Nestor went home to Papa Winant.

Papa tried to find Nestor a position with the telephone company. But imagine his surprise when he learned Evelyn's gallant knight could not write well enough to fill out an application blank!

Back to the road for Evelyn and Nestor. They got as far as Boulder, Col., this time and worked for their keep for some of Nestor's relatives who kept bees and raised beets. Nestor got a job in a gold mine, just to keep his professional standing, but after two weeks of it he quit.

"I don't think he liked to work much," remarked Evelyn. "We lived in 12 or 15 different houses because he would not pay rent. I became sick again, and finally the hospital put me out because he wouldn't pay the bills."

So, disillusioned Evelyn went home to Papa again; this time alone. She has never seen Nestor since, she says, but his bills keep coming to her, bills from all over the country. She told of those bills, and the rest of it, when she obtained a New Jersey divorce.

"He never even bought me a pair of stockings during the whole time we were married," summed up Evelyn.

Dan McCafferty: He Picked a Pretty Heiress Without Knowing It.

But Virginia McCafferty had a different story to tell. She said her boxer-wrestler-taxicab-driver-hitch-hiker-husband is "You bet!" a good provider. He has not been employed yet, at latest advices, but he is jack of all trades. Papa Gates, who is President of the University of Pennsylvania, sent $250 as a parental blessing, with promises of a monthly allowance.

The start of Virginia's romance created a furor. Virginia disappeared from a dude ranch at Cora, near, near Pinedale, Wyoming, where she had been staying. Dad set the Federal agents looking for her, a tall, athletic girl in black sombrero, white corduroy slacks, a man's shirt and leather moccasins with rubber soles. Nothing about her revealed she was an heiress. Just another hitch-hiker with a determination, inherited from her father, to do what she wanted to do, regardless of opposition.

It came naturally to her. Dr. Gates, you may recall, was the capitalist who resigned from the powerful financial houses of J. P. Morgan and Company and Drexel and Company, to become an educator. He explained: "I realize that, to many men, what I am doing would seem a very foolish thing. But it does not seem so to me. I feel very fortunate. I am going to be able to do the kind of work in which I am most interested."

Virginia followed her bent, too. She never had liked the social game to which she was born. She went West to avoid it.

She liked outdoor life, riding horseback, not getting dressed up for tea and dinner and dancing. But that palled too, and feeling adventuresome one day, she set out alone on the Open Road. She had $20, her health and youth, and complete anonymity.

"I liked hitch-hiking," she said later. "I never suffered any undue hardships. I was not compelled to sleep in the open and I never went hungry."

Dan McCafferty was out hiking it alone, too. They met and teamed up. And they were married in Moscow, Idaho. Just before the ceremony, Virginia told him who she was. She had some trepidation confessing the extent of her social connections and her father's fortune. But after the first shock Dan laughed about it with her. It made no difference to either of them.

Then the lost became found, for Virginia notified Dad. Dr. Gates sent the rescue-fund, asked for details, and Virginia, in an interview, shyly said: "Just say we met at a rodeo dance in Pinedale a year ago."

The couple promptly gave up hitch-hiking after the wedding. But they may go back to it again, for their first experiment in motoring proved rather disastrous.

Spending some of Dad's $250 for a second-hand car, they started out blithely for California. Danny planned to get work in the Imperial Valley; whether as a boxer, wrestler, taxicab driver, mechanic or vegetable field worker he did not say. They had picked up en route Danny's brother, Joe, and a pal named Gordon Bennett. Just four buddies, traveling in style.

Then, in the dark, they collided head-on with another car; a seven-year-old girl was killed; everyone was injured. Virginia and her husband ended up in a Sacramento Hospital, where they were confined for many weeks.

Trouble did not blight their romance, though. Indeed, as the two lay on adjacent hospital cots getting over their injuries, they were heard planning new hikes together along the Open Road.

END OF THE TRAIL

SUNBURN TRICKED THE JUDGES INTO CROWNING HER GYPSY QUEEN

Gorgeously Arrayed Like This, Margit Symo Was Voted Prettiest Gypsy.

MARGIT SYMO started on that Spanish cruise with adventurous thoughts: moonlight nights, glamorous scenes, music and laughter. Surely from these would come romance!

While she dreamed in the daytime, the tropical sun bathed her lovely face in warmth. Bit by bit, her fair complexion darkened, until finally she was nicknamed "Little Gypsy" by fellow passengers, she was so dark.

Her mother and father were happy, because she was so well. They were proud of the beauty her sunburned skin set off so strikingly.

Granada—and the party went ashore to a dinner in their honor. Margit sat next to a young Spaniard, Jose Cartos, whose admiring glances made her feel her adventure was about to begin. But she did not dream how near it was, nor what its nature would be.

"How would you like to go to the Gypsy Girl's Beauty Contest tomorrow night?" whispered the Spanish youth.

Margit said she'd love it.

"Would you like to enter?" suggested Senor Cartos.

"Sure," said Margit.

Next night she slipped away from her parents and the other tourists, put on borrowed clothes Jose had brought, and appeared with dozens of actual Gypsies on the ballroom floor, when her parents entered. At first her parents were angry—then they saw the judges hand Margit a card—and finally saw her receive a silver-framed mirror, first prize for Gypsy beauty.

These Real Gypsy Girls in Granada Couldn't Hold a Candle to the Hungarian Flapper.

She confessed then that her color was not natural, but she kept her title: Queen of Granada Gypsies. The Spaniards took it as a good joke on the part of the little girl from Budapest.

Imagine Margit's surprise when, some weeks later, back in Hungary, she received a letter from a film producer in Berlin, asking her to accept the leading part in a new picture to be called "Gypsy Blood."

She is in Berlin now, working on the picture; lucky to be able to speak German and look Spanish. And she is still receiving daily letters with Spanish stamps—from the admiring cause of all her good fortune.

Violence Averted By Agreement In Oil Controversy

Many Workers Refuse To Adjourn After Compromise Is Reached

State Agrees To Rebate Tax On All Louisiana Product Refined

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Violence threatened by workers of the Standard Oil company of Louisiana was averted tonight by a compromise, which Senator Huey P. Long said had been reached between the oil officials and the administration over the proposed five cents per barrel tax on oil refined in Louisiana.

A mass meeting of workers assembled from all parts of the state in Baton Rouge was held at bay for an hour and a half by the announcement that a satisfactory compromise had been reached and only needed approval from the general offices of the oil company in New York.

The committee of workers who called the meeting sought to adjourn it after Senator Long had announced that the New York office had accepted the terms, but many of the workers refused to adjourn.

Under the chairmanship of Ernest Bourgeois, an oil worker, the "Square Deal association" was formed and another meeting set for 7:30 tomorrow night at Baton Rouge.

The dissenting members of the mass meeting, numbering about one-half of the original assemblage, expressed dissatisfaction at acceptance of Senator Long's word of the compromise and declared they wished official confirmation before withdrawing from the fight.

However, no official of the Standard Oil company either in New York or Louisiana would issue any statement on the subject tonight.

Under the compromise terms, Senator Long said, the state administration agreed to rebate the tax on all Louisiana oil refined and that the oil company agreed to use 80 per cent of Louisiana oil at the refinery and only 20 per cent of foreign oil.

Senator Long expressed great satisfaction over the agreement and said he had taken J. C. Hilton, president of the Standard Oil company of Louisiana, to dinner to celebrate the settlement. He said the 1,000 employes who had been discharged by the Standard Oil company in their proposed retrenchment program would be reinstated and that "everybody was happy."

The compromise, Senator Long said, was first reached between Mr. Hilton and himself in New Orleans and late tonight had been ratified by the general headquarters of the oil company in New York.

A few of the oil workers shouted for violence in Baton Rouge, one worker calling for volunteers to follow him to the statehouse to demand a special session to revoke the tax. But the cooler heads quickly squelched them and the meeting adjourned without disorder.

As the meeting was adjourning, Senator Long boarded a train for Washington where he plans to take the floor of the senate early next week and explain his Louisiana activities and as he said "answer certain questions regarding the administration."

NEW GROUP TAKES OVER MEETING

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 5.—(AP)—A new group of oil workers, dissatisfied with Senator Huey P. Long's announcement of an oil tax "compromise" tonight took a protest meeting away from the committee that originally called it, and demanded "action" after the first committee declared the meeting "adjourned."

"Are we going to get s... ...ion or are we going to let things go?" demanded Ernest Bourgeois, Baton Rouge Standard Oil refinery worker, leaping on the meeting rostrum after angry speeches had followed a quick "adjournment" announcement by the employes committee that indicated

ROME, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Benito Mussolini and Pierre Laval, representatives of two of Europe's most powerful nations, tonight publicly pledged them to friendship and active collaboration in the cause of peace.

"The peace of Europe remains precarious," France's foreign minister said at the brilliant banquet Il Duce gave for him in the Venezia palace, "and requires the attentive care of statesmen."

The continent's peoples, Laval said, "are not willing to wait any longer" for peace.

In stirring speeches, Mussolini and his French guest foreshadowed the signing of Italo-French accords designed to guarantee Austria's independence, fortify the structure of peace and wipe out long standing differences between the two nations.

"We have given rise to great hopes," Laval said. "We will not deceive them. Peace must be maintained and consolidated."

That is ONE message that will be read with close attention by every intelligent American.

LOOK OUT if you are "over-privileged."

But, if you are merely a man that has worked, made some money and still have it, which sounds improbable, there is no worry, for the pres-

PRISONER ADMITS TWO BURGLARIES IN WEST MONROE

Bernard Haywood Is Returned Here After Being Shot In Arkansas

Arrested at Marion, Ark., last Sunday, after being shot in the hip by the arresting officer, a man who first gave his name as Jack Wolf, and who was returned here for an investigation of a series of burglaries in West Monroe on the night of Friday, December 28, has made a full confession of having perpetrated two of the robberies, Sheriff Milton Coverdale said yesterday afternoon.

The confessed burglar, who left here for Arkansas in a stolen car, owned by Willis Montgomery, of Monroe, gave his real name as Bernard Haywood, 24 years of age.

Sheriff Coverdale said Haywood's story of having committed only two of the burglaries in West Monroe was apparently authentic. This was borne out, principally, by the fact that Haywood evidently did not commit the robbery of the T. John Department store, as the burglar in this instance was badly cut by the glass of a show window he broke to gain entrance. Haywood was not injured.

The prisoner said he conducted his operations alone here, and denied another burglar or burglars worked with him.

In confessing his criminal career to the sheriff, Haywood was said to have related that in 1932, at the age of 22 years, he was committed to a reformatory at St. Cloud, Minn., for burglaries of filling stations. He did not remain long at the reformatory, it was stated.

Early in October of last year, Haywood committed a series of robberies at Marion, Kan. When the night marshall attempted to take him in custody, he was said to have attacked the marshal and to have taken possession of his pistol.

A short time later, Haywood was arrested at Westfield, N. Y., and the marshal's pistol he had in his possession was identified. He was returned to Marion. Christmas night he broke jail there, and made his way

PARAGUAYANS TAKE MAJOR STRONGHOLD

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 5.—(AP)—A smashing Paraguayan offensive today brought the fall of Fort Capirenda, one of Bolivia's two major strongholds, dispatches from Asuncion tonight said.

Fort Villa Montes, principal Bolivian army base and Paraguay's chief objective in her latest drive, was placed in serious danger, together with the oil fields lying behind it, by the fall of Capirenda, the advices said.

The captured fort, situated between Villa Montes and Carandayty, was an important communication link between those two centers.

With Capirenda in their possession, the Paraguayans were expected to redouble their drive at Villa Montes, fall of which would leave the way open to invasion of one of Bolivia's richest areas.

Villa Montes, however, was defended by heavily fortified hillside positions, and La Paz reported successive Paraguayan attacks had been beaten back, the Paraguayans suffering heavy losses.

CONGRESS READY TO ACT ON TWO HUGE AID PLANS

President Expected To Give Message Asking For $4,000,000,000

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—With majority leaders already having pledged approval by their followers, congress will tackle immediately next week an $880,000,000 appropriation to taper off the dole and then turn at once to a work relief program embracing more than four times that amount.

Conferees of President Roosevelt disclosed this line-up today as the lead off for a 20-point program to be submitted piece-meal from the White House. Work will be started immediately after receipt on Monday of what they described as an $8,000,000,000 budget message.

These same leaders predicted that congress would approve the relief measures without undue delay and with probably only slight change.

Probably on Monday Mr. Roosevelt is to send his request for the $880,000,000 emergency relief appropriation designed to taper off direct handouts by next November. Later in the week he is scheduled to transmit a special message calling for the creation of a new set-up to handle some $4,000,000,000 in carrying out his work-relief program until private industry absorbs some 3,500,000 employables and for the return of around 1,500,000 unemployables to local relief.

Some house members who have followed the tax situation closely, although declining to be quoted, today discussed where the money for this huge program was coming from. Some even went so far as to say it might be necessary to enact new taxes.

At any rate, they were preparing to re-enact $416,000,000 in "nuisance" taxes which expire at the end of the present fiscal year, as the president requested at a meeting with leaders last night.

In short, after the relief moves, the president's plan for a broad social security program combining unemployment insurance, old age pensions and other welfare propositions will be given congress.

While some members today took the attitude that these subjects should be handled separately for legislative purposes, it was agreed by leaders

SALE OF CARBON PLANTS RECORDED

Transfer Of Properties Is Said To Be Million Dollar Deal

Sale of carbon plant properties, for the consideration of one million dollars according to a statement from an unimpeachable source was recorded yesterday at the office of the clerk of parish court. The Century Carbon company was the seller and the United Carbon company was the buyer.

The properties involved are located in Ouachita and Richland parishes, principally near Swartz and Archibald. They include carbon plants, gas wells, leases, mineral rights, pipe lines and one gasoline plant. Involved in the sale were the former International Gas Products plant, the former Union Gas Products plant, and the former North American Carbon plant.

The purchase price, as stated in the papers recording the sale, was $150,000 and other valuable considerations. It was learned, however, that the consideration was approximately one million dollars.

Another purchase made by the United Carbon company was also recorded at the clerk's office. James W. Standley sold to the company approximately 420 acres of land located at Lamkin station, for the consideration of $23,000, represented by the assumption of a mortgage held by the carbon company and subject to the federal land bank of New Orleans.

CALIFORNIA HIT BY HEAVY RAINS

(By Associated Press)

Windstorm, flood and gale driven rain greeted refugees from winter in the California and Florida resorts Saturday while the season dealt more gently with the folks up north.

The worst storm in a year subsided in California after flooding highways and streets in San Francisco and southern California cities. Shipping was delayed by the gale, and the British tanker, Crescentia, long overdue from Japan, was feared lost at sea.

Residents in the foothills of the Sierra Madre mountains back of Los Angeles were warned of a flood approaching. The deluge blocked foothill boulevards with landslides between La Crescenta and Tujunca, made rivers of Los Angeles streets and emptied into downtown basements. Rowboats were ready to save marooned residents of Long Beach.

MAY CALL TROOPS TO KEEP ORDER IN BILOXI'S SQUABBLE

BILOXI, Miss., Jan. 5.—(AP)—It was reported in Biloxi tonight that an appeal might be made to Governor Sennett Conner for national guard troops to preserve order in this coast port Monday when a fight between two contenders to the mayor's office is to meet its crisis.

Special city police and deputies of Harrison county are being held in readiness for any emergency and Mayor R. Hart Chinn, one of the principals in the official row, expressed the belief tonight that there would not be any trouble exceeding sharp court contests over the qualification of candidates for office when the mayor and commissioners approach the hour of change, 10 a.m.

Heated verbal exchanges have occurred during the past few days between Mayor Chinn, incumbent and his elected successor, J. A. O'Keefe, over the mayor's challenge of O'Keefe's holding office on the claim of delinquent taxes and a similar challenge of the qualifications of some of the commissioners.

Mayor Chinn now faces a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill as a result of his recent fight in a council meeting with City Commissioner John Swanzy over a city gasoline bill.

Chinn is seeking to block the entry of O'Keefe into office on the claim that he had not paid his taxes and O'Keefe declared that the people elected him and he would take office Monday.

NRA ADJUSTMENT BOARD APPROVED FOR THIS PARISH

Three Monroe Men To Receive Complaints On Code Violations

Government approval of the three men selected to compose the NRA adjustment board for Ouachita parish has been received and the board is now ready to act, T. S. Hickman, NRA field adjuster for north Louisiana, said Saturday upon his arrival in Monroe from his headquarters at Shreveport. The board will receive complaints and may be appealed to by employers who believe they have been unjustly charged with violating code provisions.

M. C. Redmond, Monroe attorney, and former state senator from this district, will head the board as chairman, and will be the special representative of the public. Lee Ellis, Monroe contractor, and G. C. Williams, local painter, are the other members of the group and were named to represent business and labor, respectively. Mr. Williams and Mr. Ellis were originally named and they then selected Mr. Redmond as the third member.

Mr. Hickman said that since he last visited here several months ago he had been devoting his time principally to obtaining code compliance among the larger business and industrial concerns. He will be here on this occasion about 10 days or two weeks and in the future hopes to be able to spend about one week out of each month in Monroe, he said.

Action against violators in most instances is taken on information obtained by government investigators, Mr. Hickman said. Comparatively few of the complaints are received from employes of the concern complained against, as most of the employes are either afraid the complaint will react

Goes Into Court To Demand Accounting Of City Expenditures

Kingfish Makes Charges Before Leaving Last Night For Capital

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5.—(AP)—On the allegation that the city of New Orleans had used funds illegally, the forces of Senator Huey P. Long, the dictator, today went into court to obtain an accounting of millions of dollars handled by the city under the administration of Long's political enemy, Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley.

A suit filed this afternoon in civil district court on behalf of Governor O. K. Allen and Attorney General Gaston L. Porterie, political aides of Long, asked for a tie-up of city funds by injunction for a public hearing on accounts.

Simultaneously the supreme court by a majority vote acted favorably upon a motion presented to it asking for the appointment of an outside judge to hear the case.

The court appointed Judge A. L. Ponder, of Amite, to sit on the case and January 15 was set for the hearing on the petition.

Before the scheduled departure of Long tonight for Washington to carry the Louisiana situation before the United States senate Long charged that the city of New Orleans, which he is striving to annex to his political machine, had "two million dollars worth of open accounts on their books" that the books, "two sets of them, one which says one thing and the other another," are so "messed up" that his auditors who have been checking them in his city legislative investigation can't tell anything about the books.

Long charged that the city was "four or five million dollars in arrears" and alleged that the city administration had misused $2,000,000 of highway funds that was given them by the state to construct and improve streets and roads in the city.

"I have been informed by George Wallace (assistant attorney general)" Long said, "that the court action will not affect the running expenses of the city. It will just affect open accounts and bank debts."

He declared that the court suit was intended to get the books of the city

Final Winners In Jinky Contest Are Named Today

In today's issue of the Morning World and News-Star there is a list of the prize winners for the last week of the Jinky contest which has been running in Monroe for thirteen weeks. There is scarcely anyone in Ouachita parish who has not made or at least tried to make one of the little Jinkys given by the co-operating firms in the contest.

The grand prize, $100, for the person entering the greatest number of Jinky sets was won by Mrs. C. C. Bell of West Monroe. She was the winner, but the Parent Teacher association made a great runner-up.

Mrs. Marie Bankhead Owen of the department of archives and history of the state of Alabama, seeing the Jinky contest in Montgomery, conceived the idea of using the Jinky plan to help the crippled children of the nation. She has written a little booklet picturing Jinky as a little character coming down to this earth with the thought of helping the tiny cripples throughout the land. In the center of the booklet in a Jinky. Her plan is to have these booklets sold by a national organization of women and then give a certain amount of the proceeds to the children and use the remainder for prizes for the persons making the best Jinkys. It is her idea to have one day in the year to be known as Jinky day and on that day to sell the booklets. In other words, in one day sufficient funds would be raised for the entire year.

Reilly Challenged To Name 4 Persons He Says Kidnaped And Slew Lindbergh's Baby

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 5.—The baby murder trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann has turned, in three short days, into a trial not of the chalk-faced German carpenter alone, but of many others—men and women, persons alive and persons dead.

That is the now apparent strategy of Edward J. Reilly, the shrewd Brooklyn lawyer who is directing the attempt to save Hauptmann from the chair. With double-edged questions, Reilly has waved the pointing finger (sometimes subtly, sometimes boldly) in the direction of various persons whose names have long been familiar in the "Lindbergh case," as well as some whose names have not.

Who are those concerning whom Reilly is seeking more light?

There is, for one, "Red" Johnson.

There is Ollie Whateley, the butler for the Charles A. Lindberghs at the time the Lindbergh boy-baby was kidnaped and murdered nearly three years ago.

Whateley is dead. His widow, the Lindberghs' housekeeper, arises spiritedly to defend her husband's name.

There is the shy, doe-like Betty Gow; and Violet Sharpe, the maid who committed suicide while the inquiry was at its height, no one knows why. And there is the New Jersey state police force. It, also, is on trial. And the venerable Dr. John F. Condon.

One more: "Swede" Anderson. Who is "Swede" Anderson, an aviator who held a stick on the early airmail planes and "had trouble" with Colonel Lindbergh?

These persons, and some others, are finding themselves unexpectedly "on trial" as the case of the people of the state of New Jersey versus Bruno Richard Hauptmann for murder of a babymoves steadily along. For instance, "Red" Johnson.

There was a time that Johnson found a questioning finger pointed at him. He was a friend of Betty Gow, the baby's nurse. He had driven an automobile into New England the night of the kidnaping. In the car was found a milk bottle. To feed a baby? Police wondered, and they questioned him. The milk, they found was for "Red" himself, he being in

CITY WILL HONOR PRES. ROOSEVELT

Junior Charity League To Sponsor Annual Birthday Ball

Plans for Monroe's participation in the nation-wide observance of the president's birthday, Wednesday, January 30, were announced Saturday by Mayor Arnold Bernstein, who has been named local chairman of arrangements for the event by Henry L. Doherty, national chairman of the president's birthday ball committee.

Mayor Bernstein announced that the Junior Charity league would be the local sponsors of the ball, and that the Chamber of Commerce of Monroe and West Monroe, as well as the city of Monroe, had pledged support of the program. More than 5,000 communities throughout the nation will hold similar balls on the same night, the proceeds to be devoted to the national campaign for the control of infantile paralysis. Last year nearly $1,000,000 was raised for the Warm

CALEXICO, Calif., Jan. 5.—(AP)—A fleet of trucks and motor cars believed to be speeding from the United States into Mexico with 120 machine guns and ammunition for revolutionary plotters was hunted strenuously by officers on both sides of the border tonight.

Instructions to stop the gun-running caravan "at all costs" were delivered to guards on both sides of the international line. Guard forces were doubled both in American and Mexican territory.

Reports that 300 additional machine guns were stored in a huge Los Angeles warehouse, presumably awaiting movement into revolutionary hands south of the boundary, sent detectives there on a hunt for the place.

Two men were held in Los Angeles after assertedly telling police the arms and ammunition had been collected and secreted there over a period of several months. The police said the arrest of "the big chief" of the suspected plot was imminent.

Bilbo Explains Why He Wished Post On Library Committee

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Asked today why he had requested assignment to the library committee, Senator Bilbo of Mississippi said:

"I want to investigate that Guttenburg Bible that Ross Collins bought."

Former Representative Ross Collins was an unsuccessful candidate in Bilbo's race for the senate. The famous Bible is kept in a glass case in the congressional library here.

"I want to find out," Bilbo said, "why three guards, working eight hour shifts and each paid $1,440 a year, have to stand guard over that Bible when the library has iron doors that even a Diflinger couldn't get through."

He added that he studied bibliography while in college and always had a "hankering for books."

The new Mississippi senator is one of the few that ever specially requested assignment to the library committee.

SAAR PLEBISCITE MAY BE DELAYED SEVERAL MONTHS

Postponement Talked As Rival Factions Face Meetings Today

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

SAARBRUECKEN, Saar Basin Territory, Jan. 5.—A possibility that the Saar plebiscite may be postponed several months was seriously discussed in official quarters tonight as rival Nazi and anti-Nazi factions prepared for mammoth open air demonstrations tomorrow.

Permission was given the two groups to hold the mass meetings, expected to be the biggest since the plebiscite campaign opened, in Saarbruecken the same day.

If the gatherings cannot be held peacefully the final Sunday before the balloting it would be dangerous to attempt to carry out the plebiscite one week later, officials said they believed.

The task of preserving order during the test of the Saar's discipline will be left to police, troops of the league's international army being kept in barracks.

Should the mere presence of the "invisible army" prove sufficient to discourage the Nazis and anti-Nazis from flying at each other's throats, officials believe it will be demonstrated that the plebiscite is likely to take place without serious difficulty.

If serious conflict should develop tomorrow, however, it will be indicated—according to opinions expressed privately among league of nations officials—that the plebiscite cannot be held safely January 13 and should be postponed.

Nazis from all parts of the territory swarming into Saarbruecken aboard 80 special trains will gather in the morning on a hill south of the Saar river, while those advocating retention of league of nation's government will march during the afternoon to an athletic field north of the river.

Between the contending factions will be not only the river but police barracks and railroad tracks. To the east are the barracks of the British regiment of the league army, and near the Nazis' meeting place the newly arrived detachments of British armored cars and the battalion of crack Netherlands marines are quartered. To the west, across town, are the Italian tanks.

All the troops, however, will re-

SKELETON IS FOUND NEAR WATERPROOF

ST. JOSEPH, Jan. 5.—(Special)—The skeleton of a man found below Waterproof at a point between the Mississippi river and the levee is believed to be the remains of a "floater," or drowned person, Sheriff John Hughes said tonight.

No indications of foul play were found on the skeleton. It was considered probable that death had taken place several years ago, possibly as long ago as five years.

A purse which evidently had been of good quality was found beside the skeleton. It contained a five-dollar bill and three one-dollar bills.

The skeleton was fairly complete, though not intact.

No inquest was held. The body was buried where it was found under supervision of the sheriff's department.

Discovery of the body was at a point about one and one-half miles below Waterproof. A path used by persons in walking past the vicinity is located about 50 yards from where the skeleton was found, but the immediate location of the skeleton was concealed by briars.

A Mr. Gale and his son, of Waterproof, were said to have discovered the body last Wednesday afternoon.

Prosecutor Asks That Attorney Immediately Identify Slayers

HAUPTMANN IS SILENT

German's Lawyer States He Will Reveal Quartet This Week

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 5.—The announcement of Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, that he would name four persons next week as the "actual kidnapers" of the Lindbergh baby evoked from Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, Jr., tonight a challenge to name the persons immediately.

Reilly, in New York for the week-end recess of the Hauptmann trial on a charge of murdering Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., announced he would disclose the names of the four persons probably about Thursday.

Hauptmann, he said, was not one of them. He would not comment when asked directly if Betty Gow, the baby's nurse, was one of the four he intended to name.

"If Mr. Reilly knows any other persons connected with this case, as a member of the bar and as an officer of the court, he should disclose their identity to the prosecution authorities of Hunterdon county immediately," Hauck said.

"The state authorities are not attempting to persecute Hauptmann, but as far as the evidence thus far uncovered discloses he, and he alone, committed this crime."

Hauck stated further that if Reilly can produce the persons he believes are actually the kidnapers, he cannot understand why the defense attorney desires to wait until the prosecution advances its case further.

He added he was glad to hear that the defense intends to put Hauptmann on the stand, and indicated cross-examination would be thorough.

Reilly gave no hint of the identities of the four persons he said were guilty. He made his announcement at a special press conference in his Brooklyn, N. Y., offices. He said:

"On next Thursday I shall name four persons, and I shall charge them with the kidnaping of the baby, Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr. "Two of those I shall name are women. Two are men.

"Neither of the men I shall name is Bruno Hauptmann."

The florid Brooklyn lawyer declined to say whom he would name. To a specific question as to Betty Gow, the baby's nurse, he declined to make answer. He did, however, mention "Red" Johnson, who is no longer in this country, as follows:

"Miss Gow was on more or less friendly terms with Red Johnson, who was around Englewood (where the Lindberghs spent part of their time). He was examined at the time of the crime. However, I do not want to see him."

The lawyer commented, in passing, that Miss Gow "showed no hysteria, crying, or the usual symptoms a woman would normally show when a child to which she was closely attached is stolen. She was cold."

Reilly said:

"We intend to use three groups of witnesses to free Hauptmann. One group will establish a complete alibi. A second will involve handwriting experts. The third will be made up of fingerprint experts.

"I have felt all along that Hauptmann would get off. From the beginning I have believed that there was more than one person in this crime, yet the indictment names Hauptmann exclusively.

"All the surrounding circumstances indicate that Colonel Lindbergh and his wife were imposed upon by someone in the household. Yesterday, for example, it was brought out in the testimony that the baby was unaccustomed to strangers and that no one had access to the child except those connected with the household."

Reilly expressed satisfaction with

NEW KIND OF PURGE PLANNED BY NAZIS

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Lesser lights in the Nazi party were reliably described today as living in fear that they will be eliminated from the party rolls before the middle of April.

"The cleansing has already started," a non-German official declared today, "although in a different way from the blood purge of June 30.

"Some have already been ousted, but the big cleanup is expected in many party circles, including the ranks of the storm troopers, within three months.

"Prussian Premier Hermann Wilhelm Goering recently asserted publicly that there won't be another June 30, so a blood purge is not to be expected."

The statement was an outgrowth of a new crop of reports circulating in well-informed circles as a result of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's speech meeting last Thursday, which was unofficially to be a ... Hitlerism's immediate domestic and international plans.

PRISONER ADMITS TWO BURGLARIES IN WEST MONROE

at Barlingame, Kan., where he said he stole a sedan. Driving the car to Georgetown, Texas, he stole another automobile, but placed the license plates of the first automobile on the latter.

The latter automobile was the one which Haywood abandoned in the 2600 block of DeSiard street after committing robberies in West Monroe. He said he left the car there while he looked about for something to steal which he could sell.

Returning before daybreak to the place where he had left the car, which had been "picked up" by police and stored, Haywood found it missing, it was stated. Later in the morning, before noon, he stole the car owned by Willis Montgomery from the intersection of North Second and Washington streets.

Driving the Montgomery car to Lonoke, Ark., Haywood said he attempted to break into a filling station there, and that an officer attempted to arrest him, but failed. Haywood left the town in the automobile he stole here. At Marion, an officer who had been requested by the Lonoke officer to be on the lookout for him, arrested him after shooting him in the hip when he attempted to resist arrest and take possession of the officer's gun, according to the confession.

Haywood's wound was not serious, it was reported.

The two robberies he admitted were the theft of a case of soft drinks from the Wallace service station, and gasoline stolen from the New Deal service station. Haywood was said to have stated he broke the lock on the pump at the latter station in stealing gasoline for the car he was driving.

The other robberies on the night of December 28 in West Monroe were performed at the Trenton street garage, where a 50-cent piece and about 50 pennies were stolen, and at the S. R. Terrall rooming house, where $18 was stolen from a roomer. At the T. John Department store, a pair of corduroy trousers and a corduroy jacket were stolen.

into court, summon the city's debtors and have it determined "who the city owes and how much."

"I think the city should welcome the suit," he said.

The petition of Allen and Porterie charged that the city government of New Orleans through the mayor and commission council had unlawfully contracted debts and had borrowed money from local banks contrary to constitutional provisions.

It requested that an injunction be issued to prevent the city administration from paying out any further money to retire its indebtedness exclusive of bonded debt.

The suit was directed against the mayor and commission council as the governing heads of the city.

to follow Mr. Roosevelt's plan to lump into an omnibus bill.

Final decision on how these measures will be administered has yet to be made. It was suggested in more than one quarter that a new executive department of welfare be created, but there was some objection among the leaders to this. However, it was decided that at least a central coordinating agency should be set up to unify administration.

Details of the social security program have not yet been given Democratic chieftains, particularly with reference to how large a percentage of contributions is to be made by industry for unemployment insurance. It was made clear, however, that the administration was prepared to propose the government create a fund to aid contributions until they were sufficient to meet demands. The government would be repaid this money out of future contributions. While members of congress digested the president's message of yesterday and studied reports of the conference attended by thirteen Democratic leaders last night, it was authoritatively developed today that:

The president virtually have given up hope of stopping passage of the soldiers' cash bonus in the house and plans to bring pressure on the Democratic dominated senate to prevent its overriding a certain veto.

The house ways and means committee, in the words of Chairman Doughton, Democrat, North Carolina, will take up the bonus as soon as it can with due consideration to other important matters without "delay or dodge."

REILLY ASKED TO NAME KIDNAPERS

the results of his long cross examination yesterday of Col. Lindbergh. He said the flier was "a perfect witness for our side."

Hauptmann himself will be the first witness when the defense gets its chance, Reilly said. The prisoner, pale as a ghost now and lean-faced almost to the point of emaciation, has been studying at odd moments to improve his English. While he has been in America more than ten years, he speaks with a pronounced accent and is sometimes difficult to understnd.

Hauptmann, who has been tight-lipped during all the weeks he has been in custody, had one comment to make after listening for hours to the examination and cross examination of Colonel Lindbergh.

"It is terrbile to kill a baby," Hauptmann told Reilly. "Whoever did it is a terrible person."

Reilly said Hauptmann was "terribly moved" by the recital of the sorrow that visited the Sourland Hills home of the Lindberghs the night of March 1, 1932.

"He is cheerful, though," Reilly added, "because he knows he is innocent."

One of the important pieces of evidence in the state's case is the ladder found outside the Lindbergh home the night of the kidnaping. It has bolstered the theory that a kidnaper climbed to a nursery window, took the baby from his crib and descended.

Asked about the ladder today, Reilly said it was "just scenery," implying that it may have been placed where it was found to turn suspicion away from the actual means of kidnaping. "It was more or less a plant," he added.

At Taunton, Mass., Dr. John F. Condon, the "Jafsie" of the ransom negotiations which led to the payment of $50,000 in ransom money, declined to say whether he would identify Hauptmann as the man to whom he paid over the money. He said he is holding his opinion of the identity "in abeyance."

Reilly said he will introduce finger-print experts, all of whom will testify that the ransom notes were not written by Hauptmann. One is a specialist in Teutonic handwriting.

Except for the jury—which is restricted over the holiday to walks and conversation—Hauptmann is about the only interested party in the trial who has not left town. Hauptmann was perturbed today when they gave him a newspaper with most of the news torn out. He is allowed one paper a day of his own choosing, but all references to his own case are deleted.

Hauptmann was not advised today of his mother's comments on the trial as given to an Associated Press writer in Kamenz, Germany. Reassuring her conviction that her son is innocent, Frau Hauptmann said she thought his arrest was the work of "enemies who want to destroy his life because they envy his happy marriage."

main in barracks unless they are urgently needed. International military officials were careful to keep bayonets and machine guns off the streets tonight, and Saarbruecken had much the appearance of any normally policed city.

In the first trouble since New Year's disorders, several men distributing pamphlets in Steinback, small town near the German border, were beaten up last night, and several shops set on fire. No one was injured.

An order for the expulsion of Prince Hubertus Zu Lowenstein, German exile and violent anti-Nazi, was rescinded today when the prince, who has been publishing a weekly newspaper favoring the status quo, promised to refrain from future political activity.

against them or do not see fit to make a complaint, Mr. Hickman stated. In a good many instances, however, complaints are received from other persons on behalf of the employes, and a complaint may be received from anyone. When a charge of a code violation is received a government investigator looks into the matter, the adjuster said.

Efforts of the field adjuster are devoted principally toward enforcement of wage and hour provisions of the code. The trade practices part of the code is left to the code authorities until they bring a complaint before NRA officials.

Mr. Hickman said that in Shreveport, where he has been furnished with three regular investigators, he is getting good compliance, especially on the part of the larger concerns. He does not have an investigator regularly assigned to duty in Monroe, but hopes to have two named for this work here soon.

There are some code violations, the adjuster said, on the part of those who are not familiar with the code. When complaints are made these persons are given proper information on the code and asked to comply with its provisions.

NEGRO SNATCHES WOMAN'S PURSE

A report that a negro had snatched her purse on the street at 112 North Eighth street, and fled, was made to police last night by Mrs. John Sugden.

The purse contained two one-dollar bills and 25 cents in change, it was stated.

Dr. C. P. Gray reported the theft of his medicine kit from his automobile while it was parked in front of Hemp's cafeteria, at the corner of North Grand and DeSiard streets.

Julius Cathie reported that a suit of clothes was stolen from his room at the Southern hotel, 202 North Second street.

A report that a burglar had entered the residence of A. K. Kilpatrick, 1409 Park avenue, was made to police last night, but an investigation revealed the house had not been entered by an intruder and that noise believed to have been made by a burglar evidently had been made by a cat.

the habit (it was explained) of drinking milk during the night.

Finally they let him go, with the understanding that he get out of the country, he having entered illegally, they said. So "Red" Johnson, once considered a "hot lead" in the case, departed.

Today his name is back in the records. Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel, injected Johnson into yesterday's trial session. Lindbergh was testifying, and Reilly asked him:

"Isn't it true, colonel, that the prosecution has brought Betty Gow back from Europe as a witness here, but has made no effort to bring 'Red' Johnson back?"

The colonel did not know. The implication was clear enough. Reilly mentioned the milk bottle and the fact that Johnson had been questioned concerning his friendship for Miss Gow and his whereabouts the night of the abduction.

Nothing much was said about the mysterious "Swede" Anderson.

Reilly introduced his name to the case when he asked Col. Lindbergh:

"Did you ever know an aviator known as 'Swede' Anderson?"

The colonel replied: "I do not recall such a person, at least by that name."

Reilly: "Isn't it true that there was bad blood between you and this 'Swede' Anderson, and that he had made threats against you?"

The colonel renewed his denial of ever having known such a person.

The unspoken implication beneath this line of questioning was that there were several persons who might conceivably have had some knowledge, before or after the fact, of the tragedy.

Reilly's questioning is suave, unhurried but earnest. He lets his voice rise to drive home a point, then drops that particular line of interrogation, seemingly satisfied not to pursue the insinuated suspicion farther.

Insofar as Dr. John F. Condon was concerned, however, Reilly pushed the questioning determinedly. Dr. Condon was the "Jafsie" of the ransom negotiations. It was he who handed over $50,000 to a mysterious "John" in a Bronx cemetery—the money that led finally to Hauptmann's arrest.

Reilly brought out that Condon was unknown to Lindbergh at the time of the murder, but that Condon had gone to the trouble (on his own responsibility) of advertising in the Bronx Home News that he would act as intermediary if the kidnapers wanted him to. He received an answer to his advertisement, and the answer was marked with the same strange symbol that was used on the note which was left on the window sill of the Lindbergh home the night of the kidnaping.

Reilly: "Did it ever occur to you, colonel, that the master mind of the kidnapers might insert an advertisement offering to act as intermediary, and that he then could answer his own advertisement and carry on negotiations with himself, thus getting the ransom money?"

Colonel Lindbergh smiled and said that every possible angle had been considered, but that he had finally become convinced of Dr. Condon's full reliability.

Springs Foundation, a project of the president, for the research in the fight against the malady and for the treatment of children suffering from the disease.

This year the major portion of the proceeds is to remain in the community where the fund is raised and a small percentage to go to the National Infantile Paralysis association. The entire program is designed as a testimonial of appreciation to the president for his services to the nation, courageously carried on in spite of the fact that he is a sufferer from infantile paralysis.

Details of the plans for the ball to be held in Monroe are being worked out by the officers and members of the Junior Charity league, which will have direct charge of all the arrangements, under the general direction of Mayor Bernstein, who late last week was invited by Henry Doherty to head the local committee. In his telegram to Mayor Bernstein, Mr. Doherty stressed the importance of the plans for combatting the dread infantile paralysis, which he said now affects 300,000 children in this country. Mr. Doherty urged the mayor to accept the local chairmanship as "a patriotic and humane duty to suffering children."

After conferring with officers of the Junior Charity league, who agreed to accept sponsorship of the president's birthday ball, Mayor Bernstein sent the following telegram to Mr. Doherty:

"Hon. Henry L. Doherty,
"Chairman President's Birthday Ball,
"New York City, N. Y.

"I sincerely appreciate your cordial invitation to serve as chairman of committee to arrange for president's birthday ball in this city as part of nation-wide plan to raise funds to combat infantile paralysis. I am exceedingly glad to accept this important task, having in mind the significance of the service it implies in the interest of many sufferers throughout the country who are victims of a terrible malady. I am glad to advise you that preliminary arrangements have already been made for the holding of the president's birthday ball in this city on January 30, and that the Monroe Junior Charity league has accepted sponsorship of the event. As chairman of the committee on arrangements I desire to pledge to you the full cooperation of our people in doing our part in a worthy movement that will afford opportunity to express our appreciation of the splendid leadership in construc satisfaction that the tax issue was settled.

The reorganized meeting adopted with shouts and by acclamation an oral resolution by E. J. Lorio, Standard Oil worker, declaring that "if satisfaction is not obtained we will take matters into our own hands."

The text of the resolution, offered by E. J. Lorio, follows:

"Be it resolved, that if the Standard Oil company accepts any compromise, it is O. K. by us, but we should hereby resolve and go on record to say, 'If any further persecution to Standard Oil continues, we should take the action in our own hands.'

"This is going to be orderly," said Bourgeois, getting the new meeting started. "There has been something said about putting out the lights, but nobody's going to put out the lights."

"When a man comes between me and my meat and bread I know what it means," George Curry, Baton Rouge said, speaking after adoption of the Lorio resolution. "I haven't got any more respect for Huey Long and Oscar Allen than for a sheep-killing dog.

"Fighting the Standard Oil has been Huey Long's hobby," Curry continued. "He blames the Standard Oil for the loss of the first dime he ever made.

"I haven't any bodyguards, but if Huey Long stepped up on this stage I'd take him on till oil froze over and we skated on the ice."

"We need action, not words," Bonnie V. Baker, sixth ward, East Baton Rouge parish police juror said. "The time has come when words are useless."

Bourgeois recommended consideration "of one or more sensible resolutions," which he said L. H. Unglesby would present.

"I'm sure you are not in favor of drastic measures," Unglesby said. "We hope we have a compromise, but we don't know we are going to get it."

Unglesby nominated Bourgeois president of an employes society that he suggested should be known as the "Three Little Pigs."

"That may sound crazy," he said, "but not when you think of the wolf."

Bourgeois was unanimously elected.

After the election of Bourgeois and others of a committee, a collection was taken to defray organizatfon expenses.

The workers surged to the rostrum and poured nickels and dimes into a hat.

The "Three Little Pigs" committee was formed of Bourgeois, E. J. Lorio, B. V. Baker, L. H. Unglesby, George M. Curry, and Ben Hymel, all of Baton Rouge.

The meeting was declared "adjourned" by Steve Weber, a Standard Oil company employe, who said he did so at the request of J. A. Norton, chairman of the meeting.

"No! no!" several workers shouted.

Earl O'Quinn and Chester St. Amant, Standard Oil employes, made an attempt to denounce Senator Long.

Ernest Bourgeois, Baton Rouge, climbed on a chair, and cried:

"Who'll go with me to the state house?" Why can't we call a special session and repeal this tax?"

Turmoil threatened when another shouted:

"Are we mice or are we men? We want justice. I'm not satisfied that the tax is abolished. Where's our freedom?"

The crowd of hundreds of workers, although told that the tax question was settled but that official confirmation from the company had not been received, refused to break up, and milled around the pavilion.

"There's not a state trooper who will fire into our ranks," Bourgeois said. "They haven't got the nerve."

After Bourgeois finished, the crowd quieted down but gave no indication of what it intended to do.

The Bourgeois started things off again by climbing on the rostrum and declaring that "the meeting had just begun."

"We are going to arrive at a definite plan," he said.

Canada Finds Big Rum Plot As Brothers Fall Into Net

(By NEA Service)

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 5.—When four brothers, all reputed millionaires, go on trial here during the February term of the court of King's bench, Canada will be probing into the depths of what the government believes is a booze scandal to end all booze scandals.

Four Bronfman brothers, Sam, portly and sleek; Allan, smooth and baldheaded; Harry, rough, brusque, and forceful; and Abe, the oldest, mature and confident—are now free on personal bond of $100,000 apiece after surrender to the royal Canadian mounted police.

They are charged with conspiring to defraud the Dominion government of more than $5,000,000 in unpaid duties by smuggling liquor into Canada. All pleaded not guilty.

Smuggling liquor into Canada? You thought it worked the other way, didn't you? Well, repeal in the United States upset a lot of apple-carts in the liquor-running business.

Before repeal, huge stores of liquor were exported from Canada to the French island of St. Pierre Miquelon in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Manufactured for export, and actually exported to this foreign territory, it was not subject to Canadian taxes. From St. Pierre Miquelon it was destined to be "run" into the United States.

The famous "I'm Alone," whose sinking by U. S. coast guards brought five years of intricate legal tangles, was one of the great fleet of liquor boats working out of Miquelon.

Run Back To Canada

But along came repeal, and with the fountain of domestic liquor playing freely in the United States, there was little profit in taking the risk of smuggling the thousands of gallons of liquor stored on Miquelon into the United States.

Owners began instead to "run it back into Canada, where it could be sold cheaply because it had paid no taxes. Of course this was just as illegal as "running" it into the United States, and a lot more dangerous, as it turned out.

The Royal Mounted is charged with preventing smuggling, and it takes the job seriously. The reverberations of this latest shot against Canadian bootlegging have resounded from Vancouver to Halifax, and even across the ocean to Perth, Scotland, where a Scottish confederate of the alleged ring was arrested by Scotland Yarders.

Fifty-six men and one woman of the 61 persons indicted are already in the Mounties' liquor net, most of them in the maritime provinces, the headquarters now, as during prohibition, for liquor-running activities.

Big Ring Shattered

The present case follows on the breaking up last year of a $1,500,000 rum-running ring operating in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and the arrest and conviction of some 60 men. "This case arises out of that investigation," said Superintendent F. G. Mead of the R. C. M. P.

Recent conviction of William Fraser, president of the Eastern Equipment company, of Dorval, Que., for conspiring to defraud the Dominion of $1,700,000 in unpaid duty on liquor brought into Canada threw interesting sidelights on how it's done today.

Fraser's associates formed a dummy oil company in Montreal and in Newark, N. J., and shipped the liquor in cunningly built tank cars. These were built so that the exterior showed one piece, but inside they had three compartments.

The middle one contained oil, the others alcohol. Whole fleets of small ships were used to drop liquor along the coastline between the gulf and Montreal.

U. S. Also Interested

In general outline, the Bronfman case is expected to develop similarly, involving the bringing back into Canada of liquor made here for export, untaxed. But in addition, United States treasury officials are now hard at work in Ottawa, the Canadian capital, studying the same tax books which now absorb Canadian customs men.

The American officials hope to find data that will permit them to collect some of the millions in taxes lost by the United States through illegal entry of liquor from Canada during the prohibition era.

The smuggling of liquor from Canada during the 13 years of prohibition cost the United States government millions in unpaid duties. Treasury officials hope the Canadian records will put them on the scent of recovery of some of these lost millions.

Potato And Corn Chip Concern Opened Here

A new business enterprise, the O. A. Fulk Chip company, manufacturers of potato and corn chips, has been established at 114 DeSiard street.

It was announced that the firm has installed the latest machinery available for its plant and that it products are the most delicious and palatable modern inventions have made possible. All of the surplus grease is removed from the chips by centrifugal force, leaving the natural flavor of the chips, it was stated.

The new products are known as "Vita-Sealed Chips." The potato chips are mineralized by leaving the peel on the chips, giving the consumer the whole vitamins of the potato, the announcement said.

The corn chips are an entirely new product here. They are made from the heart of the corn and are cooked, like the potato chips, in pure vegetable oil.

O. A. Fulks, owner of the enterprise, is a resident of Monroe, and was for years a traveling salesman, representing the Pet Milk corporation and the American Sugar company. He is well known in this area, and is familiarly known as "Pops."

W. Hodge will be in charge of the wholesale sales and Miss Lorena Bedsole will be in charge of the retail sales.

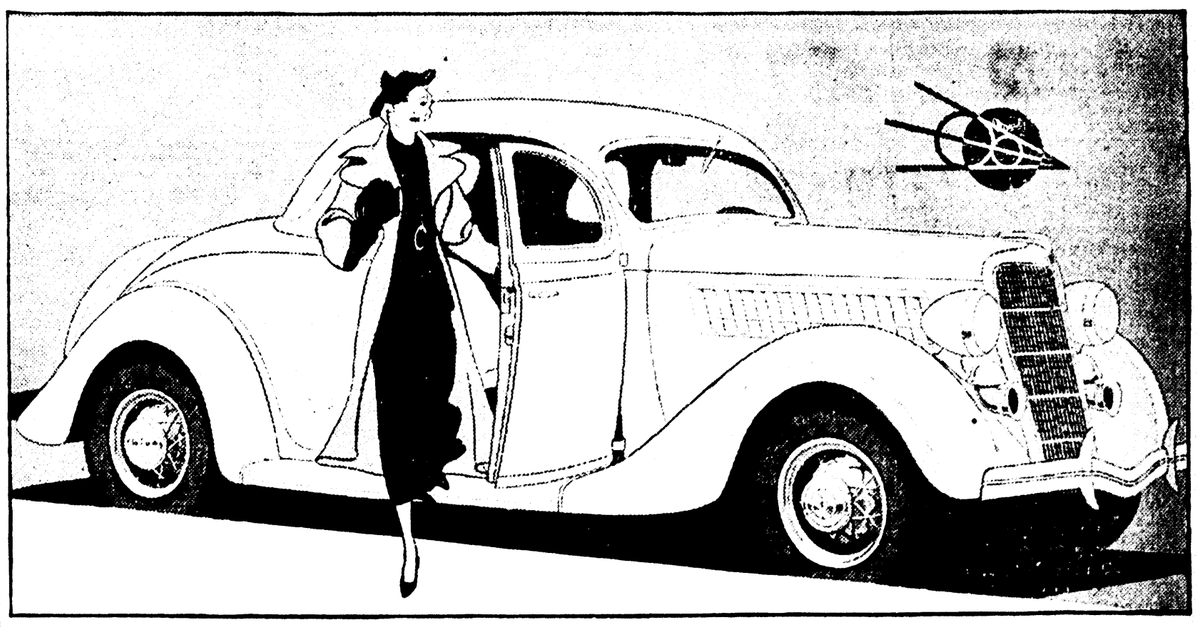
FORD V-8 FOR 1935



A Distinctive, Modern Car for the Woman Motorist

To the power, speed and brilliant performance of the Ford V-8, there have been added a new beauty, a new luxury—and a marvelous riding ease.

The Ford V-8 has always been a favorite with men. You've heard the men in your family talk about it. "That's a great car," they have said. "Eighty miles an hour when you want it, a smooth, powerful engine, swift pick-up and the ability to 'take it' all day long."

But the New Ford V-8 is a car in which women, too, can take a still keener pride and delight. A more beautiful car, with modern style in every line and appointment.

A "FRONT-SEAT RIDE" FOR BACK-SEAT PASSENGERS

In the New 1935 Ford V-8 you ride forward—nearer the center of the car. You ride on longer, more flexible springs. All weight is distributed to give Center-Poise. The back seat is roomy, restful and relaxing—the ride becomes a smooth and flowing glide at any speed, on any kind of road.

THE ROOMIEST, MOST COMFORTABLE FORD EVER BUILT AND THE EASIEST TO DRIVE

The New Ford is a bigger car than any previous Ford. It has wider doors and is lower—easier to step in and out. Front seats are 4 to 5½ inches wider. New, larger space is provided behind the rear seat for suitcases and bags, thus avoiding crowding of passengers.

New features make the Ford V-8 still easier for women to drive. There is a new soft clutch which requires less foot pressure. The brakes also require less pressure, although they are more powerful and stop the car more quickly and smoothly than ever before. New steering mechanism makes the car easier to handle.

STYLE THAT WOMEN WILL ADMIRE

A glance will tell you that the New Ford is just about the handsomest car you have ever seen. Its lines are modern, graceful, without being freakish. Its colors are new and attractive. It is a car that women will stop to admire as readily as they do a new gown.

LUXURIOUS APPOINTMENTS

Modern ideas in design and coloring are seen in the car interiors. New upholstery with narrow piping and pillowed seats; hardware in tones to match upholstery; a new, more convenient and very modern instrument panel; curved gear shift lever which adds to the comfort of passengers in the front seat; double sun visors; doors which are hinged in front and swing forward; Clear-Vision Ventilation—these are some of the features which make these new cars so distinctive.

FORD V-8 RELIABILITY AND SAFETY

Every Ford V-8 for 1935 has Safety Glass all around—in doors and windows—at no additional cost. Every car has welded all-steel body. And, of course, every Ford has the powerful and reliable V-8 engine which makes the car such a satisfaction to drive as well as economical to operate.

We invite you to drive this New Ford V-8 and see for yourself why it is the ideal car for women motorists.

Don't Deface Ideals

The practice that certain writers have of digging into the histories of great men and women, unearthing their faults, their weaknesses, and parading these defects, emphasizing them, magnifying them, is all very interesting, but where does it get us?

Sometime ago, after a leading minister of a certain denomination had done something just too bad, a writer observed: "Well, that proves that ministers, too, are merely human."

Of course, ministers are human. Of course every member of the human race is human. Of course, all the great men and the great women were human or are human. Every person who comes to this earth is human and is subject to the temptations of human life. Perhaps we might say that the reason why human beings are here is that they are human.

But is a human being to be judged by his faults, his weaknesses, by what he fails to accomplish; or is he to be graded by his virtues, by his accomplishments? Is it a good thing, after a person has done a good deed or made a good fight, to say of him, "Yes, but he was ill-tempered?" Perhaps the critic himself is ill-tempered, too, and in addition to that, he has never done anything worthwhile.

If a man has climbed a high, difficult mountain peak, and has planted a standard there, are you going to think about his achievement, or of the fact that he fell down a certain number of times during the climb? If a man builds a shining light house on a dangerous reef, are you going to think of what he did for mankind or about the talk that he got soused every now and then while striving for his objective?

Men and women who do worthwhile things in this world, do them in spite of their weaknesses. It is for that they should have credit. Persons who have shown us that great things can be done by weak mortals, deserve our approval of their accomplishments. There is no perfect person in this world. There is no person that does not do wrong. One may be imperfect in one direction, another imperfect in another direction. Yet what is the sense in mulling over a man's imperfections? George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and other shining lights of history, had their frailties, but they were great in spite of their imperfections. Their greatness shines the more because of the contrast with the faults, which only serve to emphasize the fact that they were big enough to surmount these and do worthwhile things in the cause of human progress. If we wish to ponder frailties, there are some much closer home we can dwell upon.

We can take comfort from the human weaknesses of great persons, their frailties prove that they are in our class. They are not separate and apart from us, so high up that we can never have any hope of doing just as well as they did. They are frail and weak in some of their ways, just as we are frail and weak in some of ours. Fine business! That encourages us. They are not gods and goddesses, but men and women like us. If they can go places, then we can go places; if they can move upward in spite of their handicaps, then we can move upward in spite of our handicaps.

What nonsense to spend valuable time writing and reading of the evils of men and women who have done great things! It would be far better to familiarize ourselves with the progress they have made, with the fine deeds they have done. Such contemplation might inspire us to follow their example. If they could make headway in spite of their human defects, we can make headway in spite of our human defects.

We need to get the habit of hero worship and of heroine worship. That principle encourages and inspires more persons to be heroes and heroines; it encourages and inspires ourselves, too.

CATCH CANCER EARLY

One of the most dangerous things about cancer is that people have been too thoroughly persuaded that it is utterly incurable. Feeling that way about it, and fearing the malady so greatly, many people fail to seek medical attention in time—and their fear of an incurable disease is translated into fact.

Dr. Ira I. Kaplan, director of the New York City Cancer Institute, remarked recently that fully 40 per cent of the cancer cases now being cared for as hopeless would not be in that state if patients were educated to seek aid from the proper sources in time.

In order to provide that education, New York health authorities designated the past month as "Cancer month." Health authorities are convinced that if both public and doctors can be educated to recognize the first danger signals of cancer, and if the public can be safe-guarded from quacks, the cancer death rate can be reduced.

THE AGE OF MIRACLES

Guides in the woods of Colorado insist that they have seen herds of deer wearing antlers.

I know that feminism
Is spreading wide and far;
Girls win with ease
Their law degrees
And practice at the bar.
They've learned the art of healing,
They operate great shops,
In every line
The creatures shine
Excepting that of cops.

And further evidences
Have lately come to light,
Though you may doubt,
With jeer, and flout
What I am going to write.
Somewhere in Colorado
Good trusty guides avow
That does appear
Both far and near
Arrayed in antlers now.

And thus across the prairies
Has feminism spread;
From old Pike's Peak
To Cripple Creek
It's forging on ahead.
And if this thing continues,
Some not far distant day
Around the girth
Of this wide earth
All sex will pass away

Falls In Pool To Regain Youth

By BRUCE CATTON

Thorne Smith, who introduced a new brand of ribald insanity to the American novel, died some months ago. But he left one practically completed manuscript behind him, and this has been published. The result is a sprightly new novel, "The Glorious Pool."

If you are a Thorne Smith devotee, you won't need to be told about his style. If you aren't, however, a word of warning is due, lest you pick up a hot potato by mistake.

Let it be said, then, that Mr. Smith's books are an amazing blend of hilarious acceptance of impossible happenings—such as ghosts, and Greek statues which can come to life—and a broad and lusty impropriety.

If you shock easily, leave them alone. If you don't, you'll find a great many laughs in them.

"The Glorious Pool" deals with a 60-year-old New York business man, who calls on his mistress to celebrate the 25th anniversary of their—ah, liaison. They are both slightly decrepit and battle-scarred, but they tumble into a pool in her backyard and the pool has somehow become enchanted, so that both unexpectedly recover their youth.

Then things start happening. The house catches fire. While the French maid entertains the firemen, the rejuvenated couple borrow a hook and ladder truck and go adventuring.

The plot grows slightly complicated at this point, and more than slightly dizzy, but it's all pretty funny; and if you like humor so broad that you could drive a truck on it, here it is.

New Deal In Washington

WASHINGTON.—Among those who have little time to look back at a crowded year 1934, but prefer to look ahead at a 1935 that will be even more eventful, is found the corps of Washington correspondents whose business it is to supply you with exclusive forecasts, interpretation, behind-the-scenes narratives, and gossip. The parade of events here never slows down, which makes it the absorbing panorama it is, especially during the last two or three years.

But even a Washington correspondent with eyes on (and nose in) the future, may be pardoned just a moment to scan quickly back over 1934. It helps give perspective on 1935, helps reassure one that there have been plenty of times when he was out ahead of the parade with "advance dope" that was not only interesting, but really important.

Beats On Parade

For instance, "The New Deal in Washington" can look back on Dec. 13 and Dec. 23, 1933, when it was able to give you the first news of the effort to start a senate munitions inquiry, the investigation which has since reverberated through the government and the nation from the White House down. Other "beats" that cropped up in this column in 1934 (and remember that the "beat" or exclusive story is the manna of life to all good reporters):

Jan. 2—Alcohol Control administration to lift quota on all Canadian liquor.

Jan. 6—First definite prediction of Roosevelt's plan to take $4,000,000,000 profit for Treasury through dollar devaluation.

Jan. 8—U. S. to make rum in Virgin Islands.

Feb. 20—Government sets out to require standard labeling for canned goods.

March 17—Plot to oust Dr. Willard Thorp, chief of Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

March 27—First inside story of Harriman Hosiery Mills labor dispute, which later became a national issue.

April 11—The first and exclusive story of what actually happened at the famous Dr. Wirt dinner party.

April 23—Advance outline of the Federal Housing Administration plan.

May 4—"Roosevelt will have more strength in the next senate than any president has had since George Washington."

May 31—Secret visit of John Maynard Keynes to White House and what he told Roosevelt. Later dispatches credit him with influencing New Deal spending program.

June 20—Johnson succumbs to the professors, who move into NRA to find out what's wrong.

July 6—First inside story of Johnson's decline and the unannounced rise of Richberg.

July 12—Exposure of unofficial postoffice claim of a surplus, later made official claim by Farley.

July 28—Advance outline of Cuban reciprocity treaty.

Aug. 14—First compilation of repayable loans among New Deal "expenditures."

Aug. 20—First inside story of Federal Housing administration mess.

Oct. 18—Roosevelt decides to take unemployed off cash dole and give them work.

Oct. 19 — Administration shelves James Harvey Rogers and Professor Warren, the "gold wizards."

Oct. 22—NRA to break down code price-fixing and production control as soon as possible.

And Now FOR '35

Nov. 2—Inside story of why President Hutchins of University of Chicago did not join the New Deal.

Nov. 23—Senate munitions committee dead broke; investigators work without pay.

Nov. 30—Internal explosions on National Industrial Recovery board.

Dec. 14—How close munitions investigation was coming to the administration as White House made apparent move to "take the play away" from Senate.

Dec. 20—Peek deal for cotton to Hitler has fallen through.

It's such things that make up a full year for Washington correspondents, and every one of us is betting that there will be an even fuller measure of excitement in 1935 on which to try the keenness of eyes and the length of noses. Which is all any newspaperman has any right to ask.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

THE LADY OF SEVEN LEAGUE LEGS.—Giovanna Agnese of Milane was 18 years old when she started her exhibition tour of Europe. She is described as a charming, accomplished young lady, normal in every respect except for her limbs which were the size of those of a giant. She was an accomplished linguist, and a public favorite for many years. The gossip columns of the day linked her intimately with four European rulers, the kings of Poland, Prussia, Spain and Portugal. My picture was drawn from an old print which in the 18th century enjoyed wide circulation through Europe.

Lights of New York

By Paul Harrison

NEW YORK.—Personal column: Noel Coward was so named because his birth was expected on Christmas day. However, the stork beat Santa Claus to the chimney. First song he ever wrote was when he was nine and a member of the Chapel Royal choir at Clapham, England. The lyric began: "We're six dirty little choir boys, with really frightful minds. . ."

Bert Lahr, the comedian, is the most pessimistic fellow I've met starring on Broadway now, but believes maybe he ought to have gone into some other business. . . . Eddie Cantor was petrified with fright in his first appearance in his first vaudeville act at Hammerstein's Victoria. As a result, he sang in a nervous, staccato fashion and expected the curtain to be dropped on his neck. But the audience liked it, and Cantor inadvertently had discovered what all entertainers most desire—a distinctive style.

Shelia Barrett, the mimic, is the quickest with suave repartee of any gal in show business. . . . Ethel Merman is the grandest slangstress. A few years ago she literally shrugged herself out of a job as a stenographer and into a night club role. Other stenographers could sing, maybe, but they couldn't put over a song with their shoulders. . . . Jimmy Cagney, tough guy of the screen, collects antique furniture, reads poetry, paints a little, doesn't smoke or drink. Broadway finds he hasn't changed much since the days when he was a bellhop at the Friars' club here, and later a chorus boy.

Climax Meetings

The most dramatic thing that ever happened to Marc Connelly, the dramatist, were two meetings with Daniel Frohman. Thirty-eight years ago Connelly and his father chanced into Frohman's office. The producer said: "Come here, little boy," and opened a little door in the wall that looked down on the busy stage of the theater. That glimpse put the theater into Connelly's blood. . . . Four or five years ago he sat again in Frohman's office, and the old man remembered. He rose and swung open the same trap door. "Come here, little boy," he said.

George Gershwin, who writes music, and Ira Gershwin, who writes lyrics, have been driven nearly mad by the recurrent query. Which comes first in a song, the words or the tune? Fact is that there's no rule about it; the brothers work both ways. Incidentally, Ira was the first lyricist to put a seven-syllable word into a popular song. The word was "incompatibility," the number, "I Don't Think I'll Fall in Love Today."

Sally Rand has slept on benches in Central park and eaten 10-cent dinners in the Automat. Used to make her own clothes and walk 40 blocks to save a nickel. She went shopping the other day and bought herself an ermine coat for Christmas. . . . Smoothest of magicians is Cardini, who never says a word as he goes through his amazing sleight-of-hand routines. He's unhappy, though; wants to be a legitimate actor, so that he can have lines to speak.

Romance

Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler are in town. In all the years both were in New York before their marriage, they hadn't met nor had either seen the other on the stage. Jolson saw her in Chicago, proposed in San Francisco. He wasn't sure about the size of her finger, so bought three wedding rings before they went to get married. . . . Two forgotten episodes in the career of Walter Huston: Once played professional hockey for $15 a week while trying to get a job as an actor. Wrote songs, too, and introduced them in vaudeville. . . .

Lillian Gish, who made so many pictures, never goes to the movies. Hardly ever, anyway; a couple of years ago she saw some of her old movies re-run. One of those films was "Hearts of the World." . . . Courtney Burr, the producer, lost a million dollars when he was 18. He was a bank clerk, and left a package of bonds and cash in an office building. Found it, though. His next biggest thrill was seconding a friend in a formal duel in Poland in 1923. Nobody was hurt, but it was pretty taut drama.

Letter From L. B. Faulk Is Given To American Legion

Believed to have been the last letter written by First Lt. Leonidas Barkdull Faulk, son of Dr. R. W. Faulk, of Monroe, before he was reported missing in action in France during the World war, a letter postmarked in France Jan. 17, 1918, and addressed to K. E. Heap, then inspector of Monroe police, has been given by Mr. Heap to Leonidas Barkdull Faulk post of the American Legion.

The letter expresses thanks to Mr. Heap for the gift of a cake he sent to Lieutenant Faulk, and asserts that the writer "will be glad when I can get back to a game of dominoes with the crowd." Mr. Heap and the lieutenant had played dominoes together in the club room of a lodge.

The letter and the envelope in which it was sent have been framed and will be placed on the wall of the post's memorial home, it was learned from Isador Liebreich, post commander.

Lieutenant Faulk was born November 21, 1889, it was learned from Charles M. Mitchell, post historian. He attended Monroe city schools and graduated from the former city high school. He attended the University of Virginia and graduated from the medical school of Tulane university in 1912.

Shortly after September 1, 1917, after practicing his profession here for about five years, Lieutenant Faulk sailed for France as a lieutenant of the first grade of the United States army medical corps. He was first assigned to duty at an outpost of the British army near the Somme.

A few days after reporting to the front, Lieutenant Faulk was gassed. After receiving treatment for a brief period, he returned to the front, and "on March 24, 1918, he received a mortal wound, his death environed by an impenetrable mystery."

Lieutenant Faulk's letter which will occupy a place of honor in the memorial home was postmarked at field postoffice No. 56, and was stamped by censor No. 2024. The letter follows:

"France,
"Jan. 17, 1918

"Mr. R. E. Heap,
"Monroe, La.,
"Dear Mr. Heap:

"Your package sent to me by Mr. Hill of New Orleans received today, and I thank you ever so much. It is good to be remembered by old friends when one is so far away from home. Am having some very wonderful experiences over here, but will be glad when I can get back to a game of dominoes with the crowd.

"With best wishes to you and many thanks for the cake,

"Yours sincerely,

TEXANS SEEK TO DRILL GAS WELLS

U. S. Engineer Asks That Any Objections Be Filed At Once

A communication received here Saturday from Major Lunsford E. Oliver, federal district engineer at Vicksburg, called attention to an application for drilling gas wells in Bayou Bartholomew and requested those who might have objections to file them immediately. The communication was as follows:

"J. E. Farrell and others of Fort Worth, Texas, have submitted an application to this office for permit to drill two gas wells in the old bed of Bayou Bartholomew, southwest of Perryville, La., well No. 1 to be located 0.4 mile below the mouth of Little Bayou Boeuf and well No. 2 0.6 mile above the old Bayou DeSiard outlet, 3.3 miles and 8.1 miles, respectively, above the mouth along the old channel.

"Plans submitted by the applicant show temporary drilling rigs, set on 16-foot-8-foot platforms, supported on piling at the left water's edge and 30 feet above present low water level, the temporary derricks to be replaced by welded steel towers after the wells are completed, the permanent towers to extend above the 1932 high water level. Due to the cut-off and controlling levee crossing the narrow neck of the bayou in Section 34, township 20 north, range four east, navigation on the main stream would not be adversely affected.

"Plans may be seen at the United States engineer office, postoffice building, Vicksburg, Miss., the United States engineer office, lock and dam No. 4, Monroe, La., or the office of the applicant in the Waggoner building, Fort Worth, Texas.

"All interested parties are requested to communicate with the undersigned expressing any objection to the proposed work or suggesting any changes that may be considerable desirable. It is requested that such communications be forwarded so as to reach this office not later than January 31, 1935."

Shoppers Pack Ward's Big Remodeling Sale

Ward's were jammed with shoppers yesterday. From the time the doors opened right up until closing, there was a steady stream of traffic in all departments, stated H. W. Roemer, store manager.

"Thousands of people shared in the values," said Mr. Roemer. "News of our remodeling sale traveled fast. We had customers from as far away as Winnsboro."

The remodeling sale will continue until the night of January 12, when the doors close and workmen begin to make Ward's one of the most modern, up-to-date places to shop in Monroe.

Poet Laureate Of The World

Sir Rudyard Kipling, 'Written Out' After Full Literary Life, Rests On Laurels, Seldom Breaks Silence

By Milton Bronner

LONDON, Jan. 5—Rudyard Kipling, his birthday on December 30 bringing him to within one year of the time-honored three score and ten, presents the literary enigma of the century.

Literally millions of readers throughout the world would mob the publishers for first editions if he should announce a new book of fact, fiction or verse. Yet for nearly ten years he hasn't produced anything of importance, his efforts at fiction following the World war having, apparently, convinced him that he had no new stories to tell his vast audience.

Even in the United States, about which Kipling often has expressed derogatory views, a literary swan song would be greeted enthusiastically. For it was in the United States that the man who often has been called "the Poet Laureate of the world" scored some of his earliest success; where he met Caroline Starr Balestelr of Vermont and made her Mrs. Kipling; and where he collaborated with her brother in writing a novel, "The Naulahka."

Illness Won Sympathy

The tribute paid to him when he was stricken with pneumonia in a New York hotel years ago was such as has never been extended to any private citizen. The entire nation seemed to be watching and praying at his bedside. The newspapers in all their editions carried the latest bulletins issued by the doctors and a sigh of relief went up when Kipling successfully passed the crisis and went on to complete convalescence. In later years he was to repay this friendliness in an ill manner.

Kipling was born at Bombay, India, December 30, 1865. Art was in his blood. His father John Lockwood Kipling, had been professor of architectural sculpture in the Bombay school of art and later was curator of the Indian government museum in Lahore. His mother was Alice MacDonald of Birmingham, England, whose sisters respectively wed two famous English artists, Sir E. Burne-Jones and Sir Edmund Poynter.

Went to England at 6

At the age of 6 Kipling was sent back to England to live with relatives. He was lonely and homesick and this side of his life was echoed in two of his famous short stories, "Baa Baa Black Sheep" and "Wee Willie Winkle." At 13 he attended the United Services college at Westward Ho in Devonshire. Later he was to describe his life there in his book "Stalky and Co." in which he himself figured as "Beetle." When he was 16 and, still at school, his proud father printed for private circulation in Lahore a small volume of his verses.

At the age of 17 Kipling returned to the land of his birth and became sub-editor of the Civil and Military Gazette of Lahore. He celebrated his coming of age in 1886 by publishing his first regular book, "Departmental Ditties," composed of light satirical verse dealing with the life of the English in India. Now he had found himself and in rapid succession he wrote a large number of his best short stories which were issued in tiny books bound in yellow paper covers and on sale in all railway stations in India. Some of these were sent back to England by enthusiastic readers and soon both English and American collections of his stories were published. He sprang into fame almost over night.

Son's Death Shocked Him

His place in literature was now fixed securely, although he was not without his critics. There were those who said he could write about anything that his eyes could see, but that he could not feel with his heart. To this the reply was the unusually tender "They" and "The Brushwood Boy." Similarly there were those who denied that he wrote really great poetry. His were merely banjo tunes. But his great "Recessional" silenced all that. Life seemed to have filled Kipling's cup up to full measure with good fortune. He settled down comfortably in his residence, Bateman's at Burwash, Sussex, England. He got the Nobel prize for literature in 1907.

Then the World war broke out, Kipling became a sort of unofficial observer and wrote books on what he saw. He also poured forth verses celebrating the glory of England and his intense love of France. Then came the blow that struck him down. His only son and heir, John Kipling, 18, was a second lieutenant in the Irish Guards and was killed in the savage fighting at Loos. In later years, as a sort of verbal cenotaph, Kipling wrote a history of the Irish Guards during the war. Since then he had written other fiction, but there was nothing new in it. He simply repeated himself. There were signs that he had written himself out.

Irritated Canadians

A man of his forthright temperament and his strong prejudices was bound to be mixed up in storms and Kipling got his share. Years ago he aroused the wrath of Canadians when he called Canada "Our Lady of the Snows." Canadians took this as a slam at their climate, did not like it and said so.

GROTTO MEET DELAYED

Announcement was made Saturday that the meeting of Teflis Grotto, scheduled for tonight for the purpose of electing officers, has been indefinitely postponed. It is probable that a new date for the meeting will be fixed within a short time.

A volume of more than 1,200 pages would be required to list the number of chemical substances which can be extracted from petroleum.

ritish Lion May Roar Or Just Purr At Arms Makers

LONDON, Jan. 5. — Practically forced by the revelations brought out at Washington by the senate committee investigating the munitions racket, the national government of Great Britain has announced its intention also to have an investigation. It will probably be by a royal commission. But by its terms of reference it will not go to the roots of the matter revealed at Washington.

Apparently:

(1) There is to be no follow-up to the charges made at Washington that British and American munition-makers had a partnership.

(2) There is to be no follow-up of the allegation that the international armaments ring brought pressure to bear to defeat the disarmament conference.

(3) There is to be no follow-up on the charges that American, British and other armaments makers played one nation against another in order to sell their death-dealing wares.

Editorials Ignore Facts

So far as the British public has been allowed by its newspapers to learn of what is going on at Washington, it has been deeply stirred. The Liberal and Labor party press published the evidence in pretty full details. A considerable part of the Tory press played it down. The one thing they stressed was the passing reference to King George. Indignant editorials followed this, but the writers did not take the pains to say that no more in America than in England did anybody believe that King George had made himself a salesman for British munitions manufacturers. They wholly failed to make the obvious point—that in their endeavor to sell their wares the arms peddlers even dragged the king's name into it. Taking this incident, a certain part of the press dubbed the whole Washington investigation as "a fishing expedition."

British Forewarned

In the house of commons Socialists and Liberals did their best to get the government to agree to a full investigation following American lines. But they overlooked the fact that, put on guard by what happened in Washington, most of the munitions makers of Great Britain—if such damning documents existed in their files—had had plenty of time either to remove them to a safe place or else to destroy them, so that nothing but innocuous business letters remained.

The British commission will investigate three questions which in some aspects are academic rather than realistic:

(1) To ascertain whether state monopoly in the manufacture of arms is practicable or desirable.

(2) To examine the system of government licensing and control of the sale of arms by the manufacturers of Great Britain and see whether it is effective.

(3) To discover whether improper pressure, alleged to be brought upon foreign countries to buy arms, can be avoided by state action.

No Sensation Expected

No sensational revelations can be expected from this commission. It is not intended to expose the secrets of the trade in arms. It will be given no power to examine books or documents. Furthermore, it will have the authority to hear in private evidence which it considers should be kept secret. In other words, even under the lame terms of reference under which it will work, if anything approaching hotness is reached, the commission will be able to bar out the news hounds.

The commission's main job, therefore, will be to make a report whether it is desirable that the government shall have a monopoly in the manufacture of arms or whether things will continue as they now are, with the government making some at its arsenals and big private firms making some at their own plants.

Questionnaire Creates Stir

In connection with this whole armaments and war business, another curious phenomenon is taking place in Britain. The league of nations union issued a questionnaire, which was circulated all over the island. It was intended to sound the mass of the people on their views regarding the league of nations, as a possible preserver of international peace, and also dealt with the arms traffic.

Immediately a tremendous assault was made on it by the Tory press and leaders. The papers attacked the ballot, but many were very careful not to print it so their readers could form their own opinions about it. Nevertheless, men like Lord Robert Cecil and Dr. Barnes, Anglican bishop of Birmingham, warmly approved of the referendum. About 175,000 ballots have already been signed and sent in.

The results have been as follows: 97 per cent voted that Britain should remain in the league of nations. 93.9 per cent voted in favor of arms cuts. 88.9 per cent voted in favor of the abolition of war airplanes. 94.4 per cent voted to suppress the traffic in arms. 95.3 per cent voted in favor of economic measures against an aggressor in warfare. 75.8 per cent voted in favor of military measures against such an aggressor.

CHAPTER I

Barrett Colvin, bronzed by sunlaced miles of sand, sat forward so that he might see the windows of Fifth avenue. It was a bit earlier than mid-afternoon but many windows were warm with the yellow glow that is a glare by night. The skies were sullenly low and there was a drizzle in the chilly air. The English, Barrett reflected, would call it "a dirty day." To the average New Yorker, it was "rotten weather." Those folks upon whom he had recently turned his broad back would call it "the will of Allah." Well, the faith of the east was the most comfortable but Barrett didn't share it.

He moved uneasily and lit a cigaret. It was always unsatisfactory to come back. Memories that seared his mind would leap from embers. A corner of an uptown street or an old building would brush away 10 years to make him see Marcia, his tempestuous little sister, the daughter of his father's second wife. Marcia, violent in her trap. Marcia crying, "Barry, you must help me; I've no one else!"

He had intended to help her, but with the passing of years he had been less and less certain about what he had done by putting himself between her and the storm. He had made it easy, without meaning to, for her to evade her responsibility and to live a lie.

And now Marcia was married. She had written Barrett, "Of course Dick doesn't know." And here, from her evasion, was another problem and one of the oldest ones—a problem discussed often in "Advise to the Lovelorn" columns in answers to letters usually beginning, "Shall I tell the man I am going to marry, etc." Almost always the description of the unfortunate affair ended with a wistful, "I was so young."

Barrett Colvin tossed his half-smoked cigaret from the lowered taxicab window to lean back, already wearied of civilization which is not always so ordered as it seems.

He hoped Dick Radnor deserved the devotion he had won from Marcia. The facts might so easily come out in time, Barrett reflected, and unless Dick were the man Marcia thought him to be there would be the devil to pay.

He must go up to see the boy, Marcia's boy, Barrett decided, as soon as he could manage to get away from town. Marcia did not care for him as she should and it wasn't fair to the youngster. He must have grown a good deal, Barrett reflected. It was four years—a broad four years—since he had seen the child whom Marcia had implored him to "adopt" and whom he had adopted.

Barrett Colvin felt a little tingle when the taxicab turned into a sedate old street where brown-stone-fronted houses told of other times and other manners. This was getting home. No matter how far one wandered or how insistent the call of distant countries, for every man some one house or some one woman meant "home."

The door was opened as the taxicab came to a sudden halt. Higgins, the butler, appeared, obviously excited to have "Mr. Barrett" home again. The chauffeur swung several scarred, bulging bags from the car to the walk. Higgins' eyes were fixed upon his master, his voice almost tremulous.

In a window across the street Barrett saw the imperious head of Miss Ella Sexton, saw her nod stiffly and wave a handkerchief so black-bordered as to suggest a death of yesterday.

Barrett, after bowing deeply, went up the brown stone steps of his home. So little was changed. The glimpse of Miss Ella, the characteristic tilt of her aristocratic nose, told him that she still ruled sternly and coldly over all those who waited her death.

At the door, which Higgins held open, Barrett turned again and as he did so saw a girl hurrying up the steps of Miss Ella's house. A pretty picture she made with her young grace and energy.

"One of the Thorpes?" he asked Higgins.

"No, Mr. Barrett. That is Miss Elinor Stafford. She's grown a deal these four years, sir."

Barrett nodded. His smile widened. He remembered Elinor Stafford dimly as a gawky youngster with a brace on her teeth, a youngster with an especial talent for stumbling. He had met her at Miss Ella's house—the golden shrine for all those relatives who felt they should be remembered in the Sexton will.

The hall and Higgins shutting the world away with a closed door. How good it was to be home! The same dimed, lovely tapestry. The same ancient hat rack that Barrett kept because, looking at it, he could sometimes fancy he saw his father's hat on the black marble surface, his mother's small gloves and card case.

"It's good to be here again, Higgins."

"And it's good to have you, sir!"

Barrett saw that Higgins' eyes held tears and he laid a strong hand on the old man's arm. With a gentleness that, combined with his strength, beckoned too many weak mortals his way, Barrett asked, "I hope you've been well, Higgins?"

"Yes, Mr. Barrett. Now and again a bit lonely—not that I mean to complain, sir! I think you'll find everything as you want it, Mr. Barrett."

"I'm certain everything's in fine shape."

"The harbor was foggy, I presume, sir?" Higgins asked as he took Barrett's coat, weighted by the wet in the day's air.

"Pretty thick—"

BARRETT COLVIN

ELINOR STAFFORD

"Quite four hours late, you are, sir; I've been watching by the window."

"Lucky to get in, at all."

"I presume so. You've lunched, sir?"

"Yes; thought I'd better. By the by, are there any letters?"

"A number, sir. On your desk—"

A few minutes later when Barrett was poking through his mail—frankly and naively surprised at its bulk—Marcia came hurrying in. "Darling!" she called from the doorway of the big, dark room. He turned, rose and she was in his arms, crying, laughing, clinging to him.

"The same huge thing," she exclaimed breathlessly, standing away, "and so famous, dear! You don't know what you're in for! I haven't been to a dinner this winter that someone hasn't said, 'So Barrett Colvin is your brother? How remarkable!' I don't suppose I do look as though I could possibly be related to anyone so brainy. Oh, it is good to see you, dear!"

She pressed close again and for a moment hid her face against the top button of his waistcoat. Then she drew away and raised her face to let him see her smile and her misted eyes.

"I'm so frightfully happy," she admitted. "Dick's such a perfect husband! And to think you haven't even met him! Darling—may I have a cocktail?"

Barrett rang for Higgins, at the same time studying Marcia. She had grown lean, hungry-looking, nervous. He hadn't remembered those sudden, angular mannerisms.

"You're pretty stingy, Marcia," he said perplexedly.

"Darling, everyone is! You'll notice it. May I have a cigaret? Thank you so much. I've been tearing all day. Always so much to do—" She dropped to a chair as Higgins appeared at the doorway. "Good afternoon, Higgins. Will you bring me a Manhattan?"

Higgins murmured greeting, bowed and departed. Marcia sat forward on her chair.

"I want to talk to you about a lot of things, Barrett. Are you too frightfully tired?"

"Not at all," he answered and tried valiantly to stifle the conviction that she would have gone on, no matter what his answer.

"Well, in the first place," she began, and then paused. She drew a deep, unsteady breath, sat forward and continued. "I've been—uncomfortable lately about—what happened before you went away. It's bothered me more than ever before. More even than when I realized—!"

Again she paused. Barrett's eyes grew sympathetic. He knew what it must cost her to say all this.

Marcia went on again. "When I realized," she repeated, moistening her full, scarlet-tinted lips, "about—Lon Moore—what a fool I'd been—everything!"

Barrett glanced at the hand holding her cigaret, noticed how it shook and glanced quickly away. "Poor child!" he thought. "Poor child!" The pain of others always aroused in him a blend of fierceness, tenderness and strength.

Marcia drew another deep breath before going on with her story. "Dick's extremely conservative. All his life his father went to his office at exactly 9 each morning and left it at the stroke of 4. He never varied. And Dick's mother still feels that no 'lady' appears on the streets before 6 in the evening with a bare throat. She wears those funny little boned net collars. Dick adores her and—oh, I know it all sounds terribly mixed up!" She sagged back for a second. "I can't seem to tell the story but—they're that way, all of them, about everything! Never getting away from the path of what they're supposed to do. I wish I could make you understand!"

"I think I follow better than you suppose," Barrett put in gently.

"I hope so. Barrett, I'm so terribly alone!"

It was Marcia's old cry, always voiced while someone else shouldered her burdens. "You see," she went on, "for a man, Dick has lived with such decency. He's absolutely certain I was completely innocent and inexperienced when we were married. Oh, Barrett, if he knew the truth he'd never get over it! Never! I'm afraid to risk it. I—I can't live without Dick—now."

Her eyes blurred. Barrett saw her lips tremble. "But what is it that's set you to thinking about all this?" he asked, leaning toward her.

"Well, partly it's seeing so much of Dick's family and finding out how they feel about things. The Radnors are so truthful it's almost a trial to dine with them. The other day Dick found a new servant had lied and—he dismissed her!"

"He didn't love her," Barrett pointed out, smiling a little.

"No, but could he love anyone who lied?" Marcia questioned, a break in her voice. She went on quickly without waiting for an answer. "But that's only part of it. In January I'm going to have a child!"

"My dear!" Barrett leaned forward to lay a hand upon hers. "I'm so happy for you!"

She smiled and for a moment the smile dispelled the somberness that could so easily eclipse her dark, Spanish beauty. Her hand turned beneath his to grip his fingers.

"Thanks, Barry. Sweet of you. But what I wanted to say—Dick's—my child—must not be threatened!"

"How?" he asked, perplexed. "I don't follow you."

"Well, Mr. Dexter brought the boy to town the other day," she stated.

"But I don't see—"

"He brought him to see me. He presented himself—and the child—in the most assured manner. Dwight was away, thank heaven! A new maid whom I dismissed immediately let him in. Mr. Dexter said he thought I would want to see my brother's ward. There was something in the way he said it, Barry—"

"I'll attend to that," Barrett promised angrily. "What happened?"

"Well, he said your check for his salary had been delayed and that he needed the money."

"He lied. Did you give him anything?"

"Yes. All I had at the moment. I think a little over $200—"

"That was very foolish, dear," Barrett commented levelly. He stared, frowning, at a rug at his feet.

"I was in terror for fear he'd stay until Dick came. There's a strong family resemblance about the boy. He looks so much like you, Barrett. He's going to be tall and lean and strong and he has the same square chin. Anyone seeing him would notcie it. They couldn't fail to. I want you to—get him out of the country—"

She leaned toward her half-brother. "Barry—you'll help me?" she asked. She added, weakly, "There's no one else to whom I can turn. No one else."

Barrett rose to his feet to pace the room. He was aware of Higgins entering, carrying a shaker and tall-stemmed glass on a tray, of Higgins mending the fire and tip-toeing away. Marcia, a small, smouldering, dark beauty, sagged back in the chair she made seem large. She sipped her cocktail, set it down on a nearby table, and the click of glass meeting mahogany was loud in the heavy stillness.

At last Barrett spoke. "I can't promise you anything," he said almost harshly. "I'll have to see what is best for the boy."

"Barry, you're not going to be unreasonable about this?" she asked plaintively.

He smiled a little mirthlessly. Anyone who dared to oppose Marcia was invariably "unreasonable." But, poor child, that was not her fault. She had been pampered, petted ,indulged absurdly, and that fact had made her tragedy.

"I must do what I feel to be fair to the boy," Barrett repeated, "and I'll start by firing Dexter," he ended grimly.

"If people see him and hear he's your adopted son they'll think he's—more than adopted," Marcia pointed out. "He looks—so like you now!"

"I know that," Barrett agreed. "I've always known it. We have strong characteristics as a family. But I'm not worrying about that, Marcia. I want to be certain to do the thing that is best for you, for him, for everyone."

"Oh," she murmured miserably. For a second she closed her eyes. Opening them, she glanced at a small, jeweled watch that ticked against her wrist. She rose quickly and Barrett rose. "I must be off," she said in almost her natural way. "We've a dinner engagement. And, dear, when are you coming to see us? Not that I quite know when you're free, but I'll look it up and let you know. Will you come to dinner?"

"Of course."

"We haven't time now to settle anything but I know you'll come to my view point. You'll realize it's the only one!"

"We'll see. I'm only trying to be fair."

"You won't be fair to me if you keep me in terror!" she contested hotly.

"I think we'd better not discuss it now, dear," he said firmly. She raised her slender shoulders. Her chin went high. Without a word she turned toward the hall.

Frowning, he followed her unhappily. He saw her pick up a pair of gloves from the table, watched her pull them on with two sharp tugs. He hoped Marcia wasn't going to leave him angry. He had looked forward eagerly to seeing her, his small half-sister and only relative. Stifling a sigh, he stared down at her, so small, so seemingly frail but capable, he knew, of bitterness and artfully wrought plans for revenge.

She raised her heavy eyelids for a moment to give him an insolent, chill glance. Then she melted, to cling to him sobbing and laughing.

"I am a beast, Barry! But—you must help me!"

'I do want to help you, dear," he assured her. He patted her shoulder reassuringly.

"Will you" (she mopped her dark eyes) "come and have a long talk with me—soon?"

"Whenever you have a free moment, telephone and I'll come running!" he promised.

"Barry, you are so sweet!" she broke out and, to his embarrassment, kissed his big, tanned hand. She had always been as extravagant in showing love as hate. Barrett wished he had not had to remember that fact.

He held her mink coat a moment later. "I worry, too, Barry," she was saying, "because the boy looks so much like you. People who hear that he's your ward will think—you know—that he is your son, hidden to save—shame—"

Marcia's back was toward him. Barrett realized she was hoping by repeating this suggestion to frighten him into exiling her son, small Gerald Moore. She should have known him better than that!"

"As I said before, Marcia," he pointed out slowly, "I realized that possibility when I adopted him. As a family we are a rather pronounced type. But my own peace and comfort would never let me hide him."

"Oh, well—!" she flung out petulantly. He followed her down the steps, tucking a sleek rug around her knees as the chauffeur waited instructions. Standing at the open door Barrett felt the heat reaching toward him from the car in which orchids trembled in their silver vase.

Vanity case, mirror, cushions, foot rests, cigarets, lighters—all were within the car and the windows were firmly closed to keep out any chill. Barrett thought, "Unnatural and wrong. Makes too much softness, too much shielding—just as I have—"

Marcia interrupted his thoughts. "Dick is longing to meet you. You will come soon?" she asked.

"Any evening you name."

She glanced idly across the street, turned quickly to the chauffeur. "Jensen!" she said crisply, "please step across the street and ask Miss Stafford if I may drive her home—"

Barrett felt his heart rise. Coming down the steps of the house opposite was the girl he had seen before. The girl who had been "little Elinor Stafford" and an ugly duckling. She was beautiful now, he saw, as she crossed the windy street, followed by the stiffly deferential Jensen.

"I'll wager you don't remember me!" he said as she neared the curb.

"Oh, but I do!" the girl contradicted shyly yet with a flush that he did not understand. The grip of her small hand was strong and honest. Her deep violet eyes met his levelly. Barrett felt suddenly within himself a glow of an almost forgotten warmth.

"It was so kind of you, Mrs. Radnor, to offer—" the girl began.

Marcia cut her short. "Hop in, child!" she said. "I'm late now. I meet Dick down town every day to ride home with him. Isn't that incurably romantic?"

"I think it's nice," said Elinor. Barrett laughed; a laugh prompted by pleasure. It was exactly as he would like her to think. "Nice."

"Aunt Ella wants to see you, Mr. Colvin," said Elinor Stafford.

"I'll go to see her very soon," he replied, "but—you used to call me 'Barry' and I resent the change. A man should hang around to keep the home fires burning."

She smiled at him. Marcia, consulting her small watch again, murmured something about having to hurry on. The door of the car was closed, a moment later the motor purred and Barrett watched them disappear.

Elinor Stafford, he decided, was the sort of youngster one needed to meet on a day when the air was weighted by chill mist and one's temples were growing gray. She was so different from Marcia with her genius for finding tight corners and for dragging everyone near her into those corners too. Poor passionate, impulsive, blind and selfish Marcia! Well, this time he would think first of the boy who deserved first thought. After all, he and Marcia, though comparatively young, had not the years ahead of them that the child had. Marcia's child, his ward, Gerald Moore.

The house seemed strangely empty as he returned to it, rather dismal and, in spite of a comfortable temperature, a little cold.

For some reason he did not clearly understand a vision of Elinor Stafford's face remained before him. He wondered when he would see her again.

GOODBYE SUCKERS!

And we say "bon voyage" to Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell, the two-timing, gold-digging manicurist heroines of Warner Bros.' comedy, "Kansas City Princess," playing today and Monday at the Capitol theater.

AT LOCAL THEATERS

AT THE PARAMOUNT—With the aid of a trio of gallant comedians, Roland Young, Alison Skipworth and Reginald Owen, who contribute outstanding performances, Bing Crosby and Kitty Carlisle have another smash hit in "Here Is My Heart," Paramount's newest musical romance, which opened at the Paramount theater yesterday.

While Crosby and Miss Carlisle, teamed a second time, provide their customary excellent performances, the three veteran troupers almost steal the picture with their hilarious antics.

Miss Carlisle plays a Russian princess, with Young, Owen and Miss Skipworth as her happy, but hapless relatives. Their unique methods of attempting to escape poverty, while living at the most expensive hotel in Monte Carlo, provide gales of laughter.

Crosby, himself, given a chance to do light comedy, turns in a classic portrayal of a wealthy radio star who turns waiter in order to be near the girl he loves. Miss Carlisle, as the princess, in playing her third consecutive leading role, is charming and proves conclusively that the studio was right in teaming her with Crosby again, following the success they scored in "She Loves Me Not."

Marian Mansfield, a newcomer with a really excellent voice, and William Frawley occupy the other important roles in the film.

The story deals with Crosby's attempts to buy from Miss Carlisle a valuable, historic pistol. To be near her, he becomes a waiter and promptly falls in love. He even buys the hotel in order to keep her from being ejected. Eventually he wins the girl, but loses the pistol, which turns out to be an imitation anyway.

Frank Tuttle directed the light, entertaining picture in his usual efficient fashion. Two Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin songs, "June in January" and "With Every Breath I Take," are hits.

Alfred Savior is credited with the original story, with Edwin Justus Mayer and Harlan Thompson doing the adaptation.

AT THE CAPITOL—Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell, the pair of charming bombshells who caused explosions of laughter in "Havana Widows," and other pictures, again are teamed as a couple of chiseling, gold digging manicurists in the Warner Bros. picture, "The Kansas City Princess," which comes to the Capitol today.

Supporting this comedy pair are such famous comedians as Hugh Herbert, Robert Armstrong, Osgood Perkins, Hobart Cavanaugh and Gordon Westcott, which places "The Kansas City Princess" high in the ranks of riotous fun makers.

The fun starts when Miss Blondell flirts with the wrong baby while her own sweetheart is out of the city, the man proving the smarter of the two, and getting away with the girl's flashy engagement ring as well as a little loving.

Knowing her gangster lover, Dynamite, and realizing her inability to explain the loss of her ring, she and her pal, Miss Farrell, beat it for New York on a convention train as two outdoor scout girls." They fall in with two small town aldermen, somewhat worse, or better, for drink, and are persuaded to join them in a trip to Gay Paree. But Dynamite is wise and has followed, bent on getting courage and his big sparkler.

On the boat the girls meet a millionaire playboy and in Paris they bust right into the aldermen's wives and the philandering wife of the millionaire and her lover, and the fur flies in a regular storm of laughter.

Robert Armstrong has the role of Dynamite, Hugh Herbert is the dumb, but droll millionaire, with Hobart Cavanaugh and T. Roy Barnes as the two small town aldermen. Gordon Westcott is the love thief who steals not only the hearts of the ladies but their jewels as well, while Osgood Perkins plays the role of a double-crossing French detective.

AT THE STRAND—A dual personality has persistently remained with Janet Gaynor, from the time in her early girlhood when she played tomboy during the better part of the day with her pals of the Philadelphia and Chicago street games, to her latest assignment in "Servants' Entrance" at the Strand theater, West Monroe, a role which also demanded two characterizations of her—namely, a rich and a poor girl.

But turning from a pampered, rich heiress, as she must in her new film with Lew Ayres, into a common scullery kitchen maid was something else. She began to sympathize with all the kitchen maids in the world, with dishes piled greasy and high from feastings they never shared.

In spite of the fact that she apprentices herself into the role of a poor house-servant in order to qualify as a housewife in her new film assignment, the line between rich and poor which she must cross again and again in the picture calls for a craftsmanship in acting technique more demanding perhaps than any Miss Gaynor has essayed heretofore.

With Lew Ayres as the chauffeur of a wealthy family, Miss Gaynor is cast as a servant in the same household.

AT THE RIALTO—Shirley Temple, sensational new "baby" star, is featured in the current attraction at the Rialto theater in West Monroe, "Baby Take A Bow." Included in the supporting cast is James Dunn, popular young actor.

The picture is heralded as one of the most entertaining stories of its kind ever to be filmed and little Shirley is as cute as can be. James Dunn portrays the role of Shirley's father, a young man who has just completed a sentence in the penitentiary and who is determined to go straight even in the face of former underworld pals and an effort by his "cop" enemies to make a crook out of him.

Through his love for his little girl and her undying faith in her "dad" he wins out and the picture comes to a dramatic though very happy ending.

TO SPEAK HERE

A. J. Eddins, minister of the Full Gospel church and a returned missionary, said Saturday that he would speak Tuesday night on the second floor of the courthouse here. Generally known as "Wild Bill" Eddins, with his band has broadcast a number of radio programs over station WCOC at Meridian, Miss. He said he had spent some time in South Africa, Jerusalem and China.

RABBI BINSTOCK SPEAKS MONDAY

B'nai B'rith Devotes Itself To Wider Scope Of Activities

B'Nai B'rith, under the auspices of which Rabbi Louis Binstock will speak at the Jewish temple here Monday night at 7:15 o'clock, has been devoting itself to a wider scope of activities, Rabbi F. K. Hirsch said Saturday. These activities include service to college students and anti-defamation work.

The student activity program is spoken of as Hillel foundation, taking its name from the famous rabbi of almost 2,000 years ago. It is said to be the product of the vision and perseverance of the late Rabbi Benjamin Frankel, who established the first student service institution at Champaign, Ill., where he officiated as rabbi, in 1923.

In the following year the project was offered to the executive committee of B'nai B'rith, which undertook to become its sponsor. Having been approved by the international convention in 1925, this great movement was launched. Since that date foundations have been established at leading universities, including Wisconsin, Ohio State, Michigan, California, West Virginia, Texas, Cornell, Northwestern and Alabama.

Classes, discussion groups, religious services, tournaments, dramatics, social meetings and a score of other activities are included in this service. In fact, it was said, every phase of Jewish life and thought is touched upon. Wherever these foundations have been established they have received the enthusiastic approval of the institution.

It is behalf of this phase of B'nai B'rith that Rabbi Binstock will speak Monday night. Knowing his reputation, those of the temple here expect a real message.

NEGROES TO MEET

A meeting of negroes interested in "Africana," a self-help organization among members of that race, has been called for Sunday afternoon at the Savoy ballroom. Thirty-five members were taken into the organization at a meeting New Year's day and it is expected a large number of others will be enrolled Sunday.

ident says everything will be done "in the spirit and intent of the American constitution." The American constitution forbids taking a man's property without "due process of law," even to give it to some gentleman who neglected to save while saving was possible.

THE PRESIDENT is sick and tired of palliatives, measures that cost money, producing no permanent good results. He says the dole, merely handing out money, is "a narcotic."

He is tired of distributing market baskets or cash or jobs cutting grass, picking up leaves and pieces of paper in parks.

He intends to create jobs that will have permanent future wealth-creating value, for the nation.

UNCLE SAM will build bigger, better roads, eliminate grade crossings, make "better use of national resources," make livelihood secure "against the major hazards and vissicitudes of life." To that will be added "the security of decent homes."

The president has his program ready. He dreads the effect of "continued dependence upon relief," which "induces a spiritual and moral disintegration, fundamentally destructive to the national fibre. To dole out relief in this way is to administer a narcotic, a subtle destroyer of the human spirit. It is in violation of the traditions of America. Work must be found for able-bodied, but destitute workers. The federal government must and shall quit this business of relief."

Very welcome those words, to all Americans including especially those that have endured the keen humiliation of hated "charity." Dante describes that when he tells that he knew how it feels to hold out the hand for bread.

INTERNATIONAL conditions disturb the president a little. He says: "I cannot with candor tell you that general international relationships outside our borders are improved. Old jealousies are resurrected, old passions aroused, new strivings for armament and power, in more than one land, rear their ugly heads."

The president hopes that "calm counsel and constructive leadership" will keep the world out of trouble.

Our own country, the president thinks, need not worry, because "our peaceful and neighborly attitude toward other nations is coming to be understood and appreciated."

YOU WILL READ every word of that message carefully, for it means a great deal to this nation, in which the central government has taken the lead in everything.

The United States treasury is the only "bank" engaged in active business. The president is the directing head, manager, ruler of every national enterprise from the far northwestern tip of Alaska, all the way to Key West.

OUTSIDE of the president's all important message you read that Colonel Lindbergh swears that the voice he heard in the cemetery, the voice of the man taking $50,000 that he paid as ransom for his child, was the voice of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, accused of kidnaping and murder.

You may see in print the twelve faces of the Lindbergh jury. Study those faces, then study the numerous photographs of Hauptmann sitting in court, and ask yourself, which faces seem more intelligent.

New Jersey's attorney general says Hauptmann is more intelligent than all the lawyers in the case put together.

Reporters say that Hauptmann "appears to enjoy posing for the photographers." That, psychiatrists will tell you, is a bad sign for Hauptmann and his chance of acquittal.

BY EVE BRADFORD

Miss Dorothy Williamson, lovely member of the younger set, who was selected by members of Delta Sigma fraternity for their sponsor for the annual Christmas ball. (Lower picture). Portrait by Downing studio.

GOOD MORNING! "Another year gone," we say . . . we are wrong, the year is not gone . . . it is safely tucked away in the experiences that help to make us what we are . . . every year of our life brings experiences that ought to count in a richer personality . . . we can be thankful for what the year just passed has contributed in experiences, unhappy as well as pleasant . . . they have helped us to enlarge our life and we can look forward to what the New Year will bring in opportunity, in work, in play, in association with our fellows . . . The passing of the old year left in its wake a chain of pleasant memories that will shed fragrance along the path ahead . . . the sight of Elizabeth Biedenharn standing tall and willowy in her wedding gown taking the sacred vows in the drawing room of Bethaven drenched in the perfume distilled by hundreds of white rose petals . . . and then again the sight of her glowing, piquant face peering from under the brim of the cossack hat and rust colored suit of Russian trend, standing in the group of friends and admirers at the station where a deluge of rice showered down upon the happy pair . . . of course you heard how Elizabeth's boy friends got even with Doctor Cutler for taking her away by distributing pamphlets up and down the passenger train on which the bride and groom departed on their honeymood . . . imagine their chagrin when every passenger filed past their section, some just for curiosity and others to offer felicitations . . . scarcely had the furor died down when Bertha Alyce Masur and Irvin Shlenker walked altarward with the eyes of the social world upon them . . . breathtaking was the procession of guests, in formal evening attire, escorted to their seats by those good looking young men who wore so beautifully their white boutonnieres . . . and then later the Y. M. H. A. dance . . . champagne flowed like water . . . every one drinking to the health of the beautiful bride and the man . . . the orchestra . . . on until the last guest . . . and on into the wee, wee hours . . . frock was a prominent figure in that surging crowd of beautiful women who passed to and fro like birds of brilliant plumage . . . Mrs. Hyman Leibreich in violet velvet and silver slippers . . . Mrs. Sylvan Masur, a shining figure in white satin with Marie Antoinette collar of rhinestones and over all a handsome white ermine coat . . . Mrs. David Weingarden in sea green velvet with rhinestone clips . . . Mrs. Louis Hart in Russian tunic embroidered in nail heads . . . Mrs. Leah Weise was a striking figure in black velvet with bands of gold beads of medieaval trend . . . Mrs. Simon Shlenker, Jr., in classic gown of black velvet with her young son, Simon the third at her heels . . . this handsome lad in his white satin suit and dazzling white skin added coup de grace to the wedding entourage . . . to tell you about all those good looking people at this affair would be well night impossible . . . suffice to say, however, that never in all the tides of time has there been a more fashionable gathering of the clans in this city . . . the luxurious evening mode depicted at this wedding may be the end of the depression once and for all and the beginning of a new era . . . it really is our signal to let loose the shackles, polish up the family coat of arms and once again dress to the manner born . . . The beauties of Napoleon's day were not more beautiful than some of our own glamorous women . . . Martha Kilpatrick in gleaming white satin was our idea of glamour at the New Year's Eve ball at Lakeside club . . . Anna Brown, another glamorous person whose beauty is enhanced by evening attire . . . Speaking of New Year's Eve reminds us of the crush at the Quiggles home where the rooms were almost rent asunder by the surging crowd . . . their particular brand of hospitality proved most acceptable . . . Did yesterday's romantic wedding surprise you? . . . We had always counted on seeing Nancy Lee in wedding habiliment . . . with her exquisite cameo-like features and her shining black hair she would have been a perfect dream bride in traditional white satin . . . however, she looked mighty stunning in a grey wool tailleur with all those orchids nestling under her chin when she said "I do." . . . the air is electrically charged these days . . . scarcely do we get our breath from watching one bride and groom clasp hands than another whiff of orange blossoms assails our nostrils . . . far be it from us to even whisper of those approaching events so closely guarded . . . Layton Platt tasted of his last fried chicken, southern style, until next Christmas when he again comes home from New York for his annual visit . . . Byron and Minta Vaughn piled the fried chicken high on their luncheon table Friday and urged Layton to stow away as much as he pleased of his favorite dish . . . nowhere in all the vast metropolis can a southerner find anything to equal this specialty of the house of Vaughn . . . at least Layton says so and he ought to know as he had been uselessly searching for it ever since he first went to New York five years ago . . . All those boys and girls who came home for Christmas with such glowing faces have folded their tents and silently departed . . . Mary Lee Sullivan, home for the holidays full of the enchantment of Washington . . . she vowed the days are shorter than they used to be so swiftly the time flew while in Monroe. . . . Saw a lovely young thing purchasing stacks of linens in a department store . . . somehow it smacked of wedding bells and sure enough, we discovered just yesterday that they will ring out on the eighth of February . . . so sorry we are pledged to secrecy . . . Lily Harrington off for New York for her annual brushing up on contract. . . . And so goodbye until next week when we will say good morning with great zest due to the interesting bits of news we will have for you.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Wilmer L. Allison of Austin, Texas, "the man who wasn't wanted" last year on the Davis Cup team, today was placed at the head of America's 1934 "first ten" tennis players by the United States Lawn Tennis association, which included two professionals in the select group for the first time.

While Allison's selection for top-honors was a reward for his remarkable showing in the 1934 championship final against Fred Perry of England, after he had been hastily summoned to England for Davis cup duty only upon arrival to be told he wasn't wanted, the tennis fathers were obliged, by their own rule, to rank Lester Rollo Stoefen and George Martin Lott, Jr., doubles champions who recently turned pro, placing them at No. 5 and No. 6, respectively. They also retained their ranking as the top doubles team.

Guided by a rule which specifies that a player who still is an amateur on October 15, when the date for ranking consideration expires, is entitled to ranking, Walter Merrill Hall, president of the U. S. L. T. A., said:

"A fellow who has played all year as an amateur is entitled to ranking. No player who has turned professional before October 15 should be ranked." Lott and Stoefen did not relinquish their simon-pure status until several weeks after the deadline.

An almost similar situation developed in 1926 when Vincent Richards turned to the commercial field but the U. S. L. T. A. did not rank him for that year because he had joined C. C. Pyle's barnstorming troupe with Suzanne Lenglen on October 1.

For the third consecutive year, Helen Hull Jacobs of Berkeley, Calif., was placed at the top of the women's "first ten." Miss Jacobs has won the championship for three consecutive years. Sarah Palfrey Fabyn of Brookline, Mass., who was a finalist in the 1934 championship, was ranked second, and Carolin Babcock of Los Angeles, was placed at No. 3.

Allison's choice marks a promotion for the agile Texans, who was ranked No. 2 for the past two years, and makes the seventh consecutive year he has been placed in the first ten. Were it not for the omission of Lott's name from the front ranks in 1932, his choice this year would have made it nine straight for the veteran Chicagoan.

Second place was awarded to Sidney B. Wood, Jr., of New York, generally recognized as the country's foremost singles player, while Frank X. Shields, who topped the list last year and two months ago launched a career in motion pictures, dropped to No. 3.

From there on the list is barely recognizable from last year's ranking although only two of the 1933 names are missing. Gregory S. Mangin of Newark, N. J., twice former indoor champion, dropped from No. 5 to No. 13, and Keith Gledhill of Santa Barbara, Calif., No. 9 last year, was omitted because he turned pro last summer.

Arkansas Cagers Open Schedule Next Thursday

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Jan. 5.—(Special)—When the University of Arkansas Razorbacks open their conference basketball season with Rice Institute at Fayetteville Jan. 10 and 11, it will mark the beginning of their 12th season of court competition in the southwest. During the last 11 years, the Razorbacks have won 70 per cent of their games with Southwest conference opponents and 72 per cent of all other basketball games.

Basketball history at the University of Arkansas began in 1923, when Francis A. Schmidt, now head coach at Ohio State university, organized a freshman team that went through a five-game schedule without defeat. Before 1923 basketball was only an intramural sport at Arkansas. The following year the Razorbacks played a full schedule, including 12 games with conference teams. That year Arkansas won three conference games and lost nine, ending the season in seventh place. In non-conference games, however, the Razorbacks were better, winning nine of their 10 games.

In 1925, Arkansas won 10 conference games and lost four to place third in the conference standing. The following year Coach Schmidt directed the first of several championship teams at Arkansas. The Razorbacks won 11 conference games and lost one to cop the championship in 1926. They repeated in 1927, 1928, 1929 and 1930, being the only conference team ever to win five consecutive championships.

Northeast Center Five Opens Schedule Tuesday

Indians Meet Monticello Aggies, With Normal Game On Thursday

The Northeast Center basketball team will get its first test under fire Tuesday night when they clash with Arkansas A. & M. college of Monticello in their opening tilt of the season at Northeast Center's gymnasium. The game is slated to get underway at 7:45 p.m.

The game with the Arkansas Aggies was originally scheduled to be played before the Christmas holidays but was postponed until Tuesday night in order that the Arkansas cagers could disband when school closed for the holidays.

After Tuesday night's game against the Aggies, Coach Cary Phillips will have two days in which to correct the mistakes made in the opening game before the Indians take the floor against the Louisiana Normal Demons Thursday night, at the local college gymnasium in their second engagement of the season.

Coach Phillips has had his squad of Purple and Gold cagers going through some lengthy workouts for the past two months, except for the ten-day layoff for the holidays. He said that with a week's drill behind them since the layoff, they were ready for the opening of the season.

The Indian squad of 20 candidates has been shifted around during the practice periods in an effort to find the combination that would click together. Phillips indicated yesterday after the workout that he would probably start Boly Lemak and Burt Trichel at the forwards, George Pryor at center, and "Red" Mays and Norris White at the guard berths.

Pryor, who played end on the football eleven, is a tall, rangy youth towering around six feet, two inches, and gained his basketball experience while in high school in Corsicians, Texas. He is being relied upon to hold down the position at center.

The Indians' forwards, Lemak and Trichel, are not quite up to the six-foot mark in height, but are both exceptionally fast and crack shots under the basket.

The Aggie forwards will probably find it hard to get many crip shots over the Tribesmen's guards, May and White. May is a hefty youngster weighing around the two-hundred pound mark and towers six feet, two. He was named all-state center in '32, while a member of the championship Denham Springs five. White, a sure shot under the basket, received his cage experience at Ouachita parish high school, where he held down a guard position for three years.

If any of the five probable starters fail to measure up to expectations, the former Brown Paper mill coach said he would have several combinations to substitute into the game.

The starting lineup for the Monticello club will have Richardson and Bratton at forwards; Harper, center, and Culbertson and Redden at guards.

BOBBY JONES AT ORLEANS TODAY

Atlantan And Whitney Play Freddie Haas And Fred Odom In Match

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5. — (AP) — When Bobby Jones tees off in the best-ball foursome to be held here Sunday for charity, he'll be teamed up with the veteran player who eliminated him from his first major tournament more than 15 years ago.

The world's most famous golfer is paired with Nelson Whitney, known as the "dean of southern golfers" against a pair of flashy-shooting local youngsters, Fred Haas, Jr., and Fred Odom II.

Whitney, who has won the southern golf championship more times than any other man, eliminated Bobby when the "grand slam" winner was a mere stripling in the quarter-finals of a southern championship tournament.

But the two will be playing together Sunday against Haas, 18-year-old southern golf champion, and Odom, the local city champion.

Whitney was the first prominent golfer the south ever produced, witnessed by his five southern titles. In the 1934 tournament, Whitney produced the tournament thrill by gaining the quarter-finals through a brilliant field.

Young Haas, who annexed a score of titles last summer and who holds nearly every course record in this city, stroked out a par shattering round this past week to equal his own course record of 65 over his home course, which has a par of 70.

The Junior League is sponsoring the benefit match Sunday. It will be played over the Metairie golf links here.

Miami Open Tourney Is Postponed Until Today

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Heavy rains and high winds today caused a postponement until tomorrow of the second 18-hole round of the $2,500 Miami open golf tournament here. The final 36-hole frame, originally scheduled for tomorrow, will be played Monday.

MANAGERS GIVEN FREE REIGN NOW

Little 'Front Office' Interference In Big League Trading

By Paul Mickelson
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

CHICAGO, Jan. 5. — (AP) — Major league baseball managers used to shudder and lose weight every time they thought of the "front office," but nowadays most of them don't even know there is such a place.

Connie Mack

Big league managers are really managers again with more power than they possessed or dreamed of in the trick days before baseball became a big business and the anxious club owners ruled their domains with an iron fist, buying and selling players over the meek protests of their field pilots.

Before the current movement began to give the harassed managers more authority, the late John McGraw and Connie Mack stood out as the only two pilots whose word was final in baseball deals. If either of those who wanted to make a deal, fire or hire, they did so and their quick actions resulted in many pennant winners for the Giants and Athletics.

But today. A manager with almost autocratic power over his team is the general rule, not the exception.

The world's championship St. Louis Cardinals, the Cleveland Indians, Cincinnati Reds and Washington still repose most of their faith in the "front office," but all the others depend on their managers with varying degrees of dependency.

Connie Mack, Bill Terry of the Giants and Charlie Grimm of the Cubs are the standout dictators of their policies among the big league managers today. Closely following them in extent of authority are Rogers Hornsby of St. Louis' Browns, Joe McCarthy, veteran New York Yankee pilot, Casey Stengel of Brooklyn, Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox, and Mickey Cochrane of the Detroit Tigers, who gained tremendous headway with Owner Frank Navin by bringing Detroit the American league pennant in his first season at the club's helm, a feat duplicated by Terry.

Jimmy Wilson of the Phillies, Pie Traynor of Pittsburgh and Bill McKechnie of the Braves usually confer at some length with their bosses before making deals. Owner Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey do most of the scheming for the St. Louis Cardinals with respectful attention to Manager Frankie Frisch, about the same setup as prevails at Washington, Cleveland and Cincinnati.

ATHLETIC GROUP WILL MEET HERE

Northeast Louisiana Association In Annual Meeting Saturday

The annual meeting of the Northeast Louisiana Athletic association, comprising practically all of the schools of this section, will be held in Monroe next Saturday morning, J. B. Thompson, Jr., of Delhi, president of the association, announced yesterday. The meeting will be held at the Frances hotel, starting at 10:20 a. m.

Mr. Thompson said yesterday that letters had been mailed urging all principals and coaches of Northeast Louisiana to attend the meeting.

The association was organized last winter in a meeting at Delhi. Many coaches and principals who attended the first meeting found it convenient to arrange their football schedules there, and an even larger attendance is expected this year. The association includes both Class B and Class A schools. Last year football was the chief topic of conversation but next Saturday basketball and other sports probably will come in for considerable discussion.

"Many things of importance will be discussed at the annual meeting," Mr. Thompson said. "All principals and coaches are urged to attend."

Homer Football Schedule For Next Year Announced

HOMER, Jan. 5.—(Special)—The Homer Pelicans' football schedule for 1935 has been completed and the following schedule is announced by P. C. Rogers, principal of the school.

Choudrant at Homer, Sept. 20; El Dorado at El Dorado, Sept. 27; Minden at Minden, Oct. 4; Lake Charles at Homer Oct. 11; Mansfield at Homer Oct. 18; Byrd at Shreveport, Oct. 25; Fair Park at Homer, Nov. 2; Haynesville at Homer Nov. 11; Ruston at Homer, Nov. 15; Bolton at Alexandria Nov. 22.

NEVILLE ELEVEN TO PLAY 11-GAME SCHEDULE IN '35

Minden And Fair Park Added To Tigers' Football Program

The Tigers of Neville high school, who went through their most successful gridiron season in years last fall, will face one of the toughtest schedules ever attempted by the local forces when they open their 1935 campaign, according to the schedule of games for next fall as announced by Coach Percy Brown last night. The schedule includes eleven battles, seven of them on the home field.

Missing from the Tigers' list of foes for the coming season will be Junction City, Ark., and Greenville, Miss. But in their places will be two of the toughtest elevens in north Louisiana, the Minden high school aggregation and the Fair Park Indians of Shreveport. They also meet the Blue Boys of Natchez, Miss., whom they defeated in 1933. Natchez forfeited to the Bengals last season when a conflict in schedule appeared.

The Camden, Ark., Panthers have been moved into the Tigers' opening date in the place of Junction City. The Panthers have always furnished Neville plenty of action with the number of wins being 2 to 1 in favor of the Arkansas huskies. This will be their fourth encounter since 1930 and will be fought out at Camden.

The Fair Park Indians will assist the Tigers in opening their home schedule with the game coming second on the Bengals' list. The battle will mark the inauguration of sports competition between the two schools.

The rest of Neville's opponents will appear in practically the same order as last season. Oak Grove, Ruston, Winnfield, Haynesville, Natchez, Vicksburg, Miss., and Lafayette will be played in that order.

Minden will follow the Lafayette Lions in the place formerly occupied by Camden, while the Bastrop high school Rams will be back in their old slot on the Bengals' enemy list, Thanksgiving Day, to close the Tigers' season.

The Rams are among Neville's most ancient foes, including Oak Grove and Ruston, and the annual turkey day affair between the two elevens has always drawn a big crowd. Last season, for the first time, the game was played prior to Thanksgiving. However, it is now back as before and will close the season for the two teams.

From the eleven squads that face the Tigers next season, only two can boast of beating the Bengal combination in the past season. They are Haynesville's Golden Hornado and the Lafayette Lions. In each instance the locals were beaten by a one touchdown margin only.

With the exception of Fair Park, Minden and Natchez, not on the past schedule, the Neville forces defeated their other foes in some of the best games ever played by the locals. Their defeat of the heavier Camden team was one of the biggest upsets of the Tiger campaign.

The 1935 schedule is:
Sept. 20—Camden, there.
Sept. 27—Fair Park, here.
Oct. 4—Oak Grove, here.
Oct. 11—Ruston, there.
Oct. 18—Winnfield, here.
Oct. 25—Haynesville, here.
Nov. 1—Natchez, here.
Nov. 8—Vicksburg, here.
Nov. 15—Lafayette, there.
Nov. 22—Minden, here.
Nov. 28—Bastrop, there.

SICILY ISLAND GIRLS BEAT OUACHITA, 47-23

WISNER, La., Jan. 5.—(Special)—Sicily Island won the annual senior girls basketball title here tonight when they defeated the Ouachita parish high school girls of Monroe, 47 to 23, in the final game of the tournament.

Sicily Island's sextette showed a consistent offense that clicked smoothly to more than double the score turned in by the Monroe team.

Sicily Island defeated Jonesville, 20 to 16, in a hard fought game to advance to the finals, while Ouachita won the right to meet the Island sextette by trimming Mangham, 29 to 5.

Despite the fact that Ouachita finished second in the tournament, that team carried off high scoring honors, Miss K. Rowland piling up 54 points during the tourney. Miss Wilkinson of Sicily Island was second with 33 points, with Miss Russell of Jonesville trailing closely with 32 points.

Fourteen teams entered the annual tourney. A large crowd witnessed the championship game tonight.

Mrs. Paul Dean Named Arkansas Tech Beauty

RUSSELLVILLE, Ark., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Mrs. Paul "Daffy" Dean discontinued her college career at Arkansas Polytechnic here when she married the St. Louis pitcher last December 20, but the local student weekly "Arka-Tech" nevertheless nominated her as "Tech's beauty of 1934-35."

Mrs. Dean, the former Dorothy Sandusky, was a winner in a local beauty contest a year or so ago.

Her picture, with those of 17 other candidates nominated by various campus groups, will be submitted to Dick Powell, Arkansas movie star, who will make the selections for the college year book.

Morrison To Confer With Vandy Officials Monday

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Coach Ray Morrison of Southern Methodist university, Dallas, will be here Monday to confer again with Chancellor James H. Kirkland of Vanderbilt university and members of the executive committee of the athletic association about the head coaching post that has been offered him.

The Vanderbilt coaching place was left vacant by the retirement of Dan McGugin.

Heavyweight Wrestler To Handle Boxing Show Tomorrow Night

Scotty Dawkins, heavyweight wrestling star who's spending several weeks with relatives here before resuming his activities on the big time mat circuits, will referee the four boxing bouts at Roosevelt stadium tomorrow night, Promoter Charlie Bruscato announced last night.

Dawkins weighs around 220 pounds and fans at least will have the satisfaction of knowing that someone will be in there who can handle the situation, if the necessity for rough work arises. Dawkins has refereed a number of boxing matches in the past and is said to be a thoroughly capable official.

"There's one thing the fans can count on," Scotty said yesterday. "And that is that I'll make 'em fight, if humanly possible. My experience as a wrestler has taught me that inactivity in the ring bores the fans and I'm sure the same rule applies to boxing."

The Monday card, which presents profesional boxing in Monroe for the first time in more than a year, includes four bouts totaling 26 rounds. Bruscato expects the card to be a crowd-pleaser and has assured local mitt bugs that they'll see plenty of action. Popular prices will be charged.

Following is the card:

Main event, 10 rounds, Battling Brown, 175, Fargo, N. D., vs. Mickey Hazuda, 170, of Pittsburgh.

Semi-final, eight rounds, Frankie Kolborn, 147, Waterloo, Iowa, vs. Red Barnett, 147, Laurel, Miss.

Preliminary, four rounds, Popeye Willett, 169, Shreveport, vs. Mike Dundee, 170, Oklahoma City.

Preliminary, four rounds, Butch Martin, 193, Monroe, vs. Jack Warner, 197, Los Angeles.

All but Hazuda and Barnett have been working out daily at the stadium for the past week. All are said to be in excellent shape.

The main event is creating considerable interest hereabouts. Brown recently fought a 10-round draw with Gorilla Jones, last year's middleweight champion, at Miami. He's said to be a rugged battler, with a real wallop in both fists. Hazuda has become quite a favorite around Natchez and Ferriday. He is said to possess a right that packs dynamite.

The complete list of officials for the show was announced yesterday. Judges will be Paul Fink, Sam Rubin and Percy Brown. Sam Jones will keep time.

The show will get under way at 8:15 o'clock.

PINEVILLE, Jan. 5.—(Special)—The 14th annual Central Louisiana high school basketball tournament will be held at Louisiana college Friday and Saturday, February 22 and 23. The tournament will include games for boys and girls, and the winning teams will receive gold basketballs, while winners of second and third places will receive silver and bronze trophies.

The rally this year, is expected to be attended by a large number of excellent teams. The outcome is in doubt, in view of the fact that very little report has been published relative to the strength of the teams of Central Louisiana. The general rally consists of track for boys, and girls volley ball, and literary events will be held in April.

A meeting of the executives of the Central Louisiana rally, principals and coaches, will be held at Louisiana college Saturday, January 19, at 10 o'clock for the purpose of perfecting general plans for boys and girls basketball rally, and the general rally, which comes in April.

Bowl Official Denies He Has Barred L. S. U.

PASADENA, Calif., Jan. 5.—(AP)—C. Hal Reynolds, chairman of the Tournament of Roses football committee, today issued a vigorous denial of a statement quoting him to the effect that his organization would bar Louisiana State university's football team from the Rose Bowl as long as Huey Long is connected with it.

Reynolds said he had not been questioned on that point, and hadn't said anything about it.

"Besides," Reynolds declared, "the selection of the eastern representative in the Rose Bowl game, each year, is not in the hands of the Tournament of Roses committee. x x x

"Pasadena has not barred Huey Long, or any southern football team from the Rose Bowl, We like to have them come out."

Kansan Staves Off Strong Stretch Challenge And Wins In 1:57

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Glenn Cunningham, holder of the world's indoor and outdoor record at one mile, swung back into competition on the boards tonight with a thrilling victory over Gene Venzke of the University of Pennsylvania in the 800-meter run at the Knights of Columbus track and field meet.

With the same relentless stride that carried him over a mile in 4:08.4 on the Madison Square Garden banked track and 4:06.7 over the cinder track at Princeton to establish new world marks last year, Cunningham stepped to the front one and a half laps from the finish and then staved off the brilliant stretch challenge of Venzke, himself one-time holder of the indoor record for the mile.

Less than two yards separated the pair at the finish, while William Ray, of Manhattan college, closed fast to nip Harry Williamson, University of North Carolina ace. Cunningham, preparing for more important battles against his arch rival, Bill Bonthron, was clocked in 1:57, considered remarkable time for the flat boards.

Venzke, trying a comeback after trailing Cunningham and Bonthron consistently last year, stepped to the front at the bark of the gun while Cunningham and Williamson, running wide to escape the jam on the first curve, dropped back to fifth and last in the field of seven, respectively.

The smooth-striding Pennsylvanian continued to show the way through the second lap with Ray in second place but both Williamson and Cunningham had moved up to where they were less than three yards back of the leader. With the start of the third lap, Williamson, his long stride working like a clock, collared Venzke and swept to the front by a margin of a few feet over Venzke and Cunningham.

They were coming down the back stretch on the next to the last lap, when the Kansan made his bid. He turned on the steam and in a few strides was winging along in front by two yards with Williamson second, a like distance in the van of Venzke.

The race appeared to be a runaway when the gun announced the start of the final lap and Cunningham rapidly was leaving his rivals far behind. Venzke still had something left, however, but found himself some five feet short as they hit the tape. Venzke was clocked in 1:57.3 while Ray, who caught the tiring Williamson in the home stretch, was caught in 1:58.8. The southerner's time was 1:59.

SENATORS DEPEND ON YOUNG HURLER

Griffith Expects One Of Three Recruits To Come Through

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Unable to obtain a top ranking pitcher as yet, Clark Griffith banks on one or more of his youngsters coming through as a winner for Washington next season.

The canny swapper of baseball talent professed willingness to unwrap the rubber band around the $250,000 he got from Tom Yawkey for Joe Cronin but said as yet he has heard of no "sensible" propositions.

So his faith and prayers are centered in a trio of rookies—Reese Diggs, Orville Armbrust and Sid Cohen. Diggs, particularly, has attracted Griffith, known as the "Fox" during his pitching days.

"Diggs is a raw, 19-year-old kid from Pimlico, Md., but he did so well on the Senators' last road trip that Catcher Luke Sewell reported he had more "stuff" than any of the other righthanders.

"Control and confidence are all he needs," Griff explained, "he's natural pitcher if I ever saw one. Other kids have jumped to the majors with little or no seasoning, and Diggs will get his chance."

Griffith likes everything about Armbrust except his avoirdupois. The fat boy has been shaking off weight all winter and may be down to a normal size by spring. From Sam Holbrook, who joined the Senators from Chattanooga, Griffith heard high praise of Cohen.

Griff has eight other moundsmen, but some will be scissored off the squad. The eight are Earl Whitehill, who had a pretty good year in 1934; Bobby Burke, who looked good in spots; Monte Weaver, an in-and-outer, and Jack Russell, Walter Stewart, Al Thomas, Alec McColl and Ed Linke.

Two Schedules Drawn Up By Southern Association

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Two tentative schedules for the Southern association's 1935 season were drawn up here today, but their contents will remain a secret until a meeting of the league's directors in New Orleans on Feb. 11.

Sites for opening and holiday dates already have been chosen, and the split season has been eliminated by the directors.

The 154-game schedule will go into effect April 16 with New Orleans at Birmingham, Memphis at Little Rock, Knoxville at Atlanta and Nashville at Chattanooga.

ALABAMA GIVEN ROYAL WELCOME

Stanford's Conquerors Greeted By 5,000 Fans On Arrival Home

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Whistles shrieked, a band blared the battle hymn and 5,000 adoring citizens and students today joined in a royal welcome to Alabama's Crimson Tide, fresh from new triumphs in Pasadena's Rose Bowl.

And the Crimson Tide responded with boyish grins and waves as they piled off their train to mount a platform as guests of honor to hear themselves praised by university officials and leading citizens.

Dr. George Denny, president of the University of Alabama, who stayed at home, was on hand to greet the returning heroes, and express his appreciation for their victory and sportsmanship.

The blast of the whistle of the locomotive of the Crimson Tide special was the signal for the fire siren and factory whistles to screech their welcome, and a tremendous shout went up from the 5,000 who braved a drizzling rain to greet the Tide.

Judge Henry Foster, acting chairman of the board of trustees and an ardent supporter of the Alabama football team, extended the welcome and said "Stanford claimed she would have beaten us with power plays, but you rascals wouldn't play that way, and with your courage, fighting hearts and skill, you beat the greatest team the west ever produced."

Stanford's ability and courage was praised by Coach Frank Thomas and Bill Lee, husky tackle and captain, but Millard Howell, brightest star of the game, and Don Hutson, his pass receiver, said they would let "Bill do the talking for us."

Reilly Smith, quarterback whose blocking drew paens of praise, came back lugging a black cat that he had picked up in New Orleans last night as the mascot for next year. The cat will either be named "Midnight" or Cleopatra.

The cat excited comment as the team grouped on the platform during the welcoming ceremonies.

The drizzle became a downpour before the ceremony was ended, and standing in the rain, students and townspeople joined in singing Alma Mater, after which everyone ducked for cover, including the band.

It was next to the last public appearance of the team in a group, as nine of them are seniors and have played their last collegiate football.

The final appearance of the team as a group will be next week at the annual banquet tendered by the chamber of commerce.

GOLF ASSOCIATION TO CUT EXPENSES

Curtailment Of U. S. G. A. Activities Likely With Drop In Roster

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—While the United States Golf association closed 1934 with a balance of $1,649, Herbert Jaques, of Boston, the retiring president, today warned the annual meeting that unless the association's club membership roster was increased during the current year continued curtailment of activities would be necessary.

Jaques ended ten years with the association, the last two as its chief executive with this warning and then turned the gavel over to Prescott S. Bush, of Greenwich, Conn., who along with other officers and members of the executive and nominating committees, were unanimously elected by a single ballot cast by the secretary.

Harkening back to the days of 1929, when the U. S. G. A. had 1,129 clubs on its roster, Jaques disclosed that the present membership is only 839 and said that 65 clubs resigned last year.

"Of necessity this diminishing membership had forced a curtailment of activities," he said, "and unless the membership is increased curtailment must continue."

Before retiring Jaques announced that the 18-hole matches in connection with the women's national championship at Interlachen, Minn., next August, would be held in the afternoons of the four days they run instead of the mornings to attract larger galleries.

TECH FIVE OPENS WITH 30-23 WIN OVER WILDCATS

Bulldogs Protect First-Half Advantage To Down La. College

RUSTON, La., Jan. 5.—(Special.)—Louisiana Tech's Bulldogs opened their 1935 campaign for S. I. A. A. basketball laurels tonight by trimming the Louisiana college quintet, 30 to 23, in an interesting battle.

The game was a nip-and-tuck struggle for the first few minutes of play but Louisiana Tech steadily forged ahead and after the first 10 minutes the Bulldogs were never behind. The Wildcats took a momentary lead as the game opened and again held a slight advantage over the Techmen after five minutes of play.

The McLane-coached quintet began to click after they warmed up, however, and the half found Tech leading, 18 to 10.

The second half was closer than the first, with the Pineville cagers scoring 13 points to 12 for the Bulldogs, but Tech managed to protect its first-half advantage. It was the fourth victory of the season for Louisiana Tech, the Bulldogs having won three games with independent teams prior to the opening of their association schedule tonight.

Brooks, Tech center, and Crowell, Louisiana college guard, were tied for high scoring honors with eight points each. Each had three field goals and two free throws. Close guarding by both teams kept the score down. Waters and Garrigus, Tech guards, were particularly effective and each turned in some nice floor work. Crowell, Wildcat guard, and C. Barron, forward, were best for Louisiana college. Bass made a couple of sensational long shots for the Wildcats.

The Techmen thought they would be without the services of Billy Mitchell, regular forward, tonight but he arrived from Pasadena, where he witnessed the Rose Bowl game, shortly before game time and hopped into a uniform to help his mates get off to a good start in the association race. Mitchell made five points.

Bass, Louisiana college forward, and Garham, one of the Tech forwards went out of the game by the fou route.

ELLY MEETS ANGELO AGRO IN STADIUM FEATURE

OPULAR MATMAN FACES ANOTHER TOUGH OPPONENT

usky Italian Ranked Sixth In Canadian Heavyweight List

Ernest Kelly, popular heavyweight who has been mecting some tough es lately at Roosevelt stadium, will raw another roughhouse artist next Wednesday night when he tackles ngelo Agro, husky Italian, in the ain event of the weekly stadium at show, Promoter Charlie Bruscato announced last night.

Kelly, the 210-pound former Tennessee football star, was injured last week in his hectic battle with Johnny Plummer but he will be fully recovered by Wednesday night, he advises Promoter Bruscato. Kelly suffered his injury when both Plummer and Sid Westrich, the 219-pound referee, fell on top of him at the end of 41 minutes of wrestling in the first fall. t was at first thought that he had suffered a fractured rib but an examination at a local hospital revealed nothing more serious than a torn ligament and a badly bruised side. Kelly remained here last Thursday for treatment at the hospital.

Agro, who also weighs 210 pounds, hails from Ottawa, Canada. In the list of Canadian rankings, Agro is listed sixth among the Dominion wrestlers. Fast and plenty tough, fans who have seen him in action have compared with with Garibaldi, the famous Italian grappler. He is being touted as a likely challenger for the heavyweight championship.

According to advance notices, Agro can wrestle "clean" or he can be as rough as they come, with little regard for the rules. And if Kelly's luck runs true to form, Mr. Agro probably will pick next Wednesday night to "get dirty." The Italian wrestled Chief Chewchki last Monday night and Londos called at Memphis. Following the match, Londos remarked that Chewchki had nothing on Agro when it came to the dirty work.

Agro is said to be one of the most conscientious trainers in the business. He keeps in perfect shape and doesn't smoke or drink. He is said to have dropped only a few of the 170 matches in which he has performed.

Promoter Bruscato said yesterday that he expects Agro to wrestle "clean" but that "you never can tell."

"Agro can be one of the cleanest wrestlers in the game," Bruscato said, "but he can dish it out when he becomes riled. Kelly also is a clean wrestler, so they may behave themselves Wednesday night."

Bruscato said that he was attempting to line up a good semi-final match to go with the Kelly-Agro affair.

Bruscato also announced yesterday that five prizes will be given away to the fair fans. The prizes will be donated by the R. and A. Jewelry company.

Bobby Jones Says

It is always gratifying to look back upon a golf tournament with the thought that the winner played the best golf and deserved to win. It is even more satisfying to look back upon an entire year, as we can now upon the year 1934, and find that every major title was won by a champion who really belongs. The 1934 winners are a solid lot who, though they may be beaten, will never let you down.

Lawson Little's performance winning through both the British and American amateur championships, when both were played almost entirely over the eighteen-holes route, was the outstanding accomplishment in golf for the year, and indeed for several years. To do this a man must have a definite edge over the rest of the field. It would be possible to flash through one tournament but not through both.

As a matter of fact, there is little doubt that last year, Little was the best amateur golf in America. At the Brookline championship it was evident that his was the smoothest-working game from start to finish, and he had the temperament to back it up. Not once did he even look as though he might be beaten, and he looked in vain for an opponent who could give him a seriously close rub.

Last Day Efforts Won Open

In the open championship, naturally, the going was a bit closer. Sarazen looked to be the most likely winner for most of the way, although he could never quite shake himself loose from Bobby Cruickshank and Wiffy Cox. But as so often happens, Olin Dutra's two magnificent rounds on the last day brought him from an unnoticed position to the head of the list at the finish. It was a splendid effort by a golfer whose ability has long been recognized.

There were too many fine golfers among the professionals to make it possible for anyone to dominate this division as Little dominated the amateurs. Paul Runyan played some of his best golf in winning the P. G. A., and he and Ky Laffoon took the two largest slices from the money tournaments. Henry Cotton blew the entire field out to sea by playing some of the most spectacular golf the British Open has ever seen.

Not one of these important results was surprising. Nor was the winning of the ladies championship for the third time by Virginia Van Wie. Though pressed closely in the final by young Miss Traung of California, Miss Van Wie gave another impressive demonstration of her right at the top of women's golf.

The thing I like most about these 1934 champions is that they take their golf seriously and work hard to continue improving. Not one of them, having reached the top, will relax even for a moment from this effort to keep on improving. With this sort of spirit they all should keep near the front for some years.

Determined Golfers

Little and Cotton are two remarkable examples of what hard, intelligent work can do when coupled with a determination to succeed. When Cotton first came to America several years ago he was far from being the great golfer he is today. And Little, as late as 1933 was just a good amateur. But each was smart enough to spot his weakness and humble enough to learn from others how to strengthen these points. Success won in this way deserves an extra bit of acclaim. It does the game good for such men to win.

Wanted: Congenial Jobs By Sadder And Wiser Coaches

Now Where? Ask Grid Leaders; Boston Crew May Pep Up In '35

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Question: If there are five well-known coaches looking for jobs and only three big jobs available, how many well-known football coaches will be in the breadline in 1935?

By simple mathematics, any football coach who has been around a large university several years will tell you that the answer is at least two, but figuring out which two is another matter.

The five coaches interested in the question are Eddie Casey, Dick Hanley, Biff Jones, Bill Ingram, and Frank Carideo. The schools looking for coaches are Harvard, coached in 1934 by Casey, and Northwestern, coached in '34 by Hanley.

Two Popular Gents

With the time for spring practice coming on and the annual football coaches' meeting over, Bill Bingham, graduate manager at Harvard, and Tug Wilson, athletic director of Northwestern, remain the most popular pair in the university athletic fraternity.

Meanwhile, it is interesting to note that at both Harvard and Northwestern promising squads will report to the new skippers when the spring drill rolls around.

Up Boston way, they are pointing out that Eddie Casey was about to have a good year when the old blue envelope came around. Evidence for this was the last half of the Yale game when the Crimson shoved the Blue all over the field.

Harvard's case is typical of the other two vacant jobs. Casey's successor will have two excellent ends awaiting him, Emile Dubiel, and Shaun Kelly. Yale scouts rated this pair the best the Elis met all year, which is something of a compliment to Wesley Fesler, the handsome all-American end from Ohio State, who was their coach.

Harvard's Gain

Harvard also had the belated pleasure of seeing two Crimson tackles handle their jobs ably in the last half of the Yale game. These boys were Bob Watson and Graham Spring, who were finally substituted for Adlis and Burton. Spring, the oldest man on the Harvard squad in 1934, who stands 6 feet 4 inches and weighs 194 pounds, transferred from Notre Dame to Harvard. He did not play football in South Bend.

But the Harvard backs are even more promising for the 1935 season than the linemen. In addition to such backs as Capt. Bob Haley, Ford, Hedblom, Jackson, Mosely, Watt Ecke, Biloidau, Gibbs, Adzigian, and Blackwood, the new Harvard coach will have Francis Lane back. Lane, ineligible in 1934, is considered the best blocking back at Cambridge since Horween's day. He was a regular in 1933 until he was forced out with a broken leg.

Good Crimson Team

The critics may be judging prematurely but they claim there are several promising freshmen on the way up to help the Crimson out of its trouble. Among the newcomers is Waldemar Wysocki, who sounds like an all-America. More is known, however, of Art Oakes, captain of the 1931 freshman team, who passed the ball against the varsity last year with more precision than any player on the varsity squad.

There's even an Irishman coming up from the frosh to try for the regular quarterback job at Harvard. He is Dick O'Toole and he has all the pepper that made O'Flaherty, Logan, Watson, and McGlone successful in other days behind the Crimson line.

Alabama's Capt. Bill Lee has put his intercollegiate football career behind him, but Harvard has another Bill Lee, who will be making a bid for one of the tackle positions next autumn. Lee weighs 195 pounds and was the fastest lineman from tackle to tackle on the freshman team.

Bill Glendinning and Dave Glueck are the promising freshman guards.

Everyone Wants Harvard Job

With all this material available, at least four of the five coaches could probably be induced to consider, for a consideration, the Harvard job.

Bill Ingram could probably be induced to forget about going into business. Biff Jones might be willing to listen to a transfer to Cambridge, and Hanley certainly would welcome a chance to get into the east, where the competition met by Harvard currently matches Big Ten competition. Carideo, of course, would welcome anything after his experience at Missouri.

Both Northwestern and California expect to give their new coaches better material in 1935 than Hanley and Ingram, respectively, had in 1934. And it goes without saying that the new Missouri coach will have no harder time than Carideo had last season.

In the army of the unemployed are these four famous football coaches. Casey was at Harvard, Hanley at Northwestern, Jones at Louisiana State, and Ingram at California. Now they are all looking for a job.

Food Fads Aid Little In Athlete's Training

Evidence Shows Sports Participants Profit From Sensible Diet

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

We used to have a great many notions about the kind of food athletes ought to eat. Certain foods, for instance, were said to be good for runners, and others were said to be bad for the wind.

With development of our modern knowledge of diet, we realize that it is not possible to give a distance runner endurance by any special food, or to make a hammer-thrower or football player stronger than he really is by feeding him raw meat.

All foods are made up of proteins, carbohydrates, fats, mineral salts and vitamins, and must be taken in relationship to the various proportions of these constituents. Liquids are necessary to life and have to be taken by everyone to preserve health.

There are trainers who try to restrict the fluids taken by athletes to the barest amount consistent with living, and by such action seriously injure the health of those whom they would benefit. This strange notion is particularly associated with the boxing ring, and many a trainer has lost his boxer a match because he did not allow sufficient liquids.

The best food is one which is easily digested. The accumulation of undigested material in the bowels is harmful to health and will interfere seriously with any physical effort. Furthermore, accumulation of undigested material in the bowels results in diversion of blood and the energy of the body toward the handling of that food, when they may be required elsewhere.

If large amounts of material in the form of food, fluids, or gas collect in the stomach and intestines, the diaphragm may be forced upwards, interfering with breathing and with action of the heart.

Because overcooking may harden the fibers of meat and make it difficult to digest, some trainers have gone to the opposite side and have fed raw meat, which is just about as difficult to digest.

Furthermore, these things are not palatable. There is little to be gained in aiding the digestion, if you produce at the same time nausea and a disturbance of the mind.

The athlete should not be forced to eat beyond the requirements of his natural appetite, regardless of the strange notion of some trainers that some people should eat enormous quantities of food and then exercise to work the material into their bodies.

Strength cannot be automatically acquired from food in this way.

The athlete requires protein for repair of his tissue. Furthermore, proteins and fats will give energy as well as carbohydrates. When it was found that sugar is used by the body in muscular activities, trainers began urging athletes to take sugar before races.

The evidence as to the usefulness of this method is not so well established as to make it worth adoption.

Individual requirements for food must be taken into account in relationship to all training. In general, athletes are urged to abstain from smoking and the drinking of alcoholic liquors.

The uses of alcohol in every day life are sometimes as a stimulant to the appetite, sometimes as a sedative to overstrained nerves. The healthy athlete, with the effects of fresh air and exercise, does not require alcoholic assistance for his body activities.

The evidence as to the effect of tobacco on the respiration and on the heart is sufficient to indicate that it is certainly of no special use to the athlete. Many famous athletes have smoked tobacco without very seriously damaging their records, and in some cases smoking has been useful in quieting overstrained nerves.

In general, however, it is no serious matter to deprive a young athlete entirely of tobacco.

Milwaukee Pro And Amateur Partner Post 66 In Qualifying Round

VICTORIA CLUB, RIVERSIDE, Calif., Jan. 5.—(AP)—John Revolta of Milwaukee and Ed Babcock, Los Angeles, won the second qualifying round of the Riverside amateur-pro golf tournament today with a best ball card of 33-33—66, six strokes under par. They played over sodden fairways and slow greens.

While it was three strokes more than Henry Picard, Hershey, Penna., and Ken Sommerfeld, San Diego, Calif., took to lead yesterday's half of the qualifying field, the score was phenomenal in view of the playing conditions.

Revolta, pro of the Tripoli Country club, turned in a fine 69 in his own right to win $100 first prize money.

Five teams tied for second place with 67s, with the pro-members receiving $45 each for their share of the second qualifying round money of $500.

These were: Tod Menafee, San Antonio, Texas, and Lieut. B. A. Schreiver, a former Texan now of March field, near here; Orville White, St. Louis, and Paul Sleppy, Long Beach; Dal Jeffers, Santa Ana, and Louie Alabaster, Riverside; Eddie Loos, Chicago, and W. B. Davidson, of Riverside; and Guy Paulsen, Ft. Wayne, Ind., and Alex Hanson, Riverside.

Playing conditions were more exacting than those of yesterday, with best ball cards of 72, equaling par, qualifying the field for tomorrow's final round with yesterday's leaders for the $1,000 in prize money and an array of amateur prizes.

ALABAMA AGAIN DEFEATS TULANE

Greenies Put Up Staunch Battle But Lose By 31-26 Score

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5.—(AP)—The Crimson-clad quintet of Alabama turned in a 31 to 26 decision over Tulane's Greenies here tonight, to sweep a two-game series before 700 spectators. The Tuscaloosa team triumphed in Friday night's opener, 24 to 12.

Alabama took an early lead, was tied twice during the opening minutes of play, but pulled away to a 17 to 10 lead as the first half ended.

Tulane came back with a stronger attack in the second period, pulling up to within three points of its rival, at 27 to 24, with four minutes left to play, but the rally fell short. Jim Whatley of Alabama got under the basket for a neat goal, and a minute later Jimmy Walker sent a long throw through for two more Alabama points. Gus Clark's two free throws for Tulane after Raphael Sneed's foul ended scoring for the evening, and in 60 seconds more, during which time Clark missed a throw on Al Nogi's foul, the game ended.

The Crimson team had six football players on its line-up, and Tulane used three. It has been less than a week since all nine were in gridiron togs, which might have played some part in the nature of Saturday's cage game.

Appling Signs Contract For 1935 With White Sox

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Luke Appling, Chicago White Sox infielder, said here today that both he and Marshall Mauldin, young Atlantan who played several games with the White Sox last summer, had signed new contracts with the Chicago club.

Of the 14,000,000 inhabitants of Yugo-Slavia, only about 1,000 belong to no church denomination. Approximately 48 per cent of the entire population belongs to the Orthodox church, 37.5 per cent are Roman Catholics, and 11 per cent Moslems.

FRICK SEES CLOSE NATIONAL LEAGUE FINISH THIS YEAR

President Also Expects Eight Clubs To Be Bunched In Race

By Ford C. Frick
(President, National League)

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—It would be expecting a great deal to have as close a finish to the 1935 National league pennant race as we had last year, with the Cardinals and Giants fighting it out right down to the final day of the season, but I look for at least five clubs to figure in the closing drive this year.

The New York Giants, as a result of the deals with Philadelphia for Dick Bartell and George Davis, look to have strengthened themselves at previously uncertain spots to a greater extent than any other club. They are certain to give the world champienan Cardinals a great race, with the Chicago Cubs, the Pittsburgh Pirates and either the Brooklyn Dodgers, the Phillies or the Boston Braves as a fifth pennant contender. It will take actual play to show what the latter three clubs can do.

There should be no such gap between the first and last-place clubs as there was at the finish of the 1934 season, when the Cincinnati Reds were 42 games behind the pennant winners. At least half this gap should be closed because of the active and aggressive team-building conducted by the Reds, as well as other second division teams. In fact I will not be surprised if Cincinnati shows more improvement than any other club in the league this year.

The big trade between the Chicago and Pittsburgh clubs, while involving some outstanding performers, does not figure to give either a distinct advantage. It was about an even exchange, on the whole, but the change in uniforms may prove an impetus to the players concerned, including Fred Lindstrom, Larry French, Guy Bush and Babe Herman.

We look forward with special interest in the National league to the experiment with night baseball. It should be made clear that the league owners were unanimous in deciding to try the experiment, limiting to seven the number of games which any single club can play under the lights. Three clubs, New York, Brooklyn and Pittsburgh expressed themselves as unwilling this year to play night games, but they are entirely agreeable to having others try out the idea.

At least two clubs, St. Louis and Cincinnati, are certain to install the lighting system. They are prime movers in the experiment but they also urged its definite limitation, this year. Baseball men will watch the results with special interest.

The National league looks forward with keen anticipation to the third annual all-star game with the American league to be played this year in Cleveland. This has become an event of outstanding national interest. Naturally, we hope to turn the tables on our friendly rivals in this game but we are looking forward also to the hope of turning out a pennant winner able to make it three straight for the National league in the world championship series.

N. J., schoolboy, advanced four notches to No. 4, taking the place accorded last year to Clifford Sutter, former intercollegiate titlist, who fell to eighth. Stoefen's ranking is a demotion from No. 3 last year while Lott's rating represents a rise from 10th place to 6th.

Seventh place went to Berkeley Bell, one of the game's outstanding "in and outers," who was graded 18th in 1933. J. Donald Budge, the Oakland, Calif., "red head," is a newcomer to the list, rated 9th, and Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, the fiery little Georgian, dropped from seventh to tenth.

New York Stocks

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Stocks backed and filled rather listlessly in today's brief market session and most of the leaders were unable to get out of a narrow fractional range. Improvement was shown by some of the motor, traction and specialty issues. The close was steady. Transfers approximated 500,000 shares.

After overnight study of the president's message to congress, speculative forces seemingly concluded that the administrative program was about in line with expectations and contained little that could be considered as an immediate market stimulus.

The financial district, at the same time, was moderately cheered by the assertions of the chief executive that spending for public works to cut unemployment would be kept within the government's credit. This was interpreted in some quarters as anti-inflationary and as an indication that funds for relief projects would be raised through orthodox methods. The failure of the message to mention price-raising or prospective monetary policies was also viewed as constructive.

Of more importance to the equities market, it was felt in most boardrooms, was the budget message which is to be delivered to congress Monday. It was hoped this would provide a bullish influence which would enable stocks to resume their upward trend. It was realized, however, that, in view of existing uncertainties, the president might present an "open-end" budget.

Some of the building shares found friends on the strength of possible profits connected with the national public works program. Automotive issues were active and firm as the New York automobile show opened and hopes for expanded sales grew brighter. The better tone in the traction group reflected the belief that unification of the New York companies was near. The rails did not follow through on their yesterday's advance and most of the utilities did virtually nothing.

Commodities were somewhat dull. Grains traveled a restricted path and cotton was a trifle lower most of the time. Bonds were quiet and mixed. Gold currencies continued to ease in terms of the dollar.

Shares of Auburn automobile got up more than 2, and Allied Chemical and Simms Petroleum were up nearly as much. Continental Can edged into new high territory for the year. Gainers of fractions to a point or so included Johns-Manville, American Radiator, Foundation Company, Liggett & Myers B, U. S. Gypsum, Packard, Chrysler, U. S. Steel common and preferred, U. S. Smelting, N. Y. Shipbuilding, Interboro Rapid Transit, Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit, Manhattan Modified and American Sugar Refining.

Such issues as Case, General Motors, Deere, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Union Pacific, Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey and American were virtually unchanged. American Telephone firmed.

The rail stocks apparently paid little attention to the somewhat more than seasonal decline in freight car loadings for the week ended December 29. The figures, usually forthcoming on Friday but delayed because of the holiday, disclosed total loadings for the period of 425,120 cars.

This was a decrease of 122,775 below the aggregate for the previous week and was attributed partly to a sharp curtailment in coal shipments due to the unseasonably warm weather in the final week of 1934. A drop in the movement of merchandise freight was also a factor. The total was 29,645 cars under the corresponding week last year.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Downturns of wheat prices early today resulted more or less from uncertainty over President Roosevelt's budget speech expected on Monday and from ensuing legislation. Opening unchanged to 3-8 lower, May 99 3-8 to 1-2, wheat afterward sagged all around. Corn started at 3-8 off to 1-4 up, May 89 1-8 to 1-4, and subsequently held near the initial limits.

Wheat closed firm, 5-8 to 1 1-8 above yesterday's finish, May $1.00 5-8 to 3-4, corn 1 1-8 to 1 1-4 up, May 90 3-8 to 1-2, oats 1-4 to 3-8 advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12 cents.

INDUSTRIAL--REVIEW OF THE TWIN CITIES

CHEVROLET SHOWS FINER '35 MODELS

Master De Luxe And Standard Lines Offer Greater Values

Master De Luxe models, strongly emphasizing beauty and style, and new standard models, featuring high-powered performance with economy, are announced today by Chevrolet.

Master De Luxe body models include sedan, coach, business coupe with luggage compartment, sport coupe with rumble seat, sport sedan, and town sedan. In addition to the coach, business coupe, phaeton, and sport roadster, which comprised the Standard line last year, the 1935 Standard line includes a full sized four-door sedan and a sedan delivery car for light commercial uses.

The 1935 New Standard has been given virutually the same performance ability as the Master De Luxe which however, departs distinctly from previous Chevrolets in striking advances in design of body and trim. The engines, incorporating many improvements over the 1934 Master motor, are of the same size and design in both models, while in the chassis the chief difference is the presence in the Master De Luxe of Chevrolet enclosed knee-action suspension, now entering its second year improved in construction and operation.

Mechanically, the two models have in common numerous important improvements in construction and design. Both engines have an original system of high pressure jets supplying oil to connecting rod bearings, and electro-plated pistons, heavier crankshafts, and other new features that contribute to better performance, smoothness and economy. In both chassis, newly designed clutches, more effective braking systems, stiffer frames, and other advances in design give greater ease of operation, increased durability, and a better ride.

Visually, the new Master De Luxe retains only the characteristic outlines of the radiator, and the familiar trade-mark on hub caps and radiator emblem, to indicate that it is of Chevrolet origin. The V-radiator itself is narrower and more sloping, the unit fenders are highly contoured in their streamlining, while the windshield not only slopes back steeply but also is slightly V-shaped, causing all the forepart of the car to flow smoothly into the body, which is the utmost in smoothness. By utilizing the newly developed all-steel roof construction, Chevrolet has attained a sleekness formerly impossible, its highly crowned roof sweeping from the windshield not only slopes back steeply but also is slightly V-shaped, causing all the forepart of the car to flow smoothly into the body, which is the utmost in smoothness. By utilizing the newly developed all-steel roof construction, Chevrolet has attained a sleekness formerly impossible, its highly crowned roof sweeping from the windshield to the streamlined, graceful rear end in a continuous curve, an effect heightened by the absence of roof panels and moldings and by the continuity of body color over the entire top.

Every detail of the car is new, starting with the front bumper and including the radiator grill, the ornament that supplants the radiator filler-cap (now under the hood), the horizontal hood louvres, the running-board pattern, streamlined door handles, spare tire mountings (concealed in some models), tail lamp, and rear bumper. Aside from appearance, there are important improvements in body comfort and spaciousnness, and especially in the ride. The wheelbase of the new Master De Luxe is increased to 113 inches, and an even greater increase in body space has been gained by moving the engine forward. The appearance of great length has been enhanced by lowering the floor level, dropping it one inch near the ground by lowering the chassis side rails.

The Master De Luxe sport and town sedans have integral trunks embodied in the rear panels, with compartments for the spare wheel. In the three sedans, pressed steel wheels with short rounded spokes are regular equipment. Wire wheels with large hub caps are used on the other models.

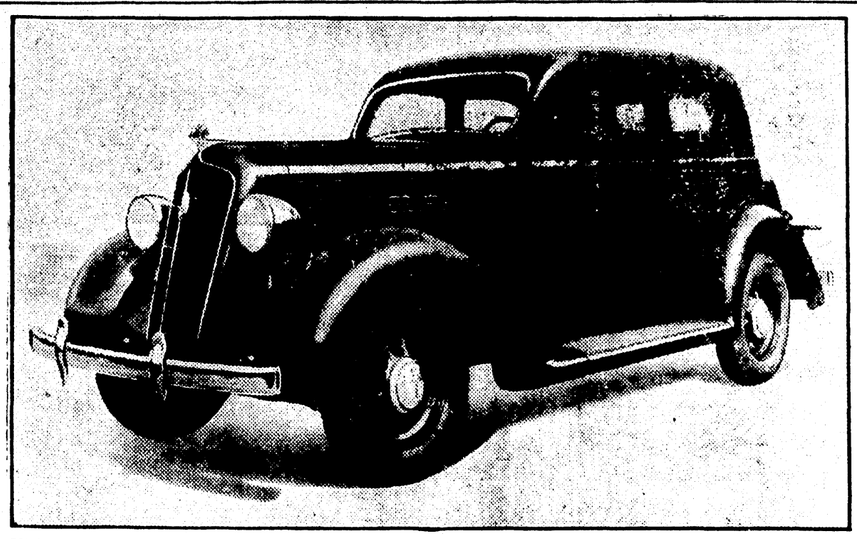
In the lower priced line of new Standard models, larger bodies, a new engine with 23 per cent more horsepower, an improved chassis frame, and numerous other new features give improved performance, still better economy, and increased comfort and safety.

Bodies are generally improved in spaciousness and comfort, and possess many new convenience and appearance features. The newly added four-door sedan has the same dimensions as the coach, which is 3 1-4 inches longer than the 1934 model and provides 2 1-2 inches more leg-room in the rear compartment. The closed models all have flat floors in the rear compartment, the ridge formerly existing in front of the seat having been eliminated. The driver's seat, in all closed models, is equipped with finger-tip control for quick adjustment.

Redesigned dials, behind concave glass that eliminates reflections and promotes visility, are mounted in an improved instrument board having walnut-grained panels.

The main chassis changes are the result of a comprehensive revision of design to effect a marked increase in performance ability. To attain greater acceleration, higher speed, and better hill-climbing, Chevrolet has adopted for the new Standard line the large "Blue Flame" engine of the same displacement (206.8 cu. in.) and compression ratio (5.45 to 1) as used in the 1934 Master models, but incorporating many new features contributing to better performance throughout its speed range. To match the gain in engine power and car speed with the necessary increase in braking ability, the cable-controlled braking system also has been improved in operation and increased in capacity. The chassis frame is improved in strength and stiffness to an even greater degree than would have required merely to keep pace with the increase in the loads imposed upon it by both the engine and the brakes.

NEW HIGH-SPEED SAFETY PLYMOUTH FOR 1935



High speed and safety features mark the new 1935 Plymouth. It boasts the most powerful engine Plymouth has ever built—82 horsepower—and this power increase has been gained without changing the bore or stroke. The 1935 Plymouth is three inches wider and three inches longer than the model of last year. Its All-Steel Safety body has been made more rugged than ever. Floating Ride has been adapted to the new Plymouth by a complete re-distribution of weight and the result is a new "soft" ride. With its flowing lines the appearance of the new 1935 Plymouth is one of modern beauty.

PONTIAC REVEALS FINE NEW MODELS

New Low - Priced Six Joins Straight Eight In Line For 1935

A new low-priced six now joins an improved straight eight to form the nineteen-model line of cars presented by the Pontiac Motor company for 1935. Closely approaching the lowest price field for the first time, Pontiac's two new cars should reap an increase of the total of the industry's business. The new six will be available both in standard and deluxe models.

The wheelbase of the six is 112 inches as compared with 117 inches for the eight. In appearance, it duplicates closely the modern streamlining of the eight.

Five distinctive body styles are offered on the standard six. The models with bodies by Fisher, include: 2-door and 4-door sedans; 2-door and 4-door touring sedans (with built-in trunks), and standard coupe. The deluxe six also includes a sport coupe and cabriolet.

The straight eight provides seven body styles.

Both Pontiac chassis have ample power for the modern mode of high-speed travel. The six-cylinder engine develops 81 horsepower at 65 miles an hour, while the straight eight delivers 84 horsepower at 70 miles an hour.

A comparison of the straight eight with that of last year, reveals many improvements and refinements that also are included in the new six.

Briefly, they are; a marked change in appearance; new Fisher solid-steel "Turret-Top" bodies; build-in luggage space; concealed spart tires; "V" type windshield; greater width in both front and rear seats; divided a folding back front seats in 2-door sedans; new instrument panel; package shelf in all models; new lamps, hydraulic brakes with double and triple sealed drums; new action clutch; automatic choke in the eight; air cooled generator with voltage regulator; interchangeable main and connecting rod bearings; silver alloy connecting rod bearings; steel spoked wheels; increased steering gear ratio; knee-action units (except on standard six) mounted on rigid tubular cross member and new radiator and hood grilles.

New features are intended to enhance the economical performance, durability, dependability, speed and riding qualities of the 1935 line. They emphasize the almost unbelievable values of the motor car of 1935.

First glance reveals a marked development in the art of scientific teardrop streamlining. Streamlining of radiator, hood, lamps, fenders and Fisher solid steel bodies, has produced an ensemble of clean, flowing lines, with an absence of bumps or projections. Although stylish, it does not cross the borderline of "smart taste."

Outward grace and character are strengthened by the unique manner in which the designers have handled the radiator and hood grille work to give an effect of fleetness without awkwardness or misplaced emphasis. The vertical lines of the radiator grilles astonishingly create the impression of narrow sleekness. A further softening of the entire appearance ensemble is brought about by almost eliminating the gap between the front fenders and the hood.

From the standpoint of appearance as well as construction, the solid steel Fisher body, used for the first time by Pontiac in 1935 is the major feature of the new Pontiac. It is claimed that Fisher solid steel bodies are superior in the distribution of the steel in the interest of greater safety, as well as the satisfying style, comfort, room and convenience that accompany superior safety.

Top fabric over wood-bows and slats, or wood-bows and chicken-wire, have been superseded by a solid steel roof. The steel roof rests on a foundation of steel bows, welded to the steel body panels. Windshields are the "V" windstream type introduced for the first time into the low price field.

Appropriately borrowing a term from the naval architect, this body is called the "Turret-Top". With a hint of ruggedness and dependability, when viewed from the front or rear, it distinctly approaches the design of a torpedo. One of the most finished bids of artisanship is in the slight taper of the body and rear fenders.

Pontiac engineers say the new bodies are quiet and that in test runs last summer, when the weather was above 100 degrees, the temperature inside the solid steel bodies registered below that in the conventional slat-roof type.

Owners of 1935 Pontiac sixes and straight eights will have a choice of seven colors with mouldings, striping and wheels finished to harmonize. Interiors of both sixes and eights reveal an all around increase in inside body dimensions and consequently roominess, for which the solid steel body is largely responsible. The front seat in the 4-door model on both "6 and 8" and in the 2-door on the 8 will accommodate three passengers without crowding.

Two-door sedans on the six cylinder chassis are equipped with bucket front seats, while in the straight eight, a full width front seat with a divided back is provided. Both halves of the back are hinged at the lower edges and may be pushed forward to permit easy entrance to the rear seat. Door widths in 2-door models have been increased from 42 1-2 to 46 1-2 inches, while in the 4-door models, the increase is from 35 to 36 inches.

NEW TERRAPLANES AND HUDSONS HERE

Many Improvements Listed For Popular Cars In 1935 Models

The new Hudsons and Terraplanes for 1935 have arrived and are now on public display for the first time in the showrooms of Simpson Auto Parts company, West Monroe, local dealers. Featured by lower, longer lines with more power, even finer performance and two of the latest developments of the industry, the new cars are expected to create a tremendous amount of interest. The two developments which are entirely new to the industry are the steel-roofed body which incloses the passengers in a silent, solid steel compartment with perfect ventilation and the new electric gearshift which entirely clears the front compartment and gives real finger-tip control of the car.

For 1935 the Hudson Motor Car company will build a Special and DeLuxe series Terraplane 6 on 112 inch wheelbase and a complete series of Hudson cars on three wheelbases, namely, 116, 117 and 124 inch wheelbases. New for 1935 is the Hudson Big Six with a 93 horsepower engine mounted on 116 inch wheelbase chassis. There are five models of the Hudson Standard 8 on 117 inch wheelbase with 113 horsepower, and three models of the Hudson DeLuxe 8 on the 117 inch wheelbase with 113 horsepower. In addition there is the big 8 which will be produced in two models—Custom Club sedan and Custom brougham on 124 inch wheelbase, also with 113 horsepower.

From a performance standpoint the Hudson and Terraplane models all offer improvements for 1935 over 1934. Detailed advancement in engineering and construction in the engine has resulted in increased power without any change in the basic dimensions. As a result of these improvements the power-weight ratio of the new cars is considerably more advantageous than for 1934 with a resulting increase in acceleration, hill climbing ability and top speed.

From an appearance standpoint the cars are lower and longer. The radiator grills have been improved with a higher and narrower effect. The grills are of the pierced type and are very distinctive. The Terraplane grill retains the radial or sun-burst effect of 1934, while the Hudson grills are of two types. The one on the Big Six Hudson is distinctive for that car and the other is used on all Hudson 8's. On both the Terraplane and Hudson, streamline trunk models are available for any sedan or coach.

Another very noteworthy improvement in the Terraplane and Hudson cars for 1935 is the completely redesigned braking system. The brake drums are now made of alloy steel and are machined and polished. The sections have been increased 20 per cent to give greater rigidity. They are now held to an absolute concentricity. A more flexible type of brake shoe is being used, resulting in perfect conformity of the shoe with the drum when the brakes are engaged.

Perfect equalization of brake pressure on the shoe is obtained by a new rotary equalizer which operates with a minimum of friction. The brake cables are hooked to this equalizer which rotates under the impulse of either brake pedal or emergency brake lever, giving an accurately equalized pull and uniform movement on each of the brake cables.

A study of the engineering behind the new Hudson and Terraplane cars indicates that while the fine performance has been even further improved, none of the ruggedness for which the cars have also established a reputation, has been impaired.

It is estimated that 70 per cent of the increase in horsepower of the 1935 motors is the direct result of improved combustion chamber characteristics which have been built upon the patented features of Hudson's [illegible] inder head design carried over from previous years.

ARLET FEVER WARNING GIVEN

No Danger In School Situation If Parents Will Be Careful

Possibility that it may be necessary to close some of the schools of the parish unless greater care is exercised in preventing the spread of the present outbreak of scarlet fever was expressed Saturday by Dr. J. W. Williams, director of the Ouachita parish health unit. There should be no difficulty, however, in handling the situation if those in whose homes the malady occurs will exercise proper care, the physician said.

In a statement Saturday, Dr. Williams said:

"Every case of scarlet fever that has come to the attention of the health department during the present outbreak—and we have seen them all—has been comparatively mild, but in dealing with scarlet fever we have a germ that is hard to handle.

"There are two dangers present in a situation of this kind. One of them is that the disease may spread from patient to patient and may increase in virulence until there becomes a strong likelihood of death in each case. Another danger is that the present mildness of the disease will cause people to relax their vigilance and thus bring about a further spread of the malady.

"There is a further danger in the fact that while the disease may appear to be mild it is likely to affect the heart and kidneys. For this reason the patient should be kept in bed and should not be allowed to move around or leave the room. If we had a few deaths in this outbreak there might be less danger of its spreading.

"My advice is to keep the child in bed, under a doctor's care, and to take every precaution against spreading the disease. Families in whose homes scarlet fever occurs also should see to it that their physician notifies the health department immediately, as this will help in shortening the time the child must be quarantined and thus kept out of school.

"All except three of the 20 cases that have come to our attention recently have been reported from Ouachita parish high school. This makes it somewhat more difficult to handle than in the grade schools, for the reason that the pupils move from room to room, instead of staying in one part of the building all the time. Another thing that makes it difficult to handle is the fact that the high school students are so reluctant to lose time from their work. In some instances parents have insisted on sending children to school from a home in which there is a known case of scarlet fever. To prevent the spread of the disease, however, it is necessary that we exercise the greatest care."

In concluding the statement Dr. Williams again said he did not think it would be necessary to close any of the schools and that he thought the situation could be handled without much trouble if those whose children have the disease will only use the proper precautions in protecting their future health and in seeing that they do not make outside contacts.

Clarks

Miss Vivien Jones entertained at her home on the evening of December 31 with a New Year's buffet supper in honor of Miss Charlotte Box of L. S. U. and Miss Virginia Thomas of Louisiana Tech, who were at home for the holidays.

The season's atmosphere was reflected in the beautifully decorated Christmas tree, holly, mistletoe and other symbols of the Yuletide and New Year. Interesting games and contests were arranged as entertainment. After the supper the party was carried to the Library theater to see a midnight performance of "Coquette" presented by students of the Clarks high school under the direction of B. E. CARRIS TO ATTEND SOCIETY'S MEETING AT ORLEANS TUESDAY

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 5.—(Special)—The managing director of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, Lewis H. Carris, will be guest of honor at the annual meeting of the Louisiana Society for the Prevention of Blindness which will meet in New Orleans Tuesday.

The program will include an address by Mr. Carris, reports on the work and plans of the local society, an exhibition of sight saving devices and social features.

Physicians, scientists, social service workers and the general public from all parts of the state are urged to attend.

In a recent interview, Dr. Chas. A. Bahn, president of the Louisiana Society for the Prevention of Blindness, issued the following statement: "About two thirds of all blindness is preventable. When the public understands the simple fundamentals responsible for the fact that more than 50,000 persons in this country are needlessly blind, we will have done our duty."

Plans are under way for the organization in 1935 of a number of affiliated societies for the prevention of blindness in various sections of the state.

Mr. Carris is expected to be in Monroe during the week at a date to be fixed later, when he will address members of the civic service clubs on the plans for organizing affiliated societies for the prevention of blindness. He is coming to the city under the auspices of the Monroe Lions club, which has as one of its major objectives a program for aiding the blind and helping children with impaired vision.

TECH CONDITIONS MUCH IMPROVED

President Bond Finishes 20th Biennial Report Of Affairs

RUSTON, La., Jan. 5.—(Special)—That conditions at Louisiana Tech are improved in many respects may be deduced from the 20th biennial report of the affairs of the state's senior college here, just prepared by President G. W. Bond.

The report has been submitted to Governor O. K. Allen; Judge H. H. White of Alexandria, president of the state board of education; T. H. Harris, state superintendent of education; members of the state board of education, and to members of the legislature.

The printed pamphlet contains financial statements of the general fund and the boarding department fund, with no deficit existing in either account. Although the college was "in the red" more than $50,000 in 1928, the deficit was eliminated entirely about three years ago.

While the financial statements in the pamphlet concern only the biennium of 1932-34, other parts of the report show figures covering earlier years.

The report shows, for instance, that there has been a steady improvement in the qualifications of the faculty. In 1928, there were three teachers at Tech with the Ph.D. degree; 28 with the master's degree; 35 with the bachelor's degree, and three with less training than that required for a bachelor's degree. At present, the faculty includes the following: Ph.D., 8; master's, 36; bachelor's, 21, and less, 2.

Another indication of the college's advancement is the increase in enrollment. In 1928, the report shows, there were 778 resident students on the campus, while in the present semester there are 1,101 resident students, exclusive of resignations effective at the end of the fourth week of class work.

In 1922, when Tech first granted the bachelor's degree, 10 students were graduated, the president points out, while in 1934 diplomas were granted to 122 seniors, exclusive of students receiving teacher's certificates.

From 1927, when the Tech library was built, until 1934, the number of bound volumes in the library has been increased from 5,765 to 15,534, according to the report. These figures do not include numerous bound magazines, newspapers and public documents.

"During the past seven years," President Bond reports, "it has been possible to make a number of permanent improvements on the campus, even though there has been no appropriation for these items. The new boys' hall was erected at a cost of $68,000 from money received from a former appropriation. The athletic field has been greatly improved, and with an appropriation made by the last legislature a concrete stadium, with modern equipment and with a seating capacity of 3,000, will be erected during the 1934-35 session.

"Through the cooperation of the state highway department and certain friends of the institution who were willing to donate the materials, the drives on and around the campus were paved during the last few years."

The report also comments on a campus painting project of about $21,000 and a wiring project of about $15,000, both of which are now under way through the medium of the civil works administration. It also refers to social and religious life of the students, extra-curricular activities, the printing department maintained by the college, students aided by the FERA, organization and rating by accrediting associations, and other phases of the institution.

The last sentence in the text of the report says:

Plans For Bastrop Building Drawn By Architects In Monroe

One of the projects expected to get under way in this section of the state within a short time, following withdrawal of the order holding up PWA funds in Louisiana, is the construction of a new courthouse building at Bastrop, it was stated Saturday by H. H. Land of the firm of J. W. Smith and Associates, architects. It had been feared that a tie-up of this fund might materially delay the construction.

Plans for the courthouse have already been drawn by the architectural firm here. The building is expected to be erected at a cost of about $30,000, through funds provided by the public works administration.

Another building project for which the firm has drawn plans, though not in any way connected with PWA or other public funds, is the construction of a new Catholic church at Lake Providence. This building will cost about $7,500 and will be a brick structure replacing the present frame building.

The firm also expects to draw plans for several other buildings of good size within the near future, it was stated, but plans for them were said not yet to be definite enough to announce. One of the buildings for which they have already drawn plans, but which has not yet been built, is the residence to be erected for Judge Charles Schulze, superintendent of Louisiana Training institute, for about $15,000. It is not expected that this work will be done before spring or early summer.

Kusin Will Leave Tonight To Attend Furniture Exhibit

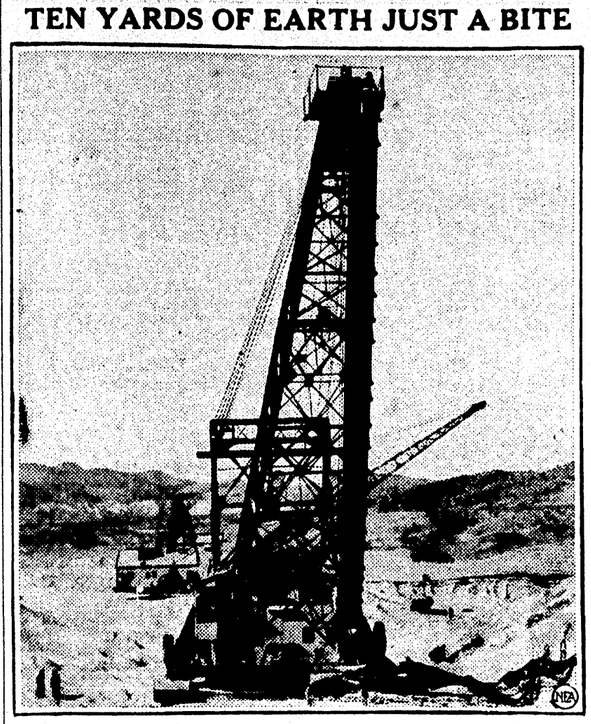
Joseph Kusin, owner of the Dixie Bedding and Furniture company, will leave tonight for Chicago, where he will attend the annual bedding manufacturers' convention and the January furniture show.

While in Chicago Mr. Kusin will make furniture purchases for the wholesale and retail furniture stores. New shipments will begin to arrive within a short time. He advised those contemplating the purchase of an occasional piece of furniture or furnishing a complete home to wait to see the new arrivals in furniture.

Mr. Kusin is optimistic over the business outlook for 1935, believing that business in all lines is beginning to show improvement and that indications are that this will be one of the best years since 1926.

Retail sales within the last few months, he said, have gradually increased and asserted that buyers are leaning toward better merchandise this year. He expects to buy a more varied line and promises one of the most complete stocks of home furnishings in this section of Louisiana.

TEN YARDS OF EARTH JUST A BITE



Ten cubic yards of earth is just a good gulp for this walking bridge dredge operating along the route of the $33,000,000 All-American canal, from the Colorado river to California's Imperial Valley. Towering far into the air, it is an outstanding attraction in Arizona, where it is shown at work north of Yuma, following recent dedication of the project.

MARTIN RETURNS

A. C. Martin, 504 South First street, who has been a patient at the Missouri Pacific hospital at Little Rock, Ark., for nearly two weeks, returned to his home here Friday night.

CITY WILL MOVE STREET CAR BARN

Transportation Equipment To Be Housed At New Location

Following the recent substitution of bus service for street car service in the north end of town, D. A. Breard, commissioner of finance and utilities, said Saturday that the transportation storage and maintenance barn would be transferred from its present location in Forsythe park to the Frank Eason building on Lee avenue and Dick Taylor street. Some time will be required to accomplish the change and it may be 60 days or more before it is completed, Mr. Breard said.

The Eason building was said to have been selected because of its convenient location and because of the comparatively low cost of preparing it to house the street cars, busses and maintenance equipment. It is 100 by 150 feet in dimensions and the property includes about half a block of land, thus providing plenty of space. Mr. Breard said the property had been purchased by the city and a record of the transaction probably would be filed soon.

It became necessary to discontinue street car service on Riverside because of the state highway bridge and highways leading to it along Louisville avenue. For this reason the cars were taken to the north end of town only for servicing. It was not deemed advisable by members of the city commission to maintain the tracks merely for the purpose of transporting cars to the north end for servicing. Such portions of the track as are suitable will be salvaged.

The old barn in Forsythe park is in a somewhat dilapidated condition and it is expected that it will be torn down after all the machinery and equipment have been transferred to the new location. This work, if done, will be done under the supervision of R. D. Swayze, commissioner of streets and parks, as a part of the beautification program at the park, it was stated.

Bigger Crop Production Seen In Claiborne Area

HOMER, La., Jan. 5.—(Special)—An increased production in the growing of tomatoes, sweet potatoes and Irish potatoes is predicted for this area this season as indicated by the early preparation for extension of crop operations.

Beginning Monday definite arrangements for the advancement of truck gardening and the raising, principally, of tomatoes and potatoes, will be made at a series of meetings to be held here throughout the week, ending next Saturday.

Hot beds for growing tomato plants are already in use and will supply enough plants to fill the needs of this entire trade territory.

Shipping facilities have been extended with two new tomato sheds at Athens and Magnolia, Ark. Loading sheds will be stationed at the following places: Homer, Haynesville, Gibsland, Saline, Athens and Magnolia, all in the territory traversed by the L. & N. W. railroad.

THEFT REPORTED

W. E. Rabb of Vicksburg reported to police that a man's overcoat and a woman's purse were stolen from his automobile Friday night while it was parked downtown.

BALL RITES TO BE HELD TODAY

Funeral For Hunting Accident Victim Is Planned At 3 P. M.

Funeral services for John Ethridge Ball, 54, well known among local game hunters and older residents of the city, who accidentally shot himself fatally Friday afternoon, will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at his home on the Richwood road, with Rev. Colvin of Rayville and Rev. D. C. Barr of Oak Ridge officiating. Interment will be made in Riverview cemetery with Masons in charge.

A request was made that all members of Western Star lodge No. 24 meet at the Masonic hall at 2 o'clock. From there members of this organization will attend the funeral in a body. Mr. Ball was a thirty-second degree Mason, a Shriner and a member of Western Star lodge No. 24.

Pallbearers will be H. C. Mize, C. R. Tidwell, Ira Pettit, T. L. Morris, Lawrence McDonald, W. G. Miller, Frank Chase and Joe Mundo, Sr.

Surviving are the widow and a sister, Mrs. O. A. Dunn of Girard.

Mr. Ball had lived here practically all his life. He was employed for many years as a blacksmith by the V. S. and P. shops here and later worked as a saw filer for saw mills. In recent years he had operated a truck and poultry farm on the Richwood road, south of Louisiana Training institute.

Mr. Ball's left side was almost shot away after he thought he had taken all the shells out. The accident occurred on the Prairie road southeast of Monroe. He was found at his car in a dying condition and died about 15 minutes after arriving at a sanitarium in Monroe. Before he died, however, he said he had thought he had taken all the shells out of the gun and that he was pressing the barrel down toward the stock when the cartridge was discharged.

Hardwood Mill Is Being Erected Near Bernice

BERNICE, La., Jan. 5.—(Special)—Mayo and Sons sawmill is installing a hardwood mill just south of town, which will be in operation, it is hoped, by the first of next month.

The plant will be a dimension mill that will cut hickory and oak in lengths from six to 18 feet.

The wood, it was said, will be shipped to Dover, Ark., and later to Europe to be used for skis.

PARISH SCHOOLS WILL CELEBRATE

Ter-Centennial Of Higher Institutions Will Be Observed

Plans are already being made in Ouachita parish, as well as throughout Louisiana and the entire nation, for the celebration in March of the ter-centennial of high schools in the United States, T. O. Brown, superintendent of parish schools, said Saturday. There will be a special observance in this parish and the occasion will also be appropriately noted in the state and nation, Supt Brown said.

Appointments for the state organization for celebrating the 300th anniversary of high schools in Louisiana were announced recently by Charles F. Trudeau, state high school supervisor. District chairmen were appointed from among school superintendents and Supt. Brown was named chairman of the celebration committee for Ouachita parish.

State organization for the celebration was planned in pyramid with every high school principal being asked to serve as ex-officio chairman of the local observance committee. The district chairman will have general supervision over the local committees. Principals of the three parish high schools in Ouachita parish will serve as local chairmen under Supt. Brown.

Although the entire school term of 1934-1935 was designated as the ter-centennial celebration period, celebration ceremonies were fixed to take place in the spring.

As in the national celebration, ceremonies within the state of Louisiana will pay respect to the American tradition of public, universal and democratic high school education, established with the Boston Latin school in 1635. By means of exhibitions and pageants, the schools will also foster a greater public appreciation of the problems and achievements of high schools, it was announced.

In Ouachita parish the high schools will carry out exercises befitting the occasion on March 15. On the night of March 14 a radio program on the subject will be presented. Supt Brown said that station KMLB of Monroe had agreed to donate the necessary time on the air for the program.

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY -:- The Trojan War—Part V -:- By J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

TRUE TO HIS PROMISE TO ULYSSES, ACHILLES, WITH HIS FRIEND PATROCLUS AND THE FLOWER OF THE FIGHTING MEN OF THESSALY, HASTENED TO JOIN THE WAITING GREEK HOST AT AULIS.

AGAMEMNON GAVE ORDERS FOR THE ARMY TO EMBARK FOR THE ATTACK ON TROY. BEFORE SAILING THE SUPERSTITIOUS GREEKS MADE SACRIFICES TO THE GODS TO BRING THE FLEET FAVORING WINDS.

BUT FOR MANY DAYS GALES AND HEAD WINDS DELAYED THEIR DEPARTURE. AGAIN AGAMEMNON CONSULTED THE ORACLE. HE WAS TOLD THAT THE GODS WERE ANGRY AND WOULD NOT BE APPEASED UNLESS HE SACRIFICED HIS DAUGHTER IPHIGENIA TO THE GODDESS DIANA---!

AGAMEMNON SORROWFULLY CONSENTED, BUT JUST AS THE PRIEST WAS ABOUT TO SLAY THE GIRL, A DEER APPEARED. TAKING THIS AS A SIGN THAT DIANA WAS NO LONGER ANGRY, THE PRIESTS SACRIFICED THE ANIMAL INSTEAD OF IPHIGENIA.

AT LAST FAVORABLE WINDS FILLED THE SAILS OF THE GREEK SHIPS AND THE VAST FLEET SET OUT ACROSS THE AEGEAN. THERE WERE MORE THAN A THOUSAND SHIPS, EACH BEARING A HUNDRED MEN.

THE GREEKS SPED ACROSS THE SEA AND SOON LANDED ON THE SHORE OF ASIA MINOR NEAR TROY. THEY HAD HOPED TO TAKE THEIR FOES BY SURPRISE, BUT THE TROJANS HAD BEEN WARNED OF THEIR COMING.

TROY WAS STRONGLY FORTIFIED AND WELL PROVISIONED. WHEN THE INVADING FLEET WAS SIGHTED, THE ALARM WAS SOUNDED AND ALL THE TROJANS FLED INTO THE CITY.

FROM THE SECURITY OF THEIR STOUT WALLS THE TROJANS HURLED DOWN DERISIVE DEFIANCE AT THE GREEKS.

© 1935, J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

FINDING TROY COULD NOT BE TAKEN BY STORM, THE GREEKS ENCAMPED AROUND THE CITY AND SETTLED DOWN FOR A LONG SIEGE.

Amazing Aftermaths For 2 Romantic Girl HITCH-HIKERS A Millionaire Debutante An Adventurous "Hello Girl"!

"Going My Way, Mister?" They Cried—and Got Knights of the Road as Husbands: Evelyn's Gold Mine Crashed, But Virginia Is Still Happy, Though Laid Up in the Hospital

DETERMINED THUMB AND CHIN

Virginia Gates McCafferty, Looking So Wistful Above, Deserted Pink Teas for the West and a He-Man of the Open Road.

END OF THE TRAIL

See How Happy Evelyn Walcher Was When Snapped Outside the Courtroom Where She Was Freed from Her Sometimes-Goldminer Husband.

YOUTH. A midday sun. Dust on your shoes. A whistle on your lips. Knapsack swinging. Heart pounding. And a stalwart man trudging beside you down the Open Road.

What more could romantic girlhood ask than this?

Evelyn Winant Walcher and Virginia Ewing Gates McCafferty, two hitch-hiking young ladies of different backgrounds but similar tastes, wanted nothing more when they set forth, modern pilgrims in search of adventure. They found plenty. They found all that was in the book and more besides — they found husbands. Both met and married Knights of the Open Road.

Later, by coincidence, each girl asked her father for $250—one in order to get home to papa, the other to finance domesticity in California. But that was later.

Evelyn and Virginia did not know each other. Evelyn was a New York telephone operator and Virginia a wealthy Philadelphia debutante and heiress, daughter of a university president. Evelyn found the Open Road strewn with thistles, while Virginia found roses of ecstasy, albeit they were roses with thorns.

But both girls started out with hopes as high as the mountain peaks that towered around them in the country known as God's.

Evelyn began hiking from Littleton, Col., where she had gone with her 19-year-old brother, Theodore, on a photograph-soliciting jaunt. She set out, made her way to Idaho Springs—and there she met rugged Nestor Walcher, 40-year-old wandering gold miner.

Their paths lay side by side. The Open Road bred rapid romance. They were man and wife within a few days after they met.

And now the two started out to cross the Arizona desert on foot. It was midwinter. Puckered lips stiffened. Caressing fingertips froze. Feet became cakes of ice, while the honeymooners sat on tin cans by the side of the road, waiting for passing autoists to take pity on them.

It was one thing to sing—"where the winds blow free!" and quite another, Evelyn discovered, to feel the real wind in the marrow of your bones!

Evelyn arrived in Los Angeles on the verge of a nervous and physical breakdown. Aimee Semple McPherson, the Four Square Gospel Evangelist, took her in; she was even allowed to sit in Aimee's personal lounging chair.

"It cost $1,000, so you can imagine how comfortable that chair must have been," explained Evelyn naively. "Aimee fed me and brought me books to read. Why, I felt just like a queen."

A short-lived feeling for Evelyn! She went into a hospital and was practically unconscious for fifteen days. When she recovered, she and Nestor went home to Papa Winant.

Papa tried to find Nestor a position with the telephone company. But imagine his surprise when he learned Evelyn's gallant knight could not write well enough to fill out an application blank!

Back to the road for Evelyn and Nestor. They got as far as Boulder, Col., this time and worked for their keep for some of Nestor's relatives who kept bees and raised beets. Nestor got a job in a gold mine, just to keep his professional standing, but after two weeks of it he quit.

"I don't think he liked to work much," remarked Evelyn. "We lived in 12 or 15 different houses because he would not pay rent. I became sick again, and finally the hospital put me out because he wouldn't pay the bills."

So, disillusioned Evelyn went home to Papa again; this time alone. She has never seen Nestor since, she says, but his bills keep coming to her, bills from all over the country. She told of those bills, and the rest of it, when she obtained a New Jersey divorce.

"He never even bought me a pair of stockings during the whole time we were married," summed up Evelyn.

But Virginia McCafferty had a different story to tell. She said her boxer-wrestler-taxicab-driver - hitch-hiker-husband is "You bet!" a good provider. He has not been employed yet, at latest advices, but he is jack of all trades. Papa Gates, who is President of the University of Pennsylvania, sent $250 as a parental blessing, with promises of a monthly allowance.

The start of Virginia's romance created a furor. Virginia disappeared from a dude ranch at Cora, near, near Pinedale, Wyoming, where she had been staying. Dad set the Federal agents looking for her, a tall, athletic girl in black sombrero, white corduroy slacks, a man's shirt and leather moccasins with rubber soles. Nothing about her revealed she was an heiress. Just another hitch-hiker with a determination, inherited from her father, to do what she wanted to do, regardless of opposition.

It came naturally to her. Dr. Gates, you may recall, was the capitalist who resigned from the powerful financial houses of J. P. Morgan and Company and Drexel and Company, to become an educator. He explained: "I realize that, to many men, what I am doing would seem a very foolish thing. But it does not seem so to me. I feel very fortunate. I am going to be able to do the kind of work in which I am most interested."

Virginia followed her bent, too. She never had liked the social game to which she was born. She went West to avoid it.

She liked outdoor life, riding horseback, not getting dressed up for tea and dinner and dancing. But that palled too, and feeling adventure come one day, she set out alone on the Open Road. She had $20, her health and youth, and complete anonymity.

"I liked hitch-hiking," she said later. "I never suffered any undue hardships. I was not compelled to sleep in the open and I never went hungry."

Dan McCafferty was out hiking it alone, too. They met and teamed up. And they were married in Moscow, Idaho. Just before the ceremony, Virginia told him who she was. She had some trepidation confessing the extent of her social connections and her father's fortune. But after the first shock Dan laughed about it with her. It made no difference to either of them.

Then the lost became found, for Virginia notified Dad. Dr. Gates sent the rescue-fund, asked for details, and Virginia, in an interview, shyly said: "Just say we met at a rodeo dance in Pinedale a year ago."

The couple promptly gave up hitch-hiking after the wedding. But they may go back to it again, for their first experiment in motoring proved rather disastrous.

Spending some of Dad's $250 for a second-hand car, they started out blithely for California. Danny planned to get work in the Imperial Valley; whether as a boxer, wrestler, taxicab driver, mechanic or vegetable field worker he did not say. They had picked up en route Danny's brother, Joe, and a pal named Gordon Bennett. Just four buddies, traveling in style.

Then, in the dark, they collided head-on with another car; a seven-year-old girl was killed; everyone was injured. Virginia and her husband ended up in a Sacramento Hospital, where they were confined for many weeks.

Trouble did not blight their romance, though. Indeed, as the two lay on adjacent hospital cots getting over their injuries, they were heard planning new hikes together along the Open Road.

SUNBURN TRICKED THE JUDGES INTO CROWNING HER GYPSY QUEEN

Gorgeously Arrayed Like This, Margit Symo Was Voted Prettiest Gypsy.

These Real Gypsy Girls in Granada Couldn't Hold a Candle to the Hungarian Flapper.

"I Can Be Modern," Says Margit, Now a Movie Star in Germany, All Because of Her Prank.

MARGIT SYMO started on that Spanish cruise with adventurous thoughts: moonlight nights, glamorous scenes, music and laughter. Surely from these would come romance!

While she dreamed in the daytime, the tropical sun bathed her lovely face in warmth. Bit by bit, her fair complexion darkened, until finally she was nicknamed "Little Gypsy" by fellow passengers, she was so dark.

Her mother and father were happy, because she was so well. They were proud of the beauty her sunburned skin set off so strikingly.

Granada—and the party went ashore to a dinner in their honor. Margit sat next to a young Spaniard, Jose Cartos, whose admiring glances made her feel her adventure was about to begin. But she did not dream how near it was, nor what its nature would be.

"How would you like to go to the Gypsy Girl's Beauty Contest tomorrow night?" whispered the Spanish youth.

Margit said she'd love it.

"Would you like to enter?" suggested Senor Cartos.

"Sure," said Margit.

Next night she slipped away from her parents and the other tourists, put on borrowed clothes Jose had brought, and appeared with dozens of actual Gypsies on the ballroom floor, when her parents entered. At first her parents were angry—then they saw the judges hand Margit a card—and finally saw her receive a silver-framed mirror, first prize for Gypsy beauty.

She confessed then that her color was not natural, but she kept her title: Queen of Granada Gypsies. The Spaniards took it as a good joke on the part of the little girl from Budapest.

Imagine Margit's surprise when, some weeks later, back in Hungary, she received a letter from a film producer in Berlin, asking her to accept the leading part in a new picture to be called "Gypsy Blood."

She is in Berlin now, working on the picture; lucky to be able to speak German and look Spanish. And she is still receiving daily letters with Spanish stamps—from the admiring cause of all her good fortune.
